WOLF HOWLS

Willie or to be safed from hearing Teddy.

Every now and then ye humble scribe outdoes the village parson in the way he expresses things. Witness these news dispatch from the effete east: "Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch has been notified of the death of her husband, William H. Blatch, who was killed by a live wire here this morning and is hurrying home." In our humble estimate "hurrying home" is quite appropriate there.

We note that another board has been appointed to consider the problem of the jobless. Why not form a few more boards and commissions—and put the jobless on as members. Then there would be no problem.

A beautiful and somewhat mentally excited young lady visited the Courier office last week, and while looking over the plant remarked that it was wonderful how "a drop of ink makes millions think." Then she put her white-silk-gloved hand on the platten of a job press, and when she lifted it, a drop of carmine ink made her "mit" look like "exhibit A" in a murder case. And did the drop of ink make her think? It surely did. And she expressed her thoughts, too. We would print them here—only the postal regulations forbid that kind of language.

A gentleman writing from St. Michael's, Azores Islands, says that there is a great demand there for college catalogues. "Literature in the Portuguese language is desired whenever possible," he adds. We fear he is doomed to disappointment. Our college catalogues are literature, all right—but they are not in Portuguese. Most of them are in Bostonese.

Speaking of Bostonese—did you ever hear a Boston joke? We heard two of them this week, and at risk of losing John Stark's subscription we are going to print one, to-wit as follows: A Boston gentleman died and passed on into the next world. Looking about him he found many things that seemed familiar, and finally he said to a passing shade: "Heaven is not so different from Boston after all, is it." "Maybe not," answered the passing shade, "but this is not Heaven."

And now we will print the other Boston joke, only we advise Doc Morris, our well-known dental and Ford operator, not to read it. This is the second Boston joke, to-wit as follows: "America has been blessed with many great men. There is Washington, who made it a pleasure to fight for one's country; there is Jefferson, who made it a pleasure to live in the land of the free; there is John Marshall, who made it a pleasure to live under our laws; there is Taft, who made it a pleasure to be an ex-president; and there is Henry Ford, who made it a pleasure to walk."

It is a curious thing that a young lady will appear at the beach in a bathing suit that reveals all her charms—or lack of them—and thinks nothing of it; yet how this same young lady will be unduly careful to keep her ankles covered with her skirt when alighting from a streetcar. It is, of course, a question of modesty—but why?

The thing that makes the Oregonian such a "great" newspaper, they tell us, is its distinctive style. Yea, verily. And recently all members of the Oregonian staff were instructed to use the word "night" always, when referring to events that transpired after six o'clock, and never to say "evening." The rule was rigidly enforced until one day the society editor turned in a story dealing with a swell party. In this mention was made of the fact that evening gowns were of more than usual beauty. And a man on the copy desk rose to inquire if the rule was to be still enforced, and if "evening gowns" should be made to read "night gowns." The rule was broken, and the Oregonian deviated from its style.

REV. E. A. SMITH LEAVES

Well Known "Circuit Rider" Gets Charge in Hillsboro

After having been Baptist county missionary in Clackamas county for three and a half years, during which time he endeared himself to the hearts of many folk in this district, the Rev. E. A. Smith will leave Oregon City within a week or so to assume charge of the First Baptist church at Hillsboro, the county seat of Washington county. The best wishes for his success go with Mr. Smith, and his friends here feel sure that he will do good work in his new charge.

Mr. Smith is a true Clackamas county man, having been raised near Oregon City, and obtained most of his preliminary schooling here. Later he went to McMinnville college, and after that attended Rochester Theological seminary. As a pioneer in church fields where there has been difficulty in building up a religious organization, he has been particularly successful, and the present large Baptist churches in Arleta, Oregon; Puyallup, Washington and in Revelstoke, B. C., were founded and obtained their start under his direction.

During the last three years he has been "circuit rider" in this county, and has traveled afoot and on wheels over many hundreds of miles, aiding all who needed him; whether the need was for religious service or manual labor. By his constant service to others he has made himself a host of friends; and by his strict adherence to principles that he believes to be right he has won the respect of all.

County Authorities Might Well Emulate Portland Circumstances

As the result of circumstances surrounding the death of Miss Martha Klaus, the girl whose body was found in Holladay Park early Friday morning, with all evidence pointing to suicide, Deputy Coroner Smith will confer with Sheriff Hurlburt tomorrow to discuss the evils of motorcycle flirtations, with the intention of evolving means to prevent, as far as possible, further such tragedies.

The autopsy revealed a reason for Miss Klaus' suicide, and she is supposed to have been for a motorcycle ride the night before her death, as she was dressed in riding togs.

Too often the attention of the police has been brought to cases where young women have walked home from distant spots in the country, where they had been deserted by their escorts because they would not submit to insulting attentions, and Deputy Coroner Smith hopes that Sheriff Hurlburt may be able to have country roads near Portland patrolled to some degree during pleasant weather.

"This tragedy should be a warning to young girls who think a motorcycle ride at night with a young man whom they know but slightly is a 'lark,'" commented Mr. Smith yesterday. (Portland Oregonian.)

