Local and County Items of Interest to Our Readers

MULINO

A little railroad building the past week has given Mulino a little more lively aspect. The W. V. S. has completed the grade for the spur to the flour, saw and shingle mills. This is a much needed improvement, and is hailed with satisfaction as it will permit the mills to resume operation.

Another quiet and orderly dance was held Saturday night in the new hall.

Mulino Grange held a meeting in the old hall Saturday, the 14th. A sister and two nieces are visiting Mrs. Maple at present.

Some of our citizens are planning a trip to the coast in the near future, we understand.

Slowly, but none the less surely, business on the new railroad is increasing, at least at Mulino, and we hope all along the line.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

There will soon be a regular stampede for the hop fields. Several families will start next week from here. Wiley May, who has been seriously ill the past two weeks, seems some better.

Little Nellie Bierman is quite sick. Mrs. Amanda Hickman is on the sick list this week.

Charles Dickey will move back to his own little cottage on Molalla Avenue.

Mrs. M. M. Hall has rented one of the Brown residences on Molalla Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. French, on Caulfield street, are entertaining several relatives and friends from Washington.

Little Sadie May was very much surprised last Monday when 20 of her little friends came to remind her that it was her ninth birthday. She received quite a number of presents. Mrs. May treated the little folks to cake, sandwiches, lemonade, peaches and cream. Games were played and all had a nice time.

Mr. Clark has assumed the duties of sexton at Mountain View cemetery, and is moving into the residence at the cemetery. Ross Clark and wife will occupy the Clark home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sartin will move in their new home this week. Miss Olive Wilcox, a nurse from the county farm, is spending her vacation with her mother at the Dew-drop Inn.

Miss Elsie Charles is improving nicely and will soon return home. She has been in the St. Vincent's Hospital, at Portland, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Jassen Clarke and Miss Stella Sullivan visited Miss Mary Bottmiller last week.

Edd Grace threshed for Sam Elmer Saturday.

L. Stout is on the sick list.

Miss Elsie Coulter got her arm broke the other day.

CHERRYVILLE

The dry season is here alright. There is one person who can keep cool these days and that is "Lige" Colman, on top of Mt. Hood.

When the planet Venus came peeking around the top of Mt. Hood the other night some people thought it was "Lige" Coleman sending up fire rockets and began to wonder where the fire was.

One or the neighbors has a patch of improved Lima beans that is a wonderful sight. They are already up ten feet on the poles, and are still growing, and are full of blossoms and pods from top to bottom. The question naturally arises how many of them could be raised on a single acre? Probably around 500 bushels, and at usual prices—and they are never cheap—that meaning around $2,000. If care is taken to put them on good rich ground and not plant them until the ground is warm, they are a sure crop.

EVERGREEN

Rev. Broomfield, of Gladstone, preached a very interesting sermon at the schoolhouse last Sunday.

A Mr. Hendricks, of Portland, has erected a dwelling on his five acre tract and moved his family here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Schwartz, of Venerburg, Wash., are visiting relatives here.

Miss Inez Nymman departed Wednesday for her home in Benton county after a six weeks visit with her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. F. Mattson.

Mr. Naye lost quite a few head of cattle recently through some peculiar malady.

The Evergreen Union Sunday school gave an ice cream social Saturday. A good sized crowd was in attendance, and a nice little sum was added to the organ fund.

Rev. E. A. Smith will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday at the schoolhouse. We are sorry to see him go, and we shall miss not only his uplifting sermons, but a good, brotherly friend as well.

Miss Rosella Jones, of Albany, spent a few days visiting in our town.

Harold Paine, A. Steinke and R. Naye have gone to Bar View for an outing.

Roy Mattson is visiting relatives in Benton county.

L. Schwartz, our enterprising young merchant, is adding to and improving his bungalow.

On Saturday the 28th, there will be an ice cream social on the lawn at the Evergreen schoolhouse. Everybody cordially invited.

GLEN ECHO

The W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. Chas. Moran Friday afternoon. After the business was transacted there was discussion regarding future work. Mrs. Ed. Andrews gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the great responsibility that rests on not only the W. C. T. U., but every anti-saloon worker in the nation, who are all looking for nation wide prohibition. The subject of an anti-narcotic campaign was discussed with much enthusiasm.

The ladies of this place are giving a picnic in Mrs. William Gardner's grove as a farewell to Bert Tabor and family, who expect to move to Portland this coming week.

