

COUNTY AND CITY LOCALS

Mrs. F. E. Pursifull has returned from Juneau and Skagway, Alaska. W. J. Leach, father of Mrs. William Krassig, is a guest at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Krassig. He is an Oregon pioneer, having come to this state, across the plains, in 1852, when he was two years of age. Mr. Leach is the owner of fine wheat lands in eastern Oregon.

H. Thiessen, president of the Oregon Jersey Breeders' association, returning from the farmers' week course at the O. A. C., was in Oregon City on Sunday. Mr. Thiessen, who owns a fine ranch out from Milwaukie, was much pleased with the instruction at the state college.

Albert Schoth, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Schoth, has returned to his studies at Corvallis after spending the holidays with his parents in this city.

Neal & McClatchie make a specialty of repairing watches, clocks or anything pertaining to the jewelry business.

Miss Evangeline and Everett Dye, who spent the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dye, have returned to Corvallis to resume their courses at the Oregon Agricultural college.

Miss Florence White, formerly connected with the Courier, is another student who has returned to Corvallis. Miss White spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. White.

Mrs. Della January and daughter, Gladys, have returned from an extended sojourn in southern Oregon, where they were on account of the health of Miss Gladys.

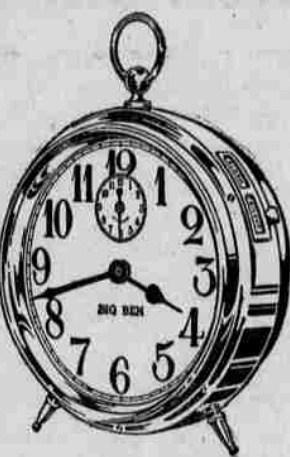

J. W. Smith, prominent Redland farmer, was an Oregon City visitor Saturday.

Miss M. Schoelheimer, milliner at Bannan & Co.'s store in this city, is spending some time in San Francisco during the dull season in the millinery business. Miss Schoelheimer will return in a month or so, but not before enjoying a motor trip with friends from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Mobley, the former connected with the Bank of Commerce, are pleasantly domiciled in the Cochran cottage on Center street.

Optometry means eye service. Mrs. Barnard Kemp, niece of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Latourette and a guest at the Latourette home for several days, left on Wednesday for Seattle, where she will visit for a few days before returning to her home at Spokane.

Mrs. B. A. Anderson of Maple Lane was a guest of relatives in the county seat late last week.

Worth Attention of Women

When you feel too tired to work, when dark puffs appear under your eyes, when you wake up weary, with backache or pains in sides and loins, when muscles and bones ache, when you suffer rheumatic twinges, when lumbago puts you down, then you know the kidneys are weakened or disordered. Mrs. T. J. Bucknell, Route 1, Hardy, Neb., writes: "I am recovering from an attack of lumbago, by the aid of Foley Kidney Pills. They surely have helped me."—Jones Drug Co.

Obituaries

Mrs. Anna Wallace

Mrs. Anna Wallace, wife of God-fried Wallace, died on Sunday at the family home at the age of 75 years, after suffering a short time from pneumonia. Mr. Wallace survives in addition to three sons, John Wallace, Caldwell, Idaho; Joe Wallace, Highland; George Wallace, Broadacres, Ore. and two daughters, Mrs. Fred Hetman and Mrs. George L. Berger, Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Wallace was born on August 11, 1842, and was married to Mr. Wallace on October 2, 1866.

Washington W. Smith

Washington W. Smith, a resident of Clackamas since 1884, died at his home there on Monday afternoon at the age of 60 years. Mr. Smith was born in Monroe county, West Virginia, March 30, 1844, and had resided continuously at Clackamas since he came west. He has been a leading democrat in the Clackamas district and was a well-known member of the I. O. O. F. lodge at Clackamas and the encampment at Oregon City. The only surviving member of the immediate family is Mrs. Smith, who is at Clackamas. Funeral services were held yesterday at 2 o'clock from the Congregational church at Clackamas. Interment was in the Clackamas cemetery.

John Fromong

John Fromong, a native of Illinois, died on Monday at the home of his son, Andrew Fromong, at Willamette. Mrs. Fromong, Sr., had suffered for some time from asthma and to this complaint his death is attributed. He is survived by his son and other relatives. Mr. Fromong had lived in Clackamas county for some years and lately had made his home with his son. He was born in Illinois on April 15, 1843. Funeral services were held on Tuesday from the Roman Catholic church in this city, the Rev. Father Hillebrand officiating. The body was taken to St. Johns for burial.

Loan Law Fakers

The passage of the federal farm loan law, and the work now in progress preparatory to putting this law into operation, has naturally led some artful tricksters to try to put across various schemes for the purpose of making some easy money for themselves.

