CARTLIDGES ANSWER

School Squabble Has Feature Added in Judge Campbell's Court

Echoes of the famous squabble in the Oregon City high school were heard here on Monday when Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cartledge filed an amended answer to the $20,000 damage suit complaint of Superintendent P. J. Toose. They presented a series of newspaper articles giving the history of the school trouble to show that there had been a condition that needed investigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Cartledge were the authors of bulletin No. 1, circulated here early last spring, in which Mr. Toose was accused. In the document filed Monday Mr. and Mrs. Cartledge say that each and every statement in this bulletin is true in substance and fact. They do not directly charge Mr. Toose with writing anonymous letters to heads of other schools. They say that several prominent Oregon City men, including a member of the school board, urged the publication of bulletin No. 1, which resulted in the $20,000 damage action against them.

Several Clackamas county newspaper men will join with others from all parts of the state at a meeting to be held at Salem under the auspices of the Oregon State Editorial association and as guests of the Salem Commercial club, it was announced yesterday by Phil S. Bates of Portland, secretary of the association. The meeting is to be held on January 19, and a number of important bills in connection with the printing and newspaper business will be taken up with the state legislature in session now. The association is interested, says Mr. Bates, in securing the proper legislation for the newspaper fraternity of the state. Many editors have already agreed to attend the meeting.

The Oregon City Courier and the Oregon Daily Journal (except Sunday) for $4.75.

MAIL ROUTES CHANGED

Changes in rural mail routes from Oregon City have been announced by Postmaster J. J. Cooke. "For the good of the service," is the reason for the changes, the postmaster says. Oregon City route 4 will be discontinued and service given from a route out of Hoff, a Willamette Valley Southern station. Oregon City route 7 will be known after February 1 as route 4. The change will give mail service on the present route 4 much earlier in the day, and will help relieve congestion in the local office. Clackamas, Beaver Creek and Highland are chiefly benefited by the proposed change, which takes effect February 1.

RIDING ON BUBBLES OF AIR

Motoring Would Be Ideal If Tires Could Be Made Thinner.

In the whole mechanism of modern transportation there is nothing so paradoxical, nothing so daring in conception as these bubbles of air which we call tires. They are at once strangely nonsensical and strangely practical—nonsensical because they must endure great strains and yet are necessarily made of unendurable material; practical because nothing can match air as a shock absorber. From all the tales we hear of tire costs and tire repairs, let it not be forgotten that motoring as we know it became possible because of the art of riding on bubbles of air had been discovered.

What happens when the old fashioned iron tired, wooden buggy wheel strikes a small stone in the road? It simply rises and the entire load resting on the wheel is lifted. There is loss of power—more work for the horse, for whenever you or a horse lifts a weight energy must be expended. What happens when an air tube strikes a stone? The tube is simply punched in, as it were, momentarily. The wheel need not be lifted over the obstruction. In order to secure this extraordinary result the air must have a chance to compress. If it were possible to build a tire with a wall as thin as a soap bubble's and yet so tough and elastic that it would both yield to blows and resist punctures and blowouts the ideal would be attained. One of the hardest technical tasks ever set was that of demanding from the rubber industry a tube which would hold air and which would also be resilient.

Air tires serve not only to make motoring luxuriously comfortable, but to protect the car itself. Were it not for their engines would not perform their work so efficiently; gasoline would not be so economically consumed; high speed would be unobtainable; steering would not be so easy; shock would not be completely absorbed.—Waldemar Kaempffert in McClure's Magazine.

Three Divorces Granted

Judge Campbell has been asked to sign a divorce decree for Maud M. DaMotta separating her from Elmer R. DaMotta, to whom she was married at Seattle, December 7, 1904, because she says he deserted her. Mrs. DaMotta wishes to resume her maiden name, Maud Hargrove, and asks that she be declared sole owner of property in Douglas county.

Three divorce decrees were signed Tuesday by Judge Campbell. They separate George K. and Janet Hall, Effie and Mark Morgan and Mabel C. and Gordon Davies. The decree granted to W. G. McDonald, in his case against Bina McDonald, on November 24 last, was vacated and set aside Tuesday upon order of Judge Campbell and on motion of Mr. McDonald, who says that the decree was taken by a mistake on the part of Mrs. McDonald.

LOST BY TIMIDITY.

An Early British Naval Failure at the Dardanelles.

GOT HIS FLEET INTO A TRAP.

Admiral Duckworth Could Have Won Had He Acted Promptly, but He Hesitated, Gave the Turks Time to Arm and Was Bombarded Back to the Sea.

The unsuccessful campaign at Gallipoli when the forces of the allied powers failed in their attempt to reach Constantinople after Turkey had arrayed herself on the side of Germany recalls the time when Sir John Duckworth sailed through the Dardanelles and then turned round and sailed out again. It was in 1807, when Napoleon was at war with more than half a world and when England had on the throne a king with an infirm brain and a ministry called that of "all the talents," which in spite of its name was wretchedly inefficient.

The French were trying to come to an understanding with the irresolute Sultan Selim, which was greatly disquieting to the czar since in view of the great victories of the "Little Corporal" in Prussia he could ill afford to spare any forces from the Russian frontier. So he asked the British to send a fleet to the sublime porte and compel Selim to make terms with Russia and England.

Accordingly Sir John Duckworth was ordered to join Admiral Louis in the Aegean sea and lead the combined fleets up the Dardanelles to the Turkish capital, where, after securing the safety of Mr. Arbuthnot, the British ambassador, he was to dictate terms to the sultan.

