Miss Josephine Newton, accompanied by a party of friends, ascended to the top of Mt. Hood Sunday.

Mrs. Lucy Anderson leaves Sunday for Portland where she will visit her son, Walter Anderson and family, for a week.

MUTT AND JEFF.

Real and Imitation "Funny Page" Characters Now Appearing.

With characteristic suppression of some of the details, a Portland newspaper informs its readers that "Mutt and Jeff" will appear exclusively in its columns once a week hereafter. Some admirers of Bud Fisher's funny pair looked for the return of the two nationally-famous figures last week. They found something that was labeled "Mutt and Jeff," but on looking closely they observed that Bud Fisher's familiar signature did not appear on the pictures, and the two principal characters were also seen to lack considerable of the real Fisher humor.

For the information of admirers of Bud Fisher, it may be remarked that he has left the employ of the Hearst syndicate, and is now working exclusively for the Wheeler syndicate—which doesn't serve the Portland paper that relies on the Hearst syndicate for its "funny page." Hence it is easy to see why Bud Fisher's name didn't appear on the bogus Mutt and Jeff comics in the Portland paper.

It is quite easy to imitate Bud Fisher and to draw a long man and a short one—but it is very difficult to get Bud Fisher's inimitable humor into drawing which Bud Fisher didn't make.

Some newspapers wouldn't try to foist off an imitation Mutt and Jeff on their readers—and other papers would just as leave do it as not.

COURT WANTS DRINK

County Commissioners Think Pipe Franchise Worth Free Water

When members of the West Linn water commission applied to the county court last week for a franchise for their pipeline over the suspension bridge, members of the county court refused to grant it unless West Linn would give the courthouse a free supply of water. Temporary negotiations were held up, as West Linn's contract with Oregon City provides that none of the water procured from the South Fork supply line may be sold.

West Linn folk explained this to the county court, and also mentioned the fact that West Linn paid sufficient taxes to the county to entitle it to a free franchise over the bridge. The court couldn't see the matter in that light, however, and the matter went over.

West Linn, it is said, will try to get permission from Oregon City to give the county court all the water it wants to drink for the bridge franchise.

STORE ENLARGED

Bannon & Co., to Meet Trade Demands Increase Sales Space

To meet the demands of an ever-increasing trade, and also to make suitable room for an extra large fall stock, Bannon & Co., of the county seat, are adding approximately 300 feet of floor space to their department store on Main street. The extra space will be given over to the women's suit department, and will be filled with a fine display of gowns and dresses for all occasions and all pocketbooks.

Since opening in Oregon City Bannon & Co., have enjoyed a constantly increasing trade, and frequent expansions have been necessary. The present enlargement is due to the increasing patronage given by local people; more and more of whom are learning that Oregon City merchants can meet their needs as well as foreign stores and mail-order houses.

BOY IS DROWNED

Caddy at Country Club Victim of Cramps While Swimming

John Hass, employed as a caddy at the Waverly Country club, was drowned in the Willamette river just within the Clackamas county line Friday morning, evidently being seized with cramps while in swimming. Efforts to revive the youth with the pulmotor were unsuccessful. Coroner Hempstead investigated the accident, but deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Gypsies Invade Town

Friday of last week 27 wagons, carrying approximately 200 gypsies, dropped into the county seat, and for a while offered to tell the fortunes of everybody in town. Local merchants reported that the wanderers did considerable business in the downtown stores, paying cash for all they bought; while a Main street blacksmith got a rush order to repair a number of the wagons. The gypsies left late in the afternoon, going south.

A SCOUT'S ESCAPE

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

During the Indian troubles which followed the close of the civil war I was attached to various western forts and camps as scout and dispatch rider and in that capacity had my full share of adventures. It was my fortune or misfortune almost at the outset of my career to strike the Sioux a blow which made them forever after hungry for my life.

It soon became known among the Sioux what had happened, and every branch of the tribe swore to have my life. A reward of ten ponies was offered to any one who would kill me and twenty if I were taken alive. I was advised by every one to clear out of that locality, but I refused to go till the long expected war finally broke out, and I was attached to a moving column.

I was finally made a prisoner under singular circumstances. I was returning from the flying column to Fort Wallace with dispatches. I had set out soon after dark and made a good twenty-five miles when a heavy fog settled on the plains. It wouldn't have bothered an Indian to keep the points of the compass, but after I turned and twisted among some dry ravines I had to own up that I was lost. My horse was just as badly off. When I gave him his head he came to a stop. The only thing to do was to dismount and wait for daylight. I was sitting on the ground, not feeling a bit sleepy, and my horse was lying down when a band of thirty-seven Indians, all mounted, walked right on to me through the fog. I heard the footsteps of their horses, but could not locate them in the fog until too late. When I leaped up it was with the thought that I might make a break for it on foot, but before I could turn they were all about me, and in another minute I was made prisoner.

