Oregon City's Council developed a brand new set of "insurgents" Wednesday night, when the first regular August meeting was held. The session went along smoothly during the routine reading of reports, even the finance committee's recommendation failing to stir up a ripple. The prospects of a dull session were excellent, in fact, until after nine o'clock; but with the sounding of the curfew bell things began to transpire.

A resolution to improve Tenth street, from Jackson to J. Q. Adams street, at an estimated cost of $1083.56 brought on the first fuss. Mr. Templeton remarked that when the property owners asked for the improvement the street committee had said it would recommend it only if the property owners signed and agreed to pay the whole cost of the work. Such an agreement had not been presented, and Mr. Templeton urged that the resolution be tabled.

City Attorney Schuebel informed Mr. Templeton that such an agreement would be worthless, as the charter provided that the city could only assess 50 per cent of the valuation of the property for street improvements. If the city desired the property owners to pay for the work, said Mr. Schuebel, they should order the improvement at the property owners' expense. So said the charter.

"That confounded charter ought to be buried up," said Mr. Templeton. Councilman Albright supported Mr. Templeton, and said that he believed that all the property owners ought to sign for the improvement, so there could be no "come back" later on. One of the property owners, E. H. Cooper, addressed the council on the matter, and said that he had been trying to get the thing straightened out for several weeks, and assured the council that the property would stand the cost. In spite of this, Mr. Templeton moved that action on the matter be delayed "until more definite information was forthcoming from the property owners," and the motion carried.

An ordinance declaring the grade of this block of Tenth street met sudden death at the same hands.

A petition of the Hawley interests asking for the vacation of an alley in block 2 came up with the approval of the street committee tacked on to it. Mr. Albright wanted to know why all property owners concerned in the block should not sign the petition, and moved that the matter be held up until they did.

Metzner assured the council that "everybody was satisfied." Mr. Albright said he was from Missouri and wanted to be shown, just as Templeton had felt in the matter of Tenth street, and Hackett and VanAuken supported him. To save the plans for the vacation of the alley from defeat, Mr. Templeton moved that the matter be re-referred to the street committee.

An ordinance declaring the life of Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth and Ninth streets, from the railroad to the river, to expire on September 1st of this year was read the first time, and will come up for final passage on Friday the thirteenth, in spite of the "unluckiness" of the day. The purpose of this ordinance is to give the city a chance to order some of these downtown streets to be improved with hard surface by the Worswick company at the expense of the property owners.

The real fireworks of the evening were set off by the so-called "junk ordinance," which provided that all second-hand dealers keep a record of property purchased, hold property for five days, and be subject to a fine of from $10 to $100 or imprisonment for a period up to 60 days for violations of its provisions. In support of the ordinance Mr. Meyer told a sad story of having once owned a launch, from which was stolen a brass oil-cup which he never recovered. Had the ordinance been in force, said Mr. Meyer, he would doubtless have found his brass oil-cup in some second-hand store.

Before tears could be shed over Mr. Meyer's brass oil-cup, Councilman Albright got a verbal battery of 42-centimeter guns into play.

"Gentlemen, this is the most radical and rotten ordinance that has ever been proposed in this council," he said. "It is another of those 'company ordinances.' About this launch stuff—anybody who has got money enough to keep a launch on the river ought to be able to keep a house to lock it up in, so that stuff wouldn't be stolen. To make these second-hand dealers keep stuff they buy on

HIST! ALSO HA!

Great Discovery Made! Deep and Dark Mystery Solved

Mr. Wilson, who works in the sheriff's office with Mr. Hackett, has admitted—according to the Enterprise—that Edward Ramsey, alias Fred Alexander, "is being held in the county jail until further investigation into the murder of Edward Hill, his wife and two step-children, at Ardenwald, June, 1911, is completed."

Mr. Wilson, who works in the sheriff's office with Mr. Hackett, also further admits, according to the Enterprise "the arrest was made at the request of George A. Thatcher, Portland criminologist."

Thatcher is said to have "been working steadily on the case since early in the year." Also "Thatcher has told local officials that he has conclusive evidence which will connect Alexander with the Hill murders but he has not turned over the details of his evidence to Clackamas county officials."

