THE FASHIONS

The black-and-white combination is one of the very strong notes from Paris just at this time. Even while some bright colors are being shown, black and white come to the front again. White Georgette and black satin are chosen very often to carry out this effect, and while it is not looked upon in the light of a real novelty, it is so entirely pleasing that its acceptance goes without saying. Dresses of white Georgette are sometimes made with a deep band of black satin at the lower edge of the skirt. As in the accompanying sketch, there are often additional touches of black about the dress, for instance on the belt and sleeves and the trimming on the front of the waist. Silver thread embroidery in the popular darning-stitch enriches some of these frocks. In others, bead work is used. As an example of this last, white Georgette crepe elaborately worked with beads forms the upper part and sleeves of a black satin dress. Separate skirts of black satin are also worn with white Georgette blouses made in Russian style.

Russian styles still keep at the height of popularity. When they are worn with suits they appear in any of the varying lengths, from the short hip length to below the knee. A striking black satin dress recently seen was made with a slip-on Russian blouse of medium length over a very full pleated skirt. The lower part of the blouse was richly embroidered in silk with Japanese embroidery in the cherry-blossom design. The embroidery was in white and pale green.

The return to the black-and-white combination, a very effective waist of white crepe was trimmed with black crepe collar, cuffs and revers and, in addition, black beads. The lighter shades which are again returning to favor are putty, sand and beige. Rose-colored beads in deep and lighter shades trim a sand-colored waist very effectively.

Pleated Skirts and Panels

Pleated skirts, though still requiring a liberal amount of material in the fashioning of them are made to hang quite straight. Some charming effects are seen where striped material is employed. In a purple-and-black striped fabric, the purple stripe is arranged beneath the pleat, so that to all intents and purposes the skirt appears to be black, but in walking the colored stripes show. This arrangement of pleats in striped materials is seen in striped fabrics of all colors.

Panel effects are still considered very good style for they preserve the straight lines at which fashion aims. Here and there, however, exaggerated ed pockets break the monotony of the straight lines and stand out at the hips. Draped effects in some afternoon and many evening gowns also show that in some instances there is a tendency to break away from the very straight lines.

Tassels of silk, wool or beads as well as buttons, form the decoration for dresses of a simpler and more tailored type. The apron string belts on the chemise dresses are usually finished with tassels, and frock with the loose floating panels are weighted at the ends with tassels on either side.

Pleats and Panels Follow the Straight Lines

Colored trimming on white crepe and lace waists is another new trimming which has appeared of late. Ribbons with two or more colors give very dainty effects on these waists.

Midseason Hats

Now that the midseason is here hats of velvet are giving place to those of satin and silk. Figured silks are used for some smart, colorful hats, while crepe is another material favored by the milliners. Combinations of straw and satin are likely to be very popular also. Black straw formed the tiny brim and the lower part of a very high crown of a chic hat. The top of the crown and the upper part was of blue satin. Medium size brims on rather drooping lines are also noted. A hat of crepe was trimmed with three rows of pleated ribbon at the top of the crown with a beaded ornament in front.

The veil is still the faithful companion of the hat. Embroidered veils are even more popular than the plain ones, and the flowing veils more favored than other styles. Some of the flowing veils are worn very short.

Mrs. Hefflin is Saved From Operating Table

MRS. CARRIE HEFLIN

In her gratitude for a remedy that saved her from the possible necessity for an operation, Mrs. Carrie Hefflin, of Coats, Kans., writes: "Had it not been for Fruitola and Traxo I might have been on the operating table by now. It relieved me of at least one hundred and fifty gall stones. It surely does work wonders. My brother also had suffered for years and has been greatly benefited by Fruitola and Traxo."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in Oregon City, Portland, Canby and Hubbard at the Huntley Bros. Company's drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant and disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, discharging the accumulated waste to the sufferer's intense relief. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alternative that is most effective to rebuild and restore the weakened, rundown system.

A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Illinois.

SHEEP PROTECTED

Mongrel Range Dogs May be Licensed by Jones Bill

Sheepraisers of Oregon west of the Cascade mountains are to be protected from dogs under the provisions of a bill soon to be introduced in the legislature by W. Al Jones of Marion county.

Mongrel dogs have slaughtered so many sheep, particularly in the Willamette valley, in recent years that many small sheepraisers have gone out of business. Jones himself lost 11 blooded ewes last winter, a monetary loss of at least $500. The new bill will continue the liability of the owner of the dog for the damage, but it will provide a license system by which the counties can control the dog menace. Mongrel dogs owned by people and hunting dogs brought from the city are the worst offenders, says Jones.