The Indians were as much surprised as I was, and it was broad daylight before they identified me. Up to that time they had treated me fairly well. When it was known I was the scout whose life they had so long thirsted after half a dozen bucks tried their best to tomahawk me on the spot, but were restrained.

When their anger had cooled down there was as much rejoicing as if they had captured a fort. Six warriors were called out as a guard and soon after sunrise I was put in their charge and started for a big Sioux village on Deer creek, between the two forks of the Republican river. I was, of course, disarmed. Then my elbows were tied together and my feet tied under the horse, and for fear the horse would run off with me he was led by a larist.

When we reached the village I was put in a tepee and my arms unbound. It was the third day after my capture before I was disturbed. Then, most of the warriors having returned to the village on purpose to witness my death, I was led out at 3 o'clock in the afternoon to undergo the preliminary to actual torture. This is running the gantlet.

I got ready as well as I could, and when the signal came I sprang away at the top of my speed. Blow after blow fell upon me as the savages shouted their delight, and to my great surprise, I at length reached the end. There I fell in a heap, and they gave me ten minutes to brace up for the run back. I made only half the distance this time, being struck such a blow over the head with a club that I sank down unconscious. When I had recovered my senses they returned me to the lodge, where I lay for many hours, expecting to be taken out any moment for torture. They would have finished me but for the fact that the wife of Little Feather, who was in another village fifty miles away, had not yet arrived. She wanted to be in at the death.

The squaw arrived soon after midnight. My ankles were tightly lashed, and I could not sleep.

Half an hour after daylight the village was astir, and at sunrise a squaw brought me some breakfast, and the lashings around my ankles were cast off. I learned several years after that it was intended to oblige me to run the gantlet again. I was eating the meal the squaw had brought when a sudden excitement arose outside. There was a great shouting, followed by cheers and the report of firearms, and the next minute the 200 frontiersmen who had been raised in Kansas and Nebraska as an independent force charged into the village. It was a complete surprise to the Indians, but not for long. It wasn't five minutes before the feeling warriors rallied for defense, but before that time I was safe. At the first alarm I sprang up and ran out of the lodge full against one of the guards, and as I ran I was fired at two or three times. I was with the horsemen in a minute or two, and after a bit I got a rifle and took an active part in the hot fight going on. We were driven off after a couple of hours, but we got every pony in the herd and burned all the lodges, and they had many a dead warrior to mourn over.

It was singular that in after years I should meet the squaw of Little Feather on the reservation and have a long talk with her. So it happened, and she calmly told me that she had been promised my skin and it would have been her hand which would have ended my agonies after I had amused the warriors to their fill as a prisoner at the stake.

School Bonds Sold
Oregon City's high school bonds, to provide $20,000 for an addition to the present high school building, were sold last week, the issue being awarded to G. L. and J. A. McPherson, of Portland, who bid par and $300 premium. Eight bids in all were received, and each one was par or better. The bonds run for 20 years, and bear five and one-half percent interest.

GYPSIES VISIT CITY.

Varying Views Held by Citizens Regarding Their Desirability.

Some thirty wagons loaded with gypsies of high and low degree dropped into Oregon City last week. In the course of their wanderings they dropped into Everhardt & Halls store on the hill, and while some of them engaged Mr. Everhardt and his clerks in consultation, others took $15 from the till and appropriated some olive oil and condensed milk.

After their departure Mr. Everhardt discovered their attentions, and assisted by John Gillette, deputy sheriff, pursued the band in an automobile. On overtaking the nomads, Mr. Gillette told the swarthy leader that he was a "two-gun had-man hunter," and after some palaver persuaded the gypsies to return the fifteen plunks and to pay for the olive oil and condensed milk.

Comment on the visit of the gypsies has been considerable. George H. Bannon, who runs one of the county seat's big stores, says that he likes to have the gypsies come around, as they always buy something. "They bought $32 worth of stuff from me," he said. "And they'd take nothing but the best. Those people always want the best—when they buy."

The other extreme of opinion is voiced by Mrs. D. O. Griffin, who sends to the Courier a prose poem about "that prophetic easy town, O. C." and the "unprotected taxpayer."

