JOHN STARK'S IDEAS

The fellow that emits the Wolf Howls asks "What else can a cow give but her milk," which by the way, was intended for a pun, although it didn't have a label. Well, she gives bawls, kicks, bruised shins and profanity, which are the only luxuries we farmers get.

Thousands of university men are also handling picks and shovels, and twisting controller handles on trolley trains. Get that! Better read it over again you fellows who do the useful work of this world—you haven't any brains.

Now what would happen if you should suddenly become possessed of brains, and all write coyote yelps for the Courier? Would not there be a glut on the market? Perhaps the Sage who wrote the quoted stuff would hunt for his meat ticket in garbage cans—having so much brains would unfit him for the work necessary to produce the means of life.

Of course that will never happen to him for he "never did a winter yet," so he never will. But there is another winter coming and not far away. If signs don't fail, the charity soup will have abundance of water in it and this soup will be got into some people who are not banking on it just now.

A couple of contributors to last week's Courier became "sourcastic" because the Grange favors that an agricultural expert be tied to the public manger. It may seem strange to those writers but I must defend the Grange. These writers ask what for an expert when we already have the public elevator. Well, an expert could possibly teach the Grangers how to do something useful with those toy farm instruments which clutter up the hall. He could also show how to put their night mares to work and save the feed expense and horseflesh. Next thing these fellows know they will be in the fault-finding class.

JOHN L. STARK.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

NEW CHURCH READY.

Gladstone Baptists to Hold First Services This Sunday.

While the auditorium of the new Baptist church in Gladstone will not be completed for some weeks yet, it is announced by the Rev. Thomas Broomfield, pastor in charge, that the first services would be held in the church this coming Sunday, when the congregation will meet in the basement of the structure. The church, which will cost over $5,000, will be occupied as the official home of the congregation from this time on.

Dr. Broomfield, who is in charge at the