As the Courier recalls it this is the third time since the horrible Ardenwald crime that this Thatcher party has "had conclusive evidence" in regard to the worst murder ever committed in this county. Thatcher is a private detective, but owing to the unpleasant things sometimes said about private "dicks," Thatcher prefers to be called a "criminologist."

Mr. Wilson seems to be quite impressed with the case against Ramsey, the details of which have not yet been turned over to local officials. So impressed is he that early in the week he permitted two people from McMinnville to "identify" Ramsey as a man who had been seen about Ardenwald at the time of the crime. Mr. Wilson, who works in the sheriff's office with Mr. Hackett, isn't sure whom these people are, but he told the Enterprise that he "thought" their name was "Evans." The Enterprise supplied the initials "J. L."

Far be it from the Courier to criticize unduly the actions of Mr. Wilson but it does seem that the Hill murder is too serious a matter for monkey-shines inspired by a notoriety seeking "criminologist." And if Mr. Wilson takes the matter seriously, it seems that the names of witnesses ought to be important enough to remember.

And, considering the Hill murders as the most shocking crimes committed in this county, and further considering that the best detective talent of the Northwest was engaged in investigating them, it seems a travesty on justice to hold at this late day "for investigation" a man who was once before "investigated" by real criminologists who knew more about their business than Mr. Wilson and this Thatcher party rolled into one—and then turned out as being implicated in no way in the tragedy.

Ramsey may be mentally deficient, he may have annoyed little girls, he may have at one time been a fit subject for the insane asylum—but there is not the slightest thing in the world to connect him with the Ardenwald murders—not even the desire of an unfortunate public official to make political capital out of his arrest.

METALS FALL OFF

Oregon Production Less in 1914 Than in Previous Year

The value of the gold, silver, copper, and lead produced at mines in Oregon in 1914, according to Charles G. Yale, of the United States Geological Survey, was $1,676,153, compared with $1,746,142 in 1913 and $849,885, in 1912, and a decrease of $70,249 from the value in 1914. There was a decrease in the output of all metals in 1914 and also in the number of producing mines.

The gold output in 1914 decreased 2.2 per cent. The decrease in the gold output was $1.60 per cent of the total decrease in value of all metals produced in the state in 1914 as compared with 1913.

The gold production was $1,591,461, of which $1,043,144 came from deep mines and $548,317 from placers.

The decrease of gold from deep mines was $139,938, and the increase from the placers was $97,689. Only one dredge was in operation, but the gold dredge far exceeded the combined yield of all other forms of placer mining in the state. In 1914 there were in operation in Oregon 56 productive hydraulic mines, 6 drift mines and 15 surface placers (including a dredge), 77 in all, a decrease of 51.

SCICILIAN MEETS CHIEF

Acquaintance Causes Him to Spend Eight Dollars in City

Neff Hassen, who says his home was originally in Sicily, wandered in to Oregon City with a bunch of laces and doilies in a suit case Tuesday and started peddling, without first having taken out a license. The ever watchful eyes of Chief of Police Shaw spied him, and the burly police boss overhauled the visitor and asked him what he was doing. Neff remarked that he was going to see a friend, and that he was going to see a friend, and he hoped the police would saw his skull in two across his eyes.

This somehow failed to impress the chief, and he took Neff to the city jail, where Recorder Loder was summoned. At the hearing Neff admitted that he was peddling without a license, paid a five dollar fine, and then paid three dollars more for an itinerant merchant's license.

DEALERS MUST OBEY NEW LAW

WOOD, COAL AND ICE ARE TO BE SOLD ONLY BY DEFINITE
NITE MEASURE

FUEL BY "LOAD" IS ILLEGAL

Warning Issued to Local Merchants, and Prosecutions Will Follow
Failure to Heed Rules

Hereafter the man who sells alabaster or cordwood by the "load" will be in danger of getting into trouble. Likewise the man who sells "a dime's worth of ice," or a "bag of coal," Wood must be sold by the cord or fraction thereof, and ice and coal must be sold by weight.

This has been ordered by Thomas B. Kay, state sealer of weights and measures, and all district sealers have been asked to see that the ruling of Mr. Kay is enforced to the letter. It is the aim of the state to stop considerable "short measure dealing" which has been going on, and of which many complaints have been received.

