Price in Canada $165.

A new adding machine for retailers!

Starting Thursday, August 5th, you can secure this new "regular" Burroughs Adding and Listing Machine from any of our offices in 176 Cities. Never before could the adding machine needs of the smallest retailer be filled by a Burroughs of such wonderful value at a price so low. It is now possible only because of an immense factory, equipped to economize through large production. And at this we believe the demand will for many months exceed the supply. Your telephone book or your banker will tell you the nearest Burroughs office.

Let it Stop Your Figure-Mistake Losses

Suppose you're a grocer and fill about 150 orders a day. These orders average about five items—a total of 750 items a day or 225,000 a year. You or your clerks have to add all these items. You are human and all men make mistakes. Here are

45,000 chances for mistakes

If it's a charge slip you can go over the addition after hours—when you're too tired to add straight. But it's a cash sale the customer has gone and taken the record with him. You do find mistakes in charge slip additions. If you could know you would surely find the Most mistakes in cash sales

Your wholesaler employs an expert in figures, uses a double entry system and an adding machine to prevent mistakes.

Your clerks are experts at making sales, not at adding up figures. They must rush to serve waiting customers. They are right out in the hustle and confusion of the store.

Machine can't make mistakes

Put a Burroughs on the counter where you wrap up the goods. The machine will print and add the figures quicker than your clerk can set them down by pencil. The total can be printed by a pull of the handle, and that

Total is always correct

Hand the printed slip to the cash customer as a proof. It shows each amount and the correct sum. It inspires confidence. You and the customer both know it is right.

One mistake prevented each day will pay you a handsome return on your investment. You are now making more than one mistake a day. We stand ready to prove from your own records that you are now paying for a Burroughs in mistakes that can easily be prevented. Whether you're a grocer or the same thing is true. Your brain and your time are needed to make sales, serve customers, arrange stock and do many other things that make for profits.

Any other kind of retailer

You can't afford not to leave the figure work to the machine. You can't afford the mistakes the Burroughs can and does prevent.

Since you are now paying in mistakes the price of this Burroughs, you ought to own it.

Write to any Burroughs Office, or to the factory at Detroit, Michigan, for full information (and easy terms) and for the free Burroughs book for retailers. Branch offices in 176 cities. Your telephone book or your banker will tell you the nearest

FIGHTING IN FANCY DRESS.

One English Troop Used to Be Called the Golden Goldfinches.

Dandies were much in evidence in the Peninsular war, and an officer of the famous Light division has recorded how some of the officers were "rigged out in all the colors of the rainbow. Some had gray braided coats, others brown; some again liked blue, and the comical appearance of a number of infantry officers loaded with leather bottoms to their pantaloons and huge chains suspended from the side buttons was amusing enough. . . . The 'cut down' hat, exactly a span in height, was another rage. This burlesque on a chapeau was usually topped by some extraordinary looking feather.

The Duke of Wellington, however, never troubled about what his officers wore if only they brought their men intact into the firing line with sixty rounds of ammunition apiece, and one of the chaplains, known as "the Fighting Parson," always wore a red hussar jacket, while during the battle of Vittoria General Picton wore, instead of the usual cocked hat, a round and very old hat and carried "a huge white umbrella lined with green."

But it is doubtful if any regiment has ever been dressed more strangely than the old Portsea volunteers, who in 1797 wore gold and scarlet cords, golden rosettes, feathers, cockades, white waistcoats, "gold wings" (to quote the official description) and "frilled skirts, largely figured." Hence their nickname, "The Golden Goldfinches."—London Tit-Bits.

NOBEL'S GREAT GIFT.

Yearly Prizes That Come From the Fund He Left to Posterity.

Alfred B. Nobel, the Swedish scientist and inventor of dynamite, died in 1896, leaving his fortune, which was estimated at $9,000,000, to the founding of a fund of which the interest should be yearly given as prizes to those persons who had during the year contributed most to "the good of humanity." The interest is divided in five equal shares, awarded as follows:

"One to the person who in the domain of physics has made the most important discovery or invention, one to the person who has made the most important chemical discovery or invention, one to the person who has made the most important discovery in the domain of medicine or physiology, one to the person who in literature has provided the most excellent work of an idealistic tendency and one to the person who has worked most or best for the fraternization of nations and the abolition or reduction of standing armies and the ending and propagating of peace congresses."

The value of each prize is, on an average, $40,000. The awards for physics and chemistry are given by the Swedish Academy of Science, that for physiology or medical work by the Karolinska Institute (the faculty of medicine in Stockholm), that for literature by the Swedish Academy of Stockholm and the peace prize by a committee of five persons elected by the Norwegian storting.—Philadelphia Press.