It is harder to sail up the Dardanelles than to sail out because there is a powerful current that flows constantly from the Black sea to the Aegean. There were no great steam cruisers then, and Sir John had to wait several days for favorable conditions. Meantime one of the largest of the ships, the Ajax, carrying seventy-four guns, unaccountably blew up, and some 250 Englishmen were killed.

On a February morning in 1807, however, seven battleships sailed into the mouth of the ancient Hellespont and bore their way up the strait. They encountered only a light and ineffectual fire from the forts. There was no effective preparation for defensive action on either the European or Asiatic side from the mouth of the Dardanelles to the city of Constantinople.

Had Sir John given the sultan a twenty-four hour ultimatum and trained his guns on the citadel he need not have fired a shot. He would have accomplished the purpose for which he had come and could have sailed out with his ships unharmed and himself covered with glory. But he was seized with timidity and began unaccountably to negotiate and temporize.

General Sebastiani, the clever agent of Napoleon at the sultan's court, encouraged Duckworth's irresolution and led him on from day to day with specious promises.

Meanwhile men, women and children, Christians and Mohammedans, were working day and night to erect suitable defenses along the famous waterway, until in no long time the whole shore, as well as the forts of the Dardanelles, was bristling with guns. Duckworth's opportunity had passed. He had made the fatal mistake of giving the Turks time to find their leader.

For two weeks the parleys went on, while the fleet's officers through their glasses could see the constant arrival of cannon, ammunition and troops. At last Sir John awoke to the fact that he was in a trap and had barely time to get out. Fortunately the wind was in his favor, and the seven battleships began their ignominious retreat.

What a contrast between the coming in and the going out!

For sixty miles they ran the gauntlet of a continual and heavy fire. It was incessant and galling in the sea of Marmora, and in the Dardanelles it was terrific. There stone balls, weighing 700 and 800 pounds, snapped the rigging, broke down the masts and crushed in the decks. The roll of the artillery was deafening, and the smoke hung over everything in dark, impenetrable folds.

The humiliated admiral could do nothing but run, and as the current was with him he finally reached the Aegean sea, although with a badly battered fleet.

It has always seemed curious to the reader of history that Duckworth escaped the fate of Admiral Byng, who was court-martialed and shot fifty years before for just such another lamentable error of judgment. The only explanation appears to be that this was a time of such multiplied fears and panics that even so serious a matter as this was soon forgotten in the more absorbing and important problem of national defense against the designs of Napoleon.—Youth's Companion.

Cleopatra.

Cleopatra means "fame of her father." It was once very common among the royal ladies of Egypt and Greece and survives in the French Cleo. Cleopatra was born in Alexandria 59 B. C. and died at the age of thirty-nine not by applying a poisonous asp to her bosom, but by swallowing some secret poison.

Life, upon the whole, is far more pleasurable than painful; otherwise we would not feel pain so impatiently when it comes.—Leigh Hunt.

CHARLES HOLMES DIES

Young Tar Passes Away at Peking, China. Pneumonia the Cause

Charles Alan Holmes, nephew of Mrs. Daniel O'Neill of Rose Farm and for many years a member of the O'Neill family here, died at Peking, China, from pneumonia, according to word received by Mrs. O'Neill on Tuesday. The body of the young man is being shipped to Spokane, Wash., for burial. Mrs. Edward Holmes, the young man's mother, and Mrs. Fred Martin, sister, live in Spokane. William Holmes, a brother, lives in Montana. His aunt here is one of the nearest surviving kin. Mr. Holmes had made his home with Mrs. O'Neill at Rose Farm since he was 14 years old. He was a graduate of the Mount Pleasant grammar school and of the Oregon City high school.

In September, 1915, Charles Holmes enlisted in the United States navy and it was his duty as a sailor that took him to China, where he contracted the fatal disease. He was born at the custom house in Mary's island, Sitka, Alaska, in 1893, being 24 years old when he died.

GRANGE AGAINST DIVISION

C. Schuebel Addresses Oswego Meeting. Resolutions are Adopted

Clackamas county Pomona grange in session at Oswego yesterday passed resolutions in opposition to any plan to divide Clackamas county. C. Schuebel pointed out the fallacies of the proposed division, that would include Oswego, saying that the scheme would only add to the great power of Multnomah county. The proposed formation of Cascade county was also condemned in the resolutions. Pomona grange opposed the insurance code under the belief that it would hamper the state compensation act. The proposed measures to prohibit circulation of initiative petitions came in for a scolding from the grangers. The grange meeting was attended by 60 members and most of the day was spent in discussing the resolutions which were passed.

Suffered the Agony Of a Dozen Deaths

MR. F. GIFFORD

Prominent Farmer in Canada Describes His Escape from the Operating Table

In a letter to friends at Saskatoon, Mr. F. Gifford, of the Ball Rock farm, Maymont, Saskatchewan, Canada, says: "Thanks to Fruitola and Traxo I am still alive. I lay on my back for sixteen days, suffering the agonies of a dozen deaths. I began taking Fruitola and was relieved of a great many gall stones. My health is now fully restored."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus Laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in Oregon City, Portland, Canby and Hubbard at the Huntley Bros. Co.'s drug store; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil and acts as an intestinal lubricant and disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, discharging the accumulated waste to the sufferer's intense relief. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alternative that is most effective to rebuild and restore the weakened, rundown system. A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Ill.

Molalla Inspects Roads

Several Molalla citizens accompanied the Clackamas county court yesterday upon a tour of inspection of the county's hard surfaced and bituminous roads with the idea of getting information that can be used when the improvement of Molalla streets is taken up. The visiting delegation comprised Leslie Shank, E. L. Palfred, Dr. J. W. Thomas and C. Erman.