When wood, coal or ice is delivered, according to instructions received from Salem by District Sealer A. E. Ball, of the county seat, a statement of the quantity must be given the purchaser. This statement must be either in writing or oral; but it must be definite and unambiguous. For instance, a wagon holding three-quarters of a cord of millwood may be properly billed as 98 cubic feet of wood, or as three-quarters of a cord. It must not be billed merely as "one load of wood."

Coal and ice must be sold and billed by weight. The law in this matter is mandatory, and after due warning has been given to dealers, any violation will be subject for prosecution.

As this is the season of the year when many families put in their supply of winter fuel, and as in the past many complaints have been made in regard to short measure, it is felt that the public should be generally familiarized with the requirements of the statutes. Dealers delivering wood have in the past been the chief cause of complaint; and it should be remembered that any fuel merchant, in delivering cordwood, should stack it in front of the premises of the buyer, and not dump it in a pile. Stacking the wood enables the purchaser to measure the amount received and check with the bill rendered; and whenever the amount does not match the amount for which a charge is made, immediate complaint should be made.

When cordwood is cut at the wood yard, of course, it is not required that it should be stacked before the home of the purchaser. But when it is delivered in long lengths, and cut by an itinerant woodswain, cordwood should always be stacked first.

District Sealer Ball is now notifying Clackamas county fuel and ice dealers of the provisions of the laws in regard to the materials in which they deal, and anticipates no trouble in this section.

YOUNG WOMAN DIES

Hubbard Girl, Bride of But a Few Weeks, Victim of Burns

Mrs. LaVerne Kriger, of Hubbard, the 17-year-old bride of L. Kriger, who was seriously burned by the explosion of a gasoline stove in her home last week, died in the Good Samaritan hospital, Portland, last Friday as a result of the injuries she sustained. Mrs. Kriger was burned about the head, face and arms by the explosion, which occurred while she was preparing a meal for her husband.

The young woman was popular in Hubbard, and many share the sorrow of her husband and mother in her death.

BIG TIME ASSURED

"Printers' Picnic at Gladstone to Be Real Gay Occasion."

Oregon City printers and some other people are going to have a picnic at Gladstone Park next Sunday, and anybody who dares to come will be welcomed.

Among the stunts will be a baseball game between the girl printers and the boy printers; and there will also be an exhibition of the most hated printer in the community, the most beloved printer, the funniest printer, and such other freaks as the trade affords. There will be enough eats to go round, some candy and a good time. Better go—if you dare.

Bids Opened Tonight

Bids for the $20,000 worth of bonds to be used in paying for the addition to the Oregon City high school, will be opened by the district school board this evening. The bonds will bear five and one-half per cent interest, and it is expected that a handsome premium will be offered for them.

LIFT PLANS READY

City Engineer Submits Plans to Council for Approval

At Wednesday evening's council meeting City Engineer Miller turned in a report upon the operation of the public elevator at Seventh street for the adoption of the council. The report embraces much research into the elevator problem, and recommends that a special main be laid direct from the receiving reservoir to the elevator, this main to be provided with an air basin and various valves to counteract the "water hammer" which it is believed the operation of the elevator may cause. Connecting up the elevator with hydraulic power so that the mechanism will be ready to run, the City Engineer estimates will cost $3,200.

The use of a separate main, Mr. Miller points out, will do away with all fear of blow-outs in the city distributing system, and will enable a heavy pressure to be turned on at the elevator any time that extra force may be needed. While the cost of the special main will increase the outlay necessary for the use of the public lift; it is pointed out that the absolute safety thus guaranteed will more than offset the extra expense.

Mr. Miller also suggests that a special fire nozzle be installed on the top of the elevator tower, similar to the "monitors" used on fire boats. This nozzle, equipped with a revolving discharge pipe, would be a great aid in fighting downtown fires, and would make it possible to pour a veritable Niagara of water on any blaze within a block's radius of the base of the tower. The fire nozzle could be operated from the direct main that is used in running the hydraulic machinery of the elevator.

MORE POLITICAL NEWS

Courier Requested to Give Facts This Time, and No More

Last week the Courier made a few remarks about local politics and the fences that some candidates were suspected of putting up. This week there wandered into the Courier office a gentleman who spoke as follows:

"Say, whatever mean by sayin' that Hackett was goin' to run for sheriff? He ain't. He's goin' to run for mayor. An' I call it a dirty frame-up, I do, when both papers here say that Andersen's the man that the council wants for mayor. Hackett don't want him for no mayor, Hackett wants Hackett. I'm a friend of his'n and I know, see."

