INDIAN GHOSTS AVENGE THEFT?

DEAD REDMEN MAY BE CAUSE OF SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC DECLARE SOME

DR. VAN BRAKLE SCOUTS IDEA

Small Boys Who Have Dug for Pre-ty Beads Have Nearly All Developed Plague, However

Have dead Indians, whose bones have been disturbed, and whose graves have been robbed, passed on to the pale face the smallpox which brought them to the end of life and ushered them into the "happy hunting grounds?"

This is a question that quite a number of Gladstone people are asking themselves this week; and the answer to it may solve the mystery surrounding the outbreak of a mild form of smallpox among children in the pleasant suburb of Oregon City just across the Clackamas river.

Practically every child who has recently been taken ill with smallpox, is, or has been, the proud possessor of a string of Indian beads or a hoard of "wampum," which has been dug from the old Indian burying ground on which the most stylish section of Gladstone is laid out. In the early days the land from the railroad track east to the county road, and bordering the banks of the Clackamas river, was sacred ground for the Indians, and within its precincts were laid away the bones of redmen who had heard the call of the Great Manitou. Fifty years ago smallpox swept through the tribal tents of the Indians living in this region, and victim after victim of the spotted plague was laid away in this burying place.

In digging foundations for the first houses that were erected in this section of Gladstone, bones, skulls and Indian trinkets were frequently unearthed. Even in later days, when the happy suburbanite had gone home at night and started digging garden, Indian relics were often thrown up by the spade; and many a collection of arrow-heads has had its inspiration in the findings thus made.

Still more recently the children of Gladstone have developed the fad of collecting "Indian beads," and among the little folk in the neighboring city prestige and standing are largely governed by the length of the string of these beads possessed. The boy who has a string eight feet long is more powerful in the councils of the small tots than is the youth whose string is but three feet long—and so on.

Investigation of the cases of small-pox that have lately developed in Gladstone has brought out the fact—curious or worthy of note as the case may be—that every child stricken has either possessed or played with one of these strings of "Indian beads." And now the grown-ups are beginning to wonder whether or not the beads have anything to do with it.

County Health Officer vanBrakle thinks the beads are harmless. He does not believe that any smallpox germs that may have been buried with the Indians fifty years ago still retain vitality sufficient to innoculate the modern-day children with the disease, even in a mild form. There are disease germs, the doctor says, which have a span of life that would easily cover this period, but he does not think the smallpox that killed the Indians has anything to do with the mild form of the plague that is now making little bodies itch and burn.

COUNTY AND CITY LOCALS

Mrs. Mattley, accompanied by her daughters, Miss Belle and Miss Helen Mattley, have returned to their home in this city after a two months visit at Nehalem. Little Miss Helen made a catch of an 18 lb. salmon while there.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Farr left Oregon City Sunday for California by auto. A full camping outfit was taken along and they expect to enjoy every minute. They will visit the go on to Los Angeles and San Diego before their return.

Mrs. J. J. Cook left Saturday for a month's visit at Bar View.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harrison, accompanied by their daughters, the Misses Kathleen and Evadne Harrison, are spending their vacation at Ellsworth Park, Oregon.

John Fisher has purchased a new automobile.

Mrs. Bullard, who has been in ill health for some time, is at St. Vincent's hospital, Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brom returned Saturday from the Panama exposition. They also attended the Elk's celebration at Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Robbins are enjoying a two week's vacation at Bar View.

Mrs. Robert Shoenborn returned Tuesday from Portland where she visited her mother, Mrs. Bullard.

Mrs. John Baker returned Wednesday from Portland where she visited her mother, Mrs. Bullard, where she is quite ill at St. Vincent hospital.

Miss Veri Trimble and Miss Elsie Shoenborn were in Portland Tuesday.

Geo. Howell, of fifth and Madison streets, who was recently seriously burned at his work in the paper mills, is improving.

Miss Young, of the Peerless Bakery, visited at the home of her brother and family at Camas Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Maude Mattley, accompanied by her sister, Miss Mary Mattley, left for Nehalem the first of the week for an outing.