Mrs. E. Erickson, who has been afflicted with rheumatism so long, is no better.

C. Moran's peach orchard is the best orchard this side of Salt Lake, so they say. He is going to erect a dryer to dry the fruit.

SPASM NO. 2

Ready Writer Heaves a Few More at Humble Scribe

Editor Courier: A couple of weeks ago the Wolf Howl man told us that those of us who are doing the hard and useful work were without brains. Now he says that Tom Burke put him up to it. (I had supposed he got it out of the Consular reports.) Something like Jack Rose in the Becker affair, turning state's evidence in hope that the electric jule will go up and down Burke's spinal column. If the case could be clearly established against Burke I would gladly treat him as the English government treated an undesirable citizen of that name. There are, however, two points in the demurer in Tom's favor. First, I don't go in strong on that vicarious atonement stuff; second, George C. Brownell gives us an expert opinion that the person turning state's evidence is unreliable because he is concerned in saving his own precious neck.

Furthermore, the Howler sage tells us that it is a case of eats, and then points with pride that three persons have so far read his dope, and therefore it has the usual patent medicine merit. This explanation gives it the appearance that the boss must have told him that nobody read his stuff, and therefore his weekly pay was a drag; that would mean a vacant chair at the dinner table. Experience has taught me the sensations that belong to such a state of affairs, therefore I can clearly see why a radical remedy was called upon to prevent the impending disaster. Having demonstrated that it is not strictly dead space it is hoped that he is making good whether we workers carry any cellular gray matter under our ragged hats or not.

It also shows that something besides politics makes strange bedfellows. Think of the fellowship of Drs. Morris and Milliken linked to plebeian Stark. Perhaps it is a case of one touch of nature making this whole world kin. Just whether I am to be considered poor dog Tray or are we three sheep exposed to the appetite of a savage wolf is the question.

JOHN STARK.

(Editor's note: There is nothing like letting a man have his say. However, we are inclined to think that Brother Stark got the idea wrong in the first place. Nothing was said in the Courier about people who did hard work having no brains. For the benefit of Mr. Stark and those whom he may have misled, the Courier here-with reprints the original paragraph that caused all the fuss.)

"Now comes the Rev. J. P. Jockinson and remarks: 'Thousands of university men are speaking of the church contemptuously.' 'Dinna worrit sae, mon—thousands of university men are also handling picks and shovels, and twisting controller handles on trolley cars, too, because they haven't any brains.'"

Do you see any reflection on farmers in that?

QUESTION IS ASKED

Correspondent Wants to Know Who Isn't Patronizing Home

Editor Courier: I was much interested in your article in last week's

Courier, entitled "Clackamas is in lucky form." It is a good thing to patronize home trade, and I am glad we are not like Benton county in this respect. I notice that you say that not all of the county officers patronize county merchants and printers, and I would like to know which one does not. I do not think any county officer who fails to help the home merchant should be given the support of the voters. Tell us which one does not do this, and oblige,

W. J. M.

(Editor's note: The Courier at this time does not feel called upon to categorically mention county officials who send to Portland or other places for work that they could get done just as well in Clackamas county. There are county officials who make a practice of ignoring county businessmen, however, and in due time—the Courier will print some interesting records in connection with this matter. In the meantime if our correspondent desires further information on the matter, we suggest that he go to the county courthouse and ask to see the nice, new and pretty books in the "road index system." One of the books is labelled "record of roads." Inquiry as to where these were made, and who ordered them, may satiate the correspondent's curiosity for the time being.

FOREST SERVICE BUSY

Much Developed Work Being Done Within Oregon's Borders

Figures just compiled by the Forest Service covering its work in Oregon for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, show among other things, that the Service has built 85 miles of road, 266 miles of trail, 455 miles of telephone wire, 5 bridges and 27 look-outs.

For administrative purposes the Service has also built in Oregon 24 cabins, 8 barns, 20 miles of pasture fence, and developed 10 springs.

It is the policy of the Service to develop communication as rapidly as funds will permit, not only because roads and trails and telephones mean better protection for the forest wealth which the government is guarding, but because these means of communication also make the National Forests more accessible to the general public. To date in Washington and Oregon, over 4,000 miles each of trail and telephone have been built, and 101 bridges and 55 lookouts have been erected. Of the bridges, 7 are of suspension type.