Considering all the comment, and the fact that Chief of Police Ed Shaw did all that one man could do in keeping the gypsies moving, it appears that the recent visit was not different from many others; and that no merchant lost anything of great intrinsic value.

SCHOOL PLAN HALTS.

Gladstone "Union" Idea Spoiled by Looming Legal Battle.

There will not be a union high school at Gladstone for children living in Parkplace, Clackamas, Jennings Lodge and Gladstone school districts. Those in charge of the recently authorized union of these districts for high school purposes have decided not to combat the objections of Jennings Lodge to the plan, and for the time being the matter has been dropped.

However, as the offer of H. E. Cross of a site for the high school still stands good, an effort will shortly be made to form another union high school district, with Stone or East Clackamas taking the place of Jennings Lodge in the original scheme. When the new district is formed by popular vote, the operation of the high school will be taken up again, and the plan carried through to completion. Jennings Lodge pupils will then be forced to pay tuition in the high school at Gladstone.

Objection was made by some of the residents to entering the Gladstone union, it is understood, because they desired to send their children to Portland high schools under the new law which provides that county courts must pay the tuition of children attending foreign high schools when there is no such school in their own district.

Jury Frees Crew

A coroner's jury last week exonerated the motorman and crew of the Willamette Valley Southern train that struck and killed Mrs. R. W. Clarke, of Gladstone, last Wednesday night, at Campine station. Mrs. Clarke's remains were sent to Billings, Montana, for burial.

STARK'S COMMENTARIES

After every storm comes a calm. We have had a string of storm sensations of late and now the canvas hangs limp. Four loads of cracked junk, each seemingly worse than the other has been, thrust upon us in rapid succession. Just why we have been thus scourged the transportation agencies only know. Perhaps it is some of the sins that follow the fifth and sixth generation—surely we can hardly have brought it upon ourselves.

First came the Liberty Bell, then Bryan, Teddy and lastly Harry K. Thaw. There are many points of similarity between these four cracked relics. The bell was forcefully taken from the museum and hauled away 'mid loud acclaim, the other escaped from Mattawewan with great excitement, the other escaped from the Whitehouse some years ago with great noise, and the last made his get-away from the state department amid great uproar. Of all four the bell alone made no noise about it.

Just why so many people went to so much pains to see the crack in the bell, when there were cracks aplenty in the floors and walls of their hovels, alias houses, I shall let the speculators in mysteries explain. Then there were cracks in their shoes and cracks in the plates upon which their frugal meals are served. In fact, everything seemed to be badly cracked, but I don't think the whole doggone business is what it is cracked up to be. It may account for so many respectable people using the pious cuss-word "by-cracky." Just where it came from or what it means I don't profess to know. I am no scholar in philology.

Then again, there is the similarity in patriotism; all this cracked junk is strong on patriotism. Just who put the pay in patriotism I don't know. Most likely the transportation agencies, as they seem to get the pay out of it. Perhaps you will claim that Thaw is no patriot because he never held any office and didn't make a lot of noise about the flag. Well, he kept a lot of patriots on the payroll, so I think he was a true blue "in" patriot, for they certainly "blew in" not only a big hunk of Thaw money, but public money as well. Thaw is the most useless of the four loads of cracked junk. While I make this as a positive statement, I shall positively refuse to argue it because I couldn't prove it. Perhaps if I say he is the most harmless, no one will dispute it, so let that pass. While he is not a dumb-bell, that is, he is not speechless, though he don't make any speeches, which seem to be one point in his favor. What if he made the same noise as the allies progressive party, surely the big dailies would require another front page which nobody would ever read.

It is said the bell rang out a protest against the stamp tax put upon the colonies by "our mother country," and that a cargo of stamps were burned by the colonists. The present administration has put a war stamp tax upon us alleged "free Americans," but the bell rings out no protest—it is cracked—also the other junk relics are silent, though they make noise enough otherwise. Also the people do not seem to protest or even "roast" the political bums who tax us. Perhaps we are cracked too, so the bell is a fitting emblem. Perhaps we are smothered in patriotism, though for my part there seems no reason for it. Just why we pay a war tax when we are neutral and are maintaining peace, is beyond comprehension. It is much like praying for peace and building more murder maps.