The Seven Seas.

The phrase "the seven seas" has been current for some time—was so current when Kipling universalized it twenty years ago—to denote all the great waters of the earth. Its use divides into seven parts: the "tripartite" ocean (the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans) as the north and south Atlantic, the north and south Pacific, the Indian, the Arctic and the Antarctic oceans. It is interesting to note that Roman Italy had its "seven seas," the chain of salt lagoons about the mouth of the Po, separated from the Adriatic by strips of sand or embankments. The lagoons were in ancient days much more extensive than now, and the "Septem Mares" afforded a continuous means of inland navigation from Ravenna to Altinum.—New York Times.

Deep Sea Diving.

Diving with the aid of artificial mechanism is at least 1,000 years older than the Christian religion. Homer compared the fall of Hector's chariot to the descent of an oyster diver. Aristotle mentioned a diving apparatus, and while Alexander the Great had no submarines, still he ordered divers to destroy the underwater defenses of Tyre. Later on Livy told of treasures being recovered from sunken ships by divers. So it appears that our old world has made but slight progress in penetrating the depths of the sea, which in some places is six miles deep.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Impudence.

Two-thirds of Jones' makeup is curiosity, the other third wit. A short time ago he met his neighbor proudly displaying a valuable horse. "That is a fine horse you have there, Brown," he exclaimed cordially. "How much did you give for him?"

"I gave my note," was the crisp rejoinder.

"Well, you got him cheap," said Jones.—Chicago News.

Not In His Line.

Wife—A tramp at the back door who has already eaten a piece of that pie I made yesterday wants to know if you can do anything for him. Husband—Tell him, my dear, that I am a commission merchant, not a doctor.—Houston Post.

Opportunities.

The wise man grasps small opportunities and makes them big, while the fool sits in an easy chair and waits for great opportunities to come his way.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HOP OUTLOOK GOOD

Failure of European Crop, and Heavy Growth Here, Forecast Profit

Hop-growers are wearing smiles these days, for not only are Willamette valley hop yards showing up in excellent condition; but reports from the old world indicate that between the war and unfavorable weather, Europe's yield this year will be far below the average. Frequent rains, with days of bright sunshine in between, are boosting Oregon hops in, great style, and a heavy yield from full-developed vines is expected.

Quite opposite reports, however, are coming from Europe. A recent bulletin sent to the government from the Bohemian hop districts, near Prague shows that there will be a pronounced falling off this year. This report says, in part:

"The official report covering the condition of the Saaz hop gardens up to June 26 estimates that the reduction in the area planted this year, as compared with 1914, amounts to 11.29 per cent.

The dry weather of the past few weeks will probably affect the size of the crop to a greater extent than the reduced area.

The report of the hop growers' association, written on June 26, which has just been made public, says:

"The character of the weather remains unchanged. The drought and excessive heat have not only damaged the grain crops, but have also worked such injury to the hop plants that the formation of branches on the upper part of the plant reached only very modest proportions, where it was not altogether lacking. In the early gardens the plants are already in bloom, and in all gardens the final cultivation is almost finished. During the last three days, that is, since June 27, a light rain has fallen almost continuously, but it has come too late to save the crop from serious damage by the drought."

G. E. Riderson, of Kalamazoo, Wash'n was visiting friends in the county seat early in the week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Fessenden, of Seattle, were visiting friends in the northern part of the county early in the week.

"THE FARMER'S FRIEND"

Oregonian Proves It Again, by Saying Country Meals Poor

Some days ago the Oregonian "the farmer's friend" expressed the opinion editorially that farmers died sooner than city people because the food they ate was poor, and because it was miserably cooked. J. S. Yoder of Hubbard, who is not unknown to Clackamas county folk, wrote to the Oregonian against its slander of country cooking; and this is the Oregonian's reply:

"J. S. Yoder writes the Oregonian that he is puzzled by a contradiction between our opinion of country diet and that of a minister who recently lectured in his neighborhood. The minister could not sufficiently praise the food he ate on his trip—light, spongy bread, fresh butter and the like. And he told the rural audience that they ought to be thankful for their dietetic advantages. This, as Mr. Yoder remarks, does not jibe with the Oregonian's lately expressed opinion that city people outlive their country cousins because they have better food to eat.

"We protest at the outset that the case of a minister on a visit to a rural community is hardly typical. What is set before him differs tragically from the ordinary diet of the country. The spongy bread and the fragrant butter of which he partakes are not the rule but the rare exception on rural dinner tables. More commonly the bread is sour and the butter resembles the famous pat which Josiah Allen's wife kept on the table for show all one summer while she was saving up money for a trip to Boston.