One such loan scheme is being worked in several Rocky mountain states where the farming population is sparse and neighbors far apart. These unscrupulous loan promoters claim to be working as agents to help introduce the new farm loan law. They seek out farmers, tell plausible stories, and offer to furnish a loan of $2000 if the farmer will make an advance payment of $50, but the contract must be completed or rejected without any delay. Some of these sharpers promised to have the funds ready for the applicants by January 1, 1917. The secret service of the treasury department has already arrested several of these fake loan promoters and have their eyes on others.

The secretary of the federal farm loan board wants this caution broadcast to farmers: "Under no consideration should farmers pay out any money or give any notes to agents or strangers purporting to be working in the interests of the new farm loan law."

Fortunately, our farm loan law requires the services of no unknown agents or interlopers to get the loaning machinery into operation. Neighbors or residents of any community can form a local group through which the business of the loan-making can be carried on.

Class is Entertained

The "Count on Me" class of the First M. E. church of Oregon City was delightfully entertained on Saturday evening by Asel and Hazel Taber at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Taber, Glen Echo. Thirty guests came from Oregon City and the evening was devoted to games and music. Refreshments were served by the host and hostess. Miss Minnie Case of Gladstone, teacher of the "Count on Me" class, was among those present. Other guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Guy Peterson, Maude Davis, Elva Linton, Mable Morgan, Myrtle Henderson, Frances Bowland, Lyle Yexley, Alta Russell, Esther Louther, Olive Young, Ruth Hawkins, Edith Newton, Maude Kennedy, Josephine McCormick, Dora Scouton, Florence Fromong, Winnie Smith, Harold Miller, Clyde Singletary, Glen Singletary, George Scouton, Basil McCormack, Charles Sladen, Will Thine and Fay Singletary.

Eighty-Seven Years Old

Backache, sore muscles, stiff joints, dark puffs under the eyes and bladder disorders are symptoms of diseased kidneys. H. H. Adams, Springfield, Mo., writes: "I had a very severe attack of kidney trouble. I am getting old, eighty-seven. I tried different treatments, but none did me so much good as Foley Kidney Pills. I consider it the best." Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, and quick to give good results.—Jones Drug Co.

Awards Received

The awards to Clackamas county exhibitors at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco last year have been received and are on display at the Oregon building in Portland. The diplomas and prizes will be distributed to their owners within a week or so, or as soon as the exhibit is taken down at Portland. Further notice will be given by those in charge in time to permit owners to collect their winnings.

The Guilty Man

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

I was not a tramp, but I had to become the next thing to one in a sense. With my having been ill and out of work for months, with my being penniless and seedy and discouraged, with my asking for a meal here and a bed there as I tramped the highways between London and Liverpool, no one could be blamed for sizing me up as a "professional" and treating me accordingly.

One night, in the county of Warwick, I came upon a farmer who had neither wife nor children, but was living alone on his small holding. His name was Holborne, and though gruff at first, he finally gave me a hearty supper and the privilege of passing the night in his barn. When supper was finished and he had heard my story, he offered me a pipe, and we sat at his door and smoked and chatted for an hour. It was agreed that I should turn to next morning and work with him in his fields for half a month. While we were chatting, a neighboring farmer named Saunders came up and halted for five minutes, and two others passed on the highway and saluted Holborne with a good evening. It was 10 o'clock before I went to the barn, and, being tired and sleepy, I was soon in dreamland. How long I had slept when I was awakened by the sound of voices in anger, I could not say, but I heard what seemed to be a quarrel between Holborne and another man. The voice of the other was high pitched and had a catch in it. It was not a stammer, but a sort of gasp, as if he was catching his breath. I was not fully aroused, nor did the quarrel continue long.

It was sunrise next morning when I woke and turned out. The house was only about five rods away, and after looking about to see if Holborne were in sight I moved along to the house. His dead body was on the grass before the open door. He had been struck on the head with a club and killed by a single blow. I was upset by the discovery, as you may believe. After touching his face and finding it cold I started off on the run for the nearest farmhouse, half a mile away. The farmer was milking his cow, and his wife was preparing breakfast, but they returned with me at once, and other neighbors were called, and a boy was sent off to the nearest police station. I told my story to the people, and all believed me, as why should they not when Saunders was among them? And yet when the police came their very first move was to arrest me as the murderer. A tramp had passed the night in the barn. Of course the tramp had murdered the farmer.

If you agree that the police were asses you will agree that the others were fools. No sooner was I charged with the murder than all turned against me. Saunders suddenly remembered that our conversation was heated as he came up. The two who passed by thought they heard me use threatening language. A farmer whom I had not seen at all the evening before claimed to have come near enough to the house to have heard me ask Holborne for the loan of £2. I was angered, but not frightened. I asked the police to investigate my bed on the straw, and they found it still warm. I asked them to look through the house, and they found nothing disturbed. I asked them to note that the body was cold, and the doctor who was summoned said that life had been extinct for seven or eight hours.