Mrs. Bertha Heigelman and baby, who have been visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. M. Cross, returned to her home at Silver Lake.

Ralph Pendleton, of Colton, was among the week's county seat visitors.

A. W. Chancelor, of Salem, was in the county seat during the week.

R. I. Skife and family, of Colfax, Wash., spent several days this week in Oregon City, making it their headquarters while looking over agricultural prospects in Clackamas county.

Kenneth Ross, the three-year-old son of Samuel Ross of Willamette, who was seriously injured by being cut by a mower some weeks ago, has been removed from the Oregon City hospital to his home. In spite of the wounds on his legs, both limbs will be saved to the lad.

Edward Kimsey and William Hamilton, of the county seat, have left for a two week's vacation at Seaside.

A. E. Ball district sealer of weights and measures, reports that he has found no serious faults with Oregon City scales. His next inspections will be in Gladstone, Parkplace and Clackamas.

Leroy D. Walker, prominent in banking circles in Estacada and Canby, has been elected secretary of the Bankers' Mortgage company of Portland.

Not content with one visit to the county seat this week, E. P. Preble, referred to as "Ever Prosperous Preble," by his friends, made another trip to Oregon City during the week.
While here he visited local friends and at the home of Harry Jones.

Henry G. Kennemier, of White Salmon, Wash., was visiting in the county seat during the week. Mr.
Kennemier says that he is seeking a small farm in the lower Willamette valley for his brother-in-law, J. H.
Grimes, of Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. Bertha D. Smith, of Portland, was visiting friends at Clackamas during the week.

Lloyd Johnson, of Goble, was among the week's callers in Oregon City.

Rev. E. A. Smith will complete his work in the country this month, and will preach next Sunday at Logan and Damascus. He will supply the following places during the month—Logan, Redland, Highland, Alberta, Clarks, Henri, and Damascus, Will go to Hillsboro September 1st.

Miss Edna Terrill is visiting the family of L. R. McCullough, night editor of the Astorian, at Astoria, for a few weeks.

E. P. Preble, prominent Portland timberman, and owner of a ranch near the Marion county line, was in the county seat Monday.

Fred G. Taylor, a member of the Oregonian staff, and formerly a society man of this vicinity, was "in our midst" Tuesday. Mr. Taylor says he notices many changes in the county seat since his last visit—even some of his lady friends appearing different.

People less scientific than the county health officer, however, are not so sanguine; and they see no reason why smallpox germs should not thrive in Gladstone soil—even as do other forms of plant life. And so strong do some parents feel about the matter that they have insisted that all Indian relics in the house be burned, and have promised severe punishment to any young hopefuls who are caught delving for more.

Physicians who are treating the illness in Gladstone say that the fever is of the mildest form, and that there is even grave doubt if it is anything worse than chicken-pox.
They do not regard the number of cases as cause for alarm, and do not even consider them enough to make an "epidemic"—but still there remains the fact that the Indians who once had those fine beads died of smallpox.

Albert Moore, a former resident of the county seat, but now living in Vancouver, Wash., visited in Oregon City the early part of the week.

Miss Leola Fisher, of the county seat, is visiting with relatives in Portland.

Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Mount left early in the week for an automobile trip about Mt. Hood.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Logus have returned from an extensive auto tour through California.

Miss Alberta Dunn, of the county seat, left this week for a vacation trip to the California fairs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Robinson, of Portland, are spending the week in Oregon City. They are en route to California for the balance of the summer.

Mrs. Donald Meldrum has returned to her home after a visit with friends in Eastern Oregon.

The Misses Celia and Bertha Goldsmith will leave this week for a vacation in California.

The Hon. Christian Schuebel and members of his family returned this week from an automobile trip through the scenic sections of Washington.

While away they visited in North Ya-kina, Ellensburg, Tacoma and Seattle.

Victor Salvator, a New York Sculptor of not e, spent Sunday in the county seat, and enjoyed an automobile trip through the county.

Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson, of Gladstone, have lost their baby Alex, death coming last Sunday morning to claim the tot.

CIVIC CLUB MEETS

Gladstone Women Ambitious to Make Better Community

Organized to further plans for the beautification and improvement of Gladstone, and to develop a greater civic activity, the Gladstone Civic club held its first regular meeting on Monday of this week at the school house.

After an interesting program, in which the club plan were outlined, officers were elected.

Mrs. T. E. Gault was chosen president, Mrs. E. Harrington, vice-president; Mrs. H. A. Shandy, treasurer, and Mrs. R. L. Banta, secretary.

Mrs. Gault appointed the following committees: Mrs. W. Leete, Mrs. H.
B. Dickson and Mrs. C. Prater, for improving Gladstone; Mrs. J. N.
Smith, Mrs. H. A. Shandy and Mrs.
R. L. Banta, to frame constitution;
Mrs. W. Leete, Mrs. C. Forshner, Mrs. I. Rau, Mrs. Colovet and Mrs. H.
E. Cross for interests of the city, and Mrs. T. E. Gault, Mrs. L. Servas and Mrs. I. Rau, committee on entertainment.

BOY IS DROWNED

Oswego Lake Bathing Proves Fatal to Portland Youth

Venturing in water over his death, Victor Osterdahl, of Portland, was drowned while swimming in Oswego Lake Monday afternoon; and though friends rushed to his assistance when he disappeared beneath the surface, his body was not recovered for nearly an hour. Coroner Hempstead was notified of the accident, but held no inquest.

Osterdahl was camping at the lake with Robert Rosenthal, also of Portland. Efforts to revive the unfortunate youth were made by the pulmotor crew of the Portland Railway Light & Power Company, but the body had been in the water too long to respond to treatment. The remains were taken to the lads home, 354 Graham avenue, Portland.

PIONEER WOMAN DIES

Mrs. Callahan Had Lived in County for Over 30 Years

Mrs. Louise Callahan, for over 30 years a resident of the Dickey Prairie district, died Monday of this week at the home of her son, Charles Callahan, of Liberal. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, and interment was in the family cemetery.

Mrs. Callahan was born at Burlington, Wis., November 5, 1855, and came here with her parents, settling in the Dickey Prairie district. She is survived by three children: Charles Callahan, Edward Callahan and Mrs.
W. J. E. Vick, all of Liberal, and three brothers, Philip Leitchweis, of Dickey Prairie, and Edward and John Leitchweis, of Clarks.

COW TESTING LIKED

Two More Communities Form Clubs to Better Livestock

Two more cow-testing associations have been added to the list of Oregon dairy clubs, reports W. A. Barr, O.
A. C. and Federal Field Dairy Specialist. One of the new associations was formed at Multnomah, Polk county, and the other in the neighborhood of Carleton and McMinnville, Yamhill county. These make a total of fourteen cow-testing associations in Oregon.

Some of the Eastern states have a larger number of associations, according to Professor Barr, but the associations are formed with fewer cows than in Oregon clubs, some of them not having not more than 300.
In Oregon the number of cows to the association runs from 500 to 800, so that it is quite likely that there are now more cows under test in Oregon than in any other state of the Union.

Frost Likes Oregon

D. E. Frost, constable attached to Justice Siever's court, last week made a flying trip to his home in Kansas, which he had not visited in 23 years.
Frost says crops were good, business fine, and the weather hot; but in spite of that he says he would rather be a poor man in Oregon than a "well-to-do" man in Kansas.

ANCIENT TEMPLES

Mighty Structures of Old Dwarfed by Modern Skyscrapers.

TOWER OF BABEL A MIDGET.

It Would Not Reach Two-thirds of the Way Up to the Top of the Eiffel Tower, That Sways 984 Feet in the Air.
Big Buildings and the Pyramids.

It has long been the popular impression that the modern effort to pierce the clouds with skyscrapers is but a feeble imitation of the work of those ancient sons of Noah whose memory is perpetuated in the Bible. Reading in the eleventh chapter of Genesis, where it tells of the people attempting to erect the Tower of Babel, "whose top may reach unto heaven," it strikes one that they must have gone farther toward realizing their ambition than we of today may ever hope to do.