Discussing the situation further with the gentleman, we learned that Councilman Hackett was going to run for mayor at the next municipal election if he thought there was a ghost of a chance. Mr. Hackett, our informer said, might have considered running for sheriff if he didn't know so much about the office. Careful inspection of the sheriff's office from the inside, however, has convinced Mr. Hackett that the Mayor's job is less filled with kicks. Mr. Hackett, it is understood, will run for mayor upon a platform of strict economy and saving the taxpayers' money.

RAMSEY JAILED AGAIN

Loiterer May Be Implicated in Recent "Daylight Robberies"

Edward Ramsey, otherwise known as Fred Alexander, who some years ago was jailed as a suspect in the Ardenwald case, was again taken to the toils last week, when he was picked up near Milwaukie for annoying children who were in bathing near Oak Grove. When searched at the county jail Ramsey had in his possession $142 and a quantity of broken jewelry. The man is accused of having annoyed children and girls in Milwaukie, Oak Grove, Lakewood and other north county towns.

He was arraigned before Justice Kelo at Milwaukie, and bound over. Refusing to put up bail the man was ordered to the county jail. The finding upon him of the jewelry and money makes county officers think he may have implicated in the recent "daylight robberies" and a rigid investigation of his recent doings will be made by Milwaukie and county officers.

GILBERT NELSON DIES

Former Resident in County Passes Away in Canada

Gilbert Nelson, for many years a resident of Canby, and well known to many of the older residents of the county, died two weeks ago at Youngstown, Alberta. Paralysis was the direct cause of death. A widow, five sons and two daughters mourn his loss.

Mr. Nelson, when in Canby, conducted a grocery store, and had a large group of customers.

SLANDER SUIT FILED

Mrs. Grace E. Brown Asks Damages From C. Bingham and W. Spidell

Alleging that Charles Bingham and William Spidell grossly slandered her before Jessie, Edna, Charles and George Harris and D. O. Worthington, Mrs. Grace E. Brown, of Oak Grove, has filed suit for slander in the circuit court, and asks $10,000 damages. The alleged slanderous remarks were made, she says, on July 24, this year. The case concerns Oak Grove people, and it is said to be the outcome of a community row.

CHURCHES PLAN MORE ACTIVITY

OREGON CITY PASTORS LEAD

International Conference at Eugene
Realizes Need of Aid for Smaller Parishes

Resolutions drafted by the Rev. T. B. Ford, of Oregon City, were adopted last week at Eugene at the close of the third interdenominational conference of ministers; and these resolutions call for the establishment of a state board which will look after the interest of the church in small communities. There are many towns and settlements in the Willamette valley—and in the entire state for that matter—where there is not a sufficient number of people to support more than one church; yet where denominational differences heretofore have prevented the holding of regular church services. Realizing this, it was the purpose of the ministers, as expressed at Eugene, to provide some central body which would undertake to aid these communities, and make possible the establishment of a church that would fill the needs of all in the district, regardless of their denominational differences.

To solve this problem of the church in the small community, and also to advance a spirit of co-operation between all churches, and between the churches and other educational influences in the state, the ministers determined that the organization of a state wide board, founded on broad lines, was needed. Such a board is advocated in the resolutions. The work aimed to be done, and the gap to be filled in country life, are best shown by the resolutions themselves, which read as follows:

Whereas: We as Christians, citizens, ministers, and teachers, are called upon to face and to solve, with the cooperation of the people, the many social problems of our advancing civilization arising in the changing social order, in urban and rural life, and

Whereas: The varied and varying problems cannot be solved in a satisfactory adjustment of complicated relations and interests by religion and education, the church or the school, alone, and

Whereas: The church and the state are alike interested in and responsible for the development of a citizenship embodying the best results of religion and education, in intelligence and morality, therefore be it resolved:

First: That we appreciate the importance of the relation of the churches and education in the betterment of the individual family and community life of our state;

Second: That we welcome with profound satisfaction the new movement under the auspices of the University of Oregon to bring together these forces and agencies in closer cooperative relations, and thank President Campbell and his associates for the interest shown in this work and the forward step taken;

Third: That we are under special obligation to Dr. Joseph Schafer, head of the work of the Interdenominational Conference, and arranging the program; and to Dr. Douglas, Professor Brickner, and Dr. Morse for their instructive and inspirational addresses on themes intimately related to our work—particularly in the country village and smaller towns; and to those professors in the summer school whose classes have been open to the members of the conference.