I was examined by a magistrate, who said I would not doubt get my just deserts, and the police made no move whatever to find another party. Even the jailer and the turnkeys chuckled over the hanging that must result. I told of having heard the quarrel, but they said I lied. I told of the arrangements made to go to work for Holborne in the morning, but they smiled in derision.

I was almost ready for the asses and the hanging when a person, whose identity I do not know to this day and who must have been moved by a spirit of fairness, sent me a lawyer and gave the lawyer money to work with. Presto change! Why, a born fool could have picked up the threads of the case and cleared me. Within six hours after I had told the lawyer of the quarrel and the man with the catch in his voice they had the murderer spotted. His name was Jamison, and the quarrel was over the lease of the farm, and the club with which he had delivered the blow, having lost his temper, but not meaning to kill, was found in his house. More than that, he broke down and made a full confession, and when the asses came on he stood in the dock in my place. Nevertheless, it setting me at liberty the judge did it grudgingly and with a warning that my crimes must sooner or later find me out, and I was scarcely clear of the courtroom when the humiliated and chagrined police overhauled me and said:

"It is just possible that you did not commit this crime, but only because somebody else got ahead of you. We know you had planned to do it and are a dangerous man to be roaming about, and if you are not outside the county by sundown you shall be run in on suspicion."

Jamison was hanged for the killing, and a long confession was left in writing over his own hand, but there were scores of people who still believed that "the tramp" had something to do in some way with that murder.

TO EXTEND CARVER LINE

Proposes Early Construction of Tracks into Highland Country

The property of the Portland & Oregon City railroad, the Stephen Carver company, was conveyed to the Security Savings & Trust company through a trust deed last week as a preliminary to the issuance of $350,000 in bonds to insure the construction of an extension to the road from Baker's Bridge, the present terminus, along the banks of Clear Creek to Highland.

Mr. Carver proposes early construction of the line, which will tap one of the richest sections of the county, and will issue bonds in denominations of $500 and $1000, to mature in 1946. The proposed construction will be about eight miles in length and, it is understood, will include, either immediately or in the near future, a branch line from Dedman station to Oregon City. A jitney permit has been requested of the city council until this branch is built.

The Carver company now operates trains over 15 miles of track, and the new construction will make about 23 miles.

FIGHT CARD GOOD

Local Boxer Meets Fate at Hands of Unknown Negro

Fight fans enjoyed a treat last Thursday night at the Masonic hall in the boxing card presented by the Falls City Athletic club. "Bill Gold, whose punch has laid many ambitious youngsters low in the past year, fought a fast six rounds to a draw with Carl Martin. In the comedy event Bill Maddox surprised the crowd by proving superior to "Cap" O'Donnell. Ben Borden, the Oregon City Norseman, made short work of "Kid" McLean of Portland, and after the regular card was off a burly negro, "Smoke" Lewis, who was distinctly a dark horse locally, boasted of his ability, and a purse quickly insured a fight between Lewis and Borden, with the result that Borden found much more than he could handle in the clever black man. Ping Bodie won a decision over Freddie Lowe. "Kid" Irish took honors in the bout with Martin Schultz of this city after six rounds of fast fighting.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "THE FOOLISH VIRGIN"
SELZNICK PICTURES

The disillusionment of a romantic girl who comes face to face with the realities of an unromantic world is the basis of the story of "The Foolish Virgin," the Thomas Dixon novel which has been screened for Miss Clara Kimball Young's second Selznick-Picture and which will be the attraction at the Grand theatre on Sunday and Monday, Jan. 14-15.

Mr. Dixon has international reputation as the author of some of the most stirring novels in modern literature and is particularly well known to motion picture patrons as the author of "The Clansman," from which "The Birth of a Nation" was made.

The story, "The Foolish Virgin," has been recognized as one of his best and is particularly well adapted to Miss Young's requirements. The central role is an extremely sympathetic one and the situations as they develop in the narrative are full of action and dramatic in the extreme.

"The Foolish Virgin" was directed by Albert Capellani, the famous producer who screened Miss Young's first immensely successful production as a Selznick-Picture star, "The Common Law." Conway Tearle and Paul Capellani, who played the most important male roles in "The Common Law," also head the cast of the new production, and among other well-known players who figure prominently in the photodrama are: Catherine Proctor, Sheridan Tansey, the remarkably able boy actor, William Welsh, Marie Lines, Agnes Mapes, Edward Elkas, and little Jacqueline Morhange.