But as a matter of fact when the Lord halted building operations by confounding the workers' language and scattering them broadcast over the earth the summit of the tower was but one stage, or 606 feet 9 inches, from the level of the plain.

The Ziggurat, or temple tower of Babylon, is described by Herodotus as having eight stages, each somewhat narrower than the one directly beneath it. The top was reached by a gradually rising spiral ascent, and on the top most tier was a shrine wherein the god Marduk was supposed to dwell. Dio-dorus says this shrine contained three colossal golden images—one of Bel, one of Belshazzar and the third of Rhea or Istar—together with two golden lions, two enormous silver serpents and a golden table forty feet long and fifteen feet wide.

The tower, as the Bible sets forth, was built of brick, with slime for mortar. This slime, it is believed, was natural asphaltum obtained from nearby springs. Ages after the building operations had been interrupted by the Maker's wrath Nebuchadnezzar undertook, with indifferent success, to restore the ruins to their former state.

The modern ruins of Babel were supposed to be represented by the great pile of Birs Nimroud, which stood in Borsippa, eight miles from the ancient city of Babylon. Its sides were from 375 to 645 feet long, and the edifice still rises to a height of 133 feet.

The next structures in point of antiquity are the pyramids of Egypt.
These are the oldest and most mysterious of man's works still existing. But they are not really so tall, considered in the light of present day achievements. The greatest, known as the Great Pyramid of Cheops or Khufu, was originally 481 feet 4 inches high and 755 feet square at the base. The second—that of Chephren or Khafra—was 472 feet high and 706 feet wide.
The third—that of Mycerinus or Men-kaure—was never completed, but it stood, nevertheless, 215 feet high and 346 feet square at the base.

In all nearly seventy of these pyramids have been located, and, inasmuch as they all appear to have been royal sepulchers, it is the belief that the dynasties of the builders covered a period of at least a thousand years. The area of the Great Pyramid is more than thirteen acres—about twice as great as that of St. Peter's at Rome. The passages leading to the chambers containing the royal mummies defied detection for thousands of years, only to be torn open at last and their contents ruthlessly made away with.

Of modern edifices the tallest by far is the great Eiffel tower of Paris, whose steel webbed structure pierces the blue to a height of 984 feet. Then comes the Woolworth building in New York, the loftiest office building in the world, its fifty-five stories rising 750 feet into the air. The height of others is: Metropolitan Life building, New York, fifty stories, 700 feet 3 inches; Singer building, New York, forty-one stories, 612 feet 1 inch; Washington monument, Washington, 555 feet; Co-logne cathedral spire, Cologne, Germany, 517 feet; Rouen cathedral spire, Rouen, France, 492 feet; cupola of St.
Peter's, Rome, 460 feet; St. Paul's, London, 364 feet.

The loftiest obelisks ever constructed are those mentioned by Diodorus Sicu-lus, which rose 158 feet and were eleven feet thick at the base and seven feet thick at the top. One of the world's largest domes is that of the Roman Pantheon, 142 feet in diameter and 143 feet high.

The ancient peoples were great for their methods of embalming, for their art, their literature, their general culture. But when it comes to building skyscrapers they will have to give way to the builders of the Eiffel tower and the Woolworth building, who have pierced the clouds without their language being confounded in the slightest.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Death by the Bowstring.

In Turkey and Persia the bowstring is the method of execution. This is a stout cord of cutgut placed around the victim's neck with two slinknots, which are suddenly drawn tight by two strong men. This kills the criminal by strangulation.—London Telegraph.

Great Scheme.

"I'm going to marry a girl ten years older than I am," says the philosopher of folly, "so that I can catch up with her by the time I'm fifty."—Cleveland Leader.

The busy man is troubled with but one devil, the idle man by a thousand.
—Spanish Proverb.

FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

Allen Clan Gathers in Oak Grove for First Time in 21 Years

Saturday of last week the family of Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Allen held a reunion in Oak Grove, and for the first time in 21 years all the members greeted each other and spent the day together. The festivities occurred on the 73rd birthday of Dr. Allen. Because of the probable inability of the family to meet again in the near future, the golden wedding of the Al-

Neighbors Pays.
"Get acquainted with your neighbor; you might like him." This, from the letterhead of a western village improvement association, is excellent advice.
What fine things a large personal acquaintance can do for us, provided we are worthy of it! Let us put aside any petty dislike, engendered perhaps by fancied faults in other people, and go out and shake hands with neighbors whom we probably have never really known. Let us talk over our common problems with them; discuss the welfare of our community, the state, the nation, so that we may all have a better understanding of our common hopes and aims. All this pays. Its returns come not alone in the help we can be one to the other, but in the greater discernment with which our personal business can be conducted, and in the better feeling and progress that follows in a town or city where all are working for the common good.—Countryside Magazine.

Stage Fright.
Stage fright, if I may encourage startled readers, does not appear to have affected William Cobbett, whose madden speech in the house of commons must have been one of the most astonishing performances that even that seasoned assembly had ever listened to.
Here is the opening sentence: "It appears to me that since I have been sitting here I have heard a great deal of vain and unprofitable talk." By way of contrast, we have the case of Gilson Craig, whose abortive eloquence, on his introduction to parliamentary life, was thus described by Disraeli: "Gibson Craig, of whom the Whigs had hoped, rose, stared like a stuck pig and said nothing. His friends cheered, he stammered. All cheered; then there was a dead and awful pause, and then he sat down, and that was his performance."—London Spectator.

The Dipper.
That beautiful constellation, the Dipper, hangs, silent and solitary, amid the northern star lighted firmament, like a veritable sky dipper indeed, or a sky plover driven around and around Polaris, the north star. As we all know, the dipper's "pointers," Merak and Dubhe, indicate pretty accurately the whereabouts of the north star. There are five other stars in the Dipper. They are respectively in order from the end of the handle Benet-nash, Misar, Alloth, Megres and Phe-con. Here in the United States we speak of this collection of stars as the Dipper, while abroad it is known as La Grande Ourse, Der Grosse Baer, Orsa Maggiore, and among the ancient Egyptians, who were not acquainted with the bear, it was known as the Hippopotamus.—New York Times.

In Defense of Conscience.

The meekest thing ever said about conscience were the words put into Hamlet's mouth by William Shakespeare: "This conscience does make cowards of us all."

This remark has caused many people to believe that conscience was nothing but a coward maker, and consequently they have refused to have anything to do with it. Never was anything more unjust. Shakespeare's assertion is true only on the assertion that we are all sinners. To be fair, he should have said: "This conscience does make cowards of all of us who have sinned or who are about to sin." Then he would have been more in agreement with Solomon, who was wiser, and who said:
"The wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are as bold as a lion."—Life.

Curious Old Drink Theory.

One of the most singular views on drinking ever recorded occurs in a letter from Sir Henry Ingelyby on Aug.
21, 1601, printed in "Pryings Among Private Papers."
"Sir William is so ill," wrote the baronet, "one of his doctors told me yesterday there was no manner of hope. * * * I have been taught that Jupiter allows every man who comes into the world a different proportion of drink, which, when he has dispatched, there remains nothing for him to do but to die, and that the proportion and expedition make great difference in men's ages."—London Standard.

The Earliest Lamps.

The most primitive lamps were probably the skulls of animals, in which fat was burned, while certain seashells were also employed for this purpose, says an exchange. When pottery and metal began to be used the principle of these natural lamps was for a long time retained, as seen in ancient Egyptian, Greek and Roman lamps and in the stone cups and boxes of northern nations.

Clean as a Whistle.

The origin of the saying "As clean as a whistle" is ascribed to the "whistle tankard" of olden times, in which the tankard was emptied or "cleared out" to announce to the waiter that more liquor was required.

Horticultural Note.