"If rural cooks would do for their own families what is done for the visiting minister we should see fewer ill-nourished, dyspeptic farmers. The common practice is to ship to the city the best that the farm produces and feed the family on what cannot be sold. This is a species of economy which has shortened many a life. It is proverbial that if one wants the best of country produce he must go to the city to find it. As a matter of fact, there are a great many villages like Hubbard, from which Mr. Yoder writes, which import most of their vegetable luxuries from town.

"The art of cookery has been so neglected in our schools and homes that the health of rural communities has been sadly impaired by indigestible, innutritious food. The vision of the country dinner table laden with all the luxuries of the land and groaning under its sumptuous burden of rapid eatables is largely mythical. The reality too often takes the disillusioned form of fried pork and sour bread, with soggy potatoes to eke out the repast. Farmers should learn to feed themselves as well as they do the visiting minister."

MORE ABOUT ROADS

Aurora Observer Contributes Hints To Clackamas County Court

The following criticism of what the Courier has said, and a suggestion that may well be taken to heart by Clackamas county road builders, is contained in last week's Aurora Observer.

That common river gravel will not make good roads is the assertion of the Oregon City Courier. It says: "River gravel was dumped on the roads in District 13 until the travelers over those roads got tired. Then they put up a kick and made arrangements to get the rock crusher started up. District No. 13 is now substituting crushed rock for river gravel on its main highways, and will sprinkle the rock with asphaltum, so that a hard surfaced road may be had. The cost is but a trifle higher than the estimate for gravel, and the resulting road will be serviceable."

It is apparent to anyone who has traveled the gravelled highways of this part of Marion county that either the Courier is mistaken or District 13 does not know how to use gravel. The gravelled roads in Clackamas county over which the writer has travelled leads to the latter belief. The experience of Marion county with river gravel, especially washed gravel, goes to show that dumping such gravel on the roads without first trenching in order to hold it in place, is bound to produce an unsatisfactory road. The Pudding River gravel without trenching with the good percentage of cement-like sand it contains will make a better road than washed gravel. But spreading any kind of gravel upon the surface, to be scattered by every team and vehicle that passes over it, produces a poorer road, according to Marion county officials, than the trench method.

SOME BOOST, THIS

Maybe California Will Appreciate Oregon's "Climatic Remarks"

Because prosperity wasn't smiling any too fondly on the Panama-Pacific fair at San Francisco, the general publicity offices of the big exhibit were closed some weeks ago. Since then several of the state commissions at the fair have been carrying on their own publicity work, and among these is Oregon. The present week brings to the Courier office the following bit of "publicity" regarding the fair which was sent out by the Oregon Commission. We bet Frisco will appreciate it—not:

"Let it be urged once again—bring the overcoat, the sealskin fur, an extra blanket and the Oregon winter underwear if you want to really enjoy the exposition. San Francisco always has her winter in the good old summer time, and the big show is located on the windiest and foggiest side of the city. July and August are always counted the worst of the year and September, October and February the best. July has offered some pleasant weather but more that has been too cool for real enjoyment of the outside features of the exposition, these being by far the greatest. Don't miss the show but come prepared to enjoy it."

Does not gripe—no unpleasant after-effects."—Jones Drug Co.

OUR FRUIT PREFERRED

Northwest Finds Ready Market in Canada in spite of Duties
According to reports received from the fruitgrowers' convention of British Columbia and Alberta, American fruits are finding a better market and more ready sale in the western Canadian provinces than are home-grown fruits.

So deeply have Canadian fruit growers felt the American competition that the government has been asked to appoint a special board to investigate horticultural conditions and determine if possible why it is that home-grown products are behind the market.

The statement made by a Canadian, one of the largest importers of fruit in Canada, regarding the desirability of fruit imported from the United States and sold in Calgary at the rate of a carload a day, in spite of duty, war tax, and freight, in preference to British Columbia produce, provoked many questions and criticisms from the growers.

The success of the fruit industry in the United States is due, it was averred, to the favorable treatment of the jobbers.

BAD PEST APPEARS

Elm Trees Affected by Beetle that Comes from the East

The most serious pest of the elm tree, the elm leaf beetle, has made been twice reported from Multnomah county. Professor Wilson says that in New York this forest and street tree pest causes more damage than any other. The larva of the beetle has a dark stripe down the center of the back with a yellow stripe on either side.

It is recommended that a specimen of all insects found feeding on elm leaves should be sent to the Agricultural college for identification and control of the pest.