The story about Bryan and the President falling out, gives me the squirms. These patriots have a way of pulling off a lot of stunts just to keep us fellows in the uncut excited. Perhaps they are preparing for next year, just as the play was three years ago when the wild man from Oyster Bay pulled off a stunt for to confuse our free Americans and a few million suckers thought all this was on the square. Now again it seems a similar play is up. Bryan talking peace, the other cracked junk bellowing for war, while the jay in the Whitehouse is keeping up his diplomatic humbug. Oh, we are getting patriotism rammed home while a lot of vampires are sating in millions, but the bell is silent and no longer sounds an alarm, and I guess we are cracked too.

BOYS ENJOY OUTING

"Knights of Honor" of Baptist Church Follow River 35 Miles

Members of the "Knights of Honor," a boys organization of the First Baptist church, accompanied by the Rev. W. T. Milleken, spent last week at Mission Landing, 35 miles up the Willamette river from Oregon City. The boys made the trip up against the current in three boats, spent the week in getting sun-burned and eating more than usual, and generally had a good time.

Those who made the trip were Morris Holman, Chester Gillette, Kenneth Ryan, Louis and Conrad Lindhus, Frank Milliken, Martin Lindlie, Charles Lawler, Aldon Linn and Will Etchison. Dr. Milliken said after his return that he had no idea the young men could eat so much, and that a gallon of flapjack mixture and a gallon can filled with mashed potatoes and butter was only a part of the daily bill of fare.

Last Sunday the Rev. C. A. Gottberg, of Bellingham, occupied the Baptist pulpit while Dr. Milliken recovered from the strenuous week's outing.

FIREMEN GET FUNDS.

Business Men and Local Firms Respond to Formal Appeal.

Ample funds to make the Willamette Valley Firemen's Tournament, to be held in the county seat in September, a success were assured this week when the committee of firemen and city councilmen checked over the pledges that had been made. More than a thousand dollars was quickly and willingly subscribed by local businessmen and the superintendents of local industries when the firemen and their chaperones from the council went out on the hunt for assistance, and all concerned were much pleased at the response. With the money pledged the firemen feel that the tournament will be one long to be remembered, and that it will set a new record for "the way to do things" when visitors come to town.

A preliminary canvass for funds, entrusted to the Commercial club and the Live Wires, rather frightened the firemen, as no money was forthcoming. The smoke-eaters, however, feel that the fault lay with the canvassers, and not with the willingness of the businessmen of the community to support the department.

VEDDER GETS PLACE.

Former School Supervisor Chosen Principal at Willamette.

tot isseroStHy-les... -fr panno aar
Brenton Vedder, for several years a school supervisor, has been elected principal of the Willamette school, to fill the vacancy caused by the departure of Frank I. Paul. Mr. Vedder is well known throughout the county as a man of broad intelligence and an earnest advocate of better and truly serviceable schools. His election as principal of Willamette school is regarded as fortunate for the district, and much is expected of him in his new berth.

Willamette school directors are planning to enlarge the playground facilities during the coming year, and expect material aid in this from P. D. Forbes, manual training instructor. Mr. Forbes will probably have the boys in his more advanced classes construct some of the playground apparatus during the fall term of instruction.

Local Teachers Busy

Katharine Bridges, Earl Brough, H. F. Pfingsten and Emily Spulak are representatives of Clackamas county at the summer school of the University of Oregon. Miss Bridges' course includes English literature. Miss Spulak is taking work in botany, Spanish and English literature. Mr. Brough's work is in philosophy and sociology. Mr. Pfingsten is working for the master's degree.

The summer school this year is larger than ever before, and the student body is remarkable in several respects. In the first place, there are half again as many men as women. This is very unusual in summer schools, which are, as a general thing, composed to a very large extent of women school teachers. The men at the Oregon summer school this year are to a very large extent in the prime of life, and according to Dr. Schaffer, director of the school, their average age is thirty years or more. They include numerous county and city superintendents and high school and consolidated school principals who are working for higher degrees and to advance themselves in their profession.

Boys Sleep in Jail.

Eugene Turner and J. C. Drain, boys 15 and 13 years of age, started out Saturday morning from their homes in Portland to walk to Canby, to visit a boy friend. When they got to Oregon City they failed to dodge the watchful police officers, and were locked up for investigation as a number of requests to look for runaways had been received. After sleeping in the city bastille, the youths managed to convince the officers that they had their parents' consent to take the hike, and were released. They arrived in Canby later, none the worse for their adventure.

Home Is Burned.

An exploding lamp last Saturday night set fire to the home of Robert Daniels, near Clackamas station, causing a loss of approximately $4000. Soldiers from the Clackamas rifle range assisted the family in removing considerable household goods. Part of the damage to the Daniels home is covered by insurance. Nobody was