Fourth: That we approve the plan proposed by Professor Alderman, and endorsed by the State Teachers and Sunday School Associations of giving credits in the public schools for Bible study carried on in the Sunday schools and we pledge our cooperation in the promotion of this plan;

Fifth: That under the present conditions in Oregon it is probable that the better rural conditions must be worked out from the village center, and urge all community leaders, teachers, ministers, editors and business organizations to cooperate in carrying out this plan. In this connection we urge good roads, public markets and other conveniences for farmers, and we favor the enactment of a law of incorporated villages and towns;

Sixth: That these annual conferences may become most effective in their results we recommend that a committee be appointed representing the participating churches to cooperate with the University in their promotion, and propose the following named persons to constitute the committee for the ensuing year: Dr. der, (Christian).

Seventh: That we ask each denomination to appoint a delegate to form a state interdenominational commission to consider the whole field of country life and church work, and this commission to secure, through

TO TEST RIGHTS

City and Power Company to Go to Court in Friendly Suit

To determine the real ownership of a triangular bit of land at the southerly end of Main street, the city and the Portland, Railway Light & Power company will shortly enter into a friendly suit in the circuit court. Former City Recorder Stipp, at the orders of the council, looked this matter up some years ago, and rendered an opinion in which he said that the city not only owned the land, but had valuable water rights as well in connection with it, and even went so far as to say that the city had sufficient water rights to operate a municipal light and power plant. From time to time the council has showed signs of being interested in this matter. Some months ago the present council asked City Attorney Christian Schuebel to bring the matter to a show-down of some sort; and it is in furtherance of this plan that the friendly suit will be instituted. Mr. Schuebel and the attorneys of the electric company have agreed upon a basis of action, and as soon as the required papers can be drawn the matter will be taken into court.

If the opinion of Livy Stipp is correct—and many people are of the opinion that it is—the "friendliness" of the suit may soon disappear. If the circuit court gives the city title to the land and to the water rights, it is expected that the power company will appeal to a higher court, and will spare no expense to keep the city from developing such water power as may be declared belonging to it. Some of the mills at the southern end of the city will also be affected by the outcome of the suit; and a legal "battle royal" is apt to develop from the test of ownership.

SOME APPRECIATION

Canby Herald Speaks of Col. Hofer in Glowing Terms

Last week the Canby Herald paid its respects to Col. E. Hofer, the Salem rain-maker. Says the Herald in part:

Our friend, Col. E. Hofer, who labors for pay under a continual grouch against "freak legislation," "freak reformers" and a lot of other things that make for good government and public welfare—if they are not carried to the extreme, and who each week sends out a package of his "grouch dope" to every newspaper in the state to embitter and poison the minds of the innocent and unsuspecting editors, sends us among other things in his last letter the article which we print below, as we think that there really is a deal of truth in it.

(The Colonel with his family is now touring California in a high-powered automobile and we trust that when he returns from that sun-shiny state (in places) the dark clouds that float around in his mental compartment will be cleared up and blown away—although we don't expect anything like this to happen.)

PRICE HAS FIRE

County Seat Clothier Careless with Electric Iron

Patrolman Woodward noticed smoke in Price Bros. Clothing store Friday night of last week, and calling "Hub" Thomas of the Grand Theatre, boosted that worthy over the transom. "Hub" found that an electric iron that hadn't been turned off was slowly burning its way through some boards in the rear of the store. He switched off the current and saved Al Price, proprietor of the store, from what might have been a serious fire.

At the Commercial Club Saturday, when the fire was being discussed, somebody remarked: "Gee, I thought Price was doing a good business."

Then there was a silence, and then a storm of laughter.

Prisoner Returned

Constable "Jack" Frost has returned from Colorado with Grove Faulkner, for whom extradition papers were issued on a charge of non-support. Mrs. Faulkner, who is the daughter of D. Harns of Mackburg, swore to the complaint on which Faulkner was arrested. Since their marriage the couple have lived in Bolton.

Courier and the Western Stock Journal $1.50 per year.

thedenominational societies and surveys as may be necessary as a basis for interdenominational cooperation;

Eighth: That we express our thanks to the local press and to the other papers in the state that have aided in the publicity of our conference work, and to the railroads for the courtesies extended.

The resolutions were signed by the Rev. T. B. Ford, for the Methodist churches; the Rev. C. E. Dymham, of the Baptist churches; the Rev. A. M. Spangler, for the Congregational churches; the Rev. C. F. Aue, for the Presbyterians, and by the Rev. F. E. Billington, for the Christian church.

It is believed that much development for the church activity and community upbuilding will result from the adoption of the plan. The Rev. T. B. Ford and the Rev. George Nelson, of Oregon City, are taking a prominent part in the plan, and expect material aid from other Oregon City pastors.

NEW PEACE IDEA GETS PUBLICITY

CONGRESSMAN TAVENNER SAYS
NATION SHOULD MAKE OWN MUNITIONS

SEES ECONOMY IN THIS PLAN

Representative Believes Desire for Profits Makes Private Concerns
Boost for Continued War

Congressman Clyde H. Tavenner is not a "peace at any price" man. He believes that the United States should make every preparation for war by the manufacture of munitions and such other necessities as are demanded by the army and the navy. But he believes the government itself should handle this business, and should not farm it out to private concerns, whose desire to make a profit from the sale of such material often leads them to boost "war scares" and other schemes designed to make the people think a greater preparation for emergencies is necessary. Commenting on his plan, Congressman Tavenner says:

"The question has been raised as to the patriotism of those who insist upon the Government manufacture of all munitions of war, including battleships. I can not see how it can be contended that it is any more patriotic to advocate two battleships to be built by private contractors, with huge profits to the builders, than it is to advocate two battleships to be constructed by the Government, which policy means that for every dollar expended for battleships we will get a dollar's worth of battleship, and that the men who actually do the work of building the ships will receive higher wages and work under far better conditions than if the contracts are given to the Shipbuilding Trust."

"The 'big-Navy-to-be-built-by-private-contractors' policy will meet with the approval of the armor ring, ammunition ring and the Shipbuilding Trust. It will also be eminently satisfactory to the Navy League of the United States, which organization has from the first been an adjunct of the house of Morgan, and is constantly agitating a larger and larger Navy, but, mind you, not a larger Navy to be built at the lowest possible cost with a Government armor plant, and in Government shipyards, but a larger Navy to be built by the armor ring, the ammunition ring and the Shipbuilding Trust."

"Ever since I have been a member of Congress I have been receiving literature from this 'big Navy' lobby, and finally I determined to call the attention of its officers to the fact that their pleas for a larger navy are tainted, and will continue to be tainted until they advocate the Government manufacture of all munitions of war. On January 16 of last year I addressed a letter to Mr. A. H. Dudson, the Secretary of the league, in which, among other things, I said:

"Assuming that you are in good faith in this agitation and really desire the largest possible navy for patriotic reasons, I am going to take the liberty of suggesting to you that if you will inaugurate a movement for the Government manufacture of all munitions of war, including all battleships, your campaign will strike a much more responsive chord with both Members of Congress and the people."

"In other words, if the Government is to do all of the manufacturing of munitions of war, including battleships, the point cannot then be successfully raised that the agitation is for the benefit of the armor ring, the ammunition ring, and the Shipbuilding Trust."

"But if you do not advocate the Government manufacture of all munitions of war, including battleships, you cannot successfully deny that you are carrying on a propaganda which means millions and millions of dollars of extortionate profits to the above mentioned interests."

"I hardly expect readers to fall out of their chairs in amazement when I report that the Navy League has not accepted my suggestion."

TRAIN KILLS WOMAN

Mrs. R. W. Clark is Hit By Railway Cars at Campine

Stepping too near the rail in signalling a Willamette Valley Southern train to stop at Campine, a station five miles out from Oregon City, Mrs. R. W. Clark, of Gladstone, was struck by the steps of the forward car and killed shortly after nine o'clock Wednesday night. Coroner Hemstead left for the scene of the accident on a special train shortly after the matter was reported, and the body was brought in.

Mrs. Clark was an elderly woman, and had been visiting friends on the line of the new road. She is the mother of a large family, and is well known in Gladstone.