TRIP MUCH ENJOYED

Oregon City Party Finds All Kinds of Roads in State

Earl and Howard Latourette, accompanied by their families, returned this week from an extensive automobile tour of southern and central Oregon and California, during which they did some prospecting along old government trails. The party was away three weeks, and during that time they found good roads, poor roads, and "some roads almost as bad as Main street, Oregon City," according to one of the drivers.

In the course of the trip Crater and Klamath lakes were visited. In crossing the mountains to get from one body of water to the other, the party attempted to follow the old government military road, which is plainly shown upon maps. In real life, however, the road was not as easy to find or follow, and several times the autoists were lost in the mountains. They finally crossed the divide at an altitude of about 8,000 feet, and coming down the slope were forced to follow forest service trails to a large extent.

PIPE NEAR READY

Oregon City's New Water Supply Expected in October

With but six miles more of pipe to be laid in the trenches of the South Fork pure mountain water supply for the county seat, work is now centering on connecting up the line, and in making all ready for the inspection of the aqueduct before the trenches are filled. Most of the remaining six miles is within the steep canyon of the upper Clackamas, and consists entirely of rock work, so that of necessity progress will be slow.

All difficulties in laying the pipe have been overcome, except in the neighborhood of Beaver Creek, where a subterranean flow of water has been tapped by the deep trenching, and pumping will be necessary here to clear the trench so that the pipe can be securely joined. It is expected that this trouble will be eliminated within the next week, and no delay in the schedule so far maintained in the work is expected, so the line should be ready for service in October.

SAD, SAD TRAGEDY

Tale of a Broken Bottle Aired in Milwaukee Court

Jack Randall and H. W. White, who were arrested Monday by Chief Deputy Sheriff Hackett and locked up charged with drinking liquor on a public car, were taken before the justice of the peace at Milwaukee Tuesday morning to answer to the charge. J. E. Hedges officiated as acting district attorney in the absence of Gilbert Hedges, who is on a vacation.

After hearing the evidence to the effect that the men had a bottle of liquor, but that the bottle was dropped on the floor of the interurban car near Oak Grove and was broken, the two men were discharged. Said one of them, after he had heard that his discharge was brought about through lack of evidence—there being no liquor produced—"This is indeed a sad tragedy, and I am the victim of the tragedy; for not only have I been arrested, but the bottle from which I would have been glad to drink, was broken and the booze was wasted on the dirty floor of the car."

The court agreed that it was a tragedy all round.

NEW SCHOOL WORK

Milwaukee Spends $2,500 Fitting out New Departments

When the school year opens in Milwaukee this fall, students of the northern town will have at their disposal one of the best equipped manual training and domestic science departments in the state, and will find experienced teachers in charge. The Milwaukee school directors have outfitted these two departments at a cost of $2,500, and have engaged S. S. Chambers to teach manual training and Miss Blanche Jeffrey to oversee the domestic science department.

Both the new instructors are skilled in their special lines, and have excellent records in the Portland schools. The addition of manual training work and domestic science as complete departments of the Milwaukee schools will do much to attract outside children to the district.

NEWS FROM THE FAIR

Oregon Publicity Department Offers Hints to All Counties

Oregon Building, Panama Fair, San Francisco, Aug. 19.—Any booster or any county in Oregon, or any other force that want to do a great service for this building can do so by furnishing from time to time any new and original idea about how to get publicity and crowds, and then furnish some means of carrying it out. Any county that has anything to give away can make a hit here just as big as their generosity.

COWS RANK HIGH

Blodded Stock in County Shown to Produce Much Milk

According to the report of the Clackamas County Cow Testing association for the month ending May 31, Judge J. U. Campbell has one of the most valuable Holstein's in this section of the Northwest. The animal, four years old, and known as "Beauty," yielded 1038.8 pounds of milk during the period it was under observation, giving the best milk yield of any of the cows tested. In butterfat Beauty produced 54 pounds for the same period.

Another of Judge Campbell's cows, "Hardy," a six-year old Jersey, gave 1307.1 pounds of milk and 53.3 pounds of butterfat.

A registered Guernsey, six years old, owned by A. J. and J. Hughes, made the best record for butterfat during the period, yielding 70.95 pounds. During the 30 days this cow gave 1546.8 pounds of milk.

Another excellent record was made by N. H. Smith's "Kadia F," which yielded 62.83 pounds of butterfat and 1580.8 pounds of milk. Kadia is a four-year old Jersey.

Increasing interest is being shown by county stock raisers in the work of the cow testing association, as it is being realized that the tests show which cows are paying dividends on their upkeep, and which ones are merely "boarders" at the different farms. The work of the association is doing much to improve the grade of local dairy stock, and plans are now underway for an enlargement of the work.

Early in September the association will hold an open meeting near Oregon City, at which time it is expected that arrangements will be made to either take in new members or to form a second organization. At this meeting two federal cattle experts will deliver helpful talks, and experts from the Oregon Agricultural college will also be on hand.

Records made by other cows owned by members of the association during the period mentioned above are as follows:

Owner	Breed	Milk	Butterfat
Ladd Est.	Jersey	1283.9	60.07
Hughes	Guern.	1030.1	55.93
Spangler	Jersey	1120.8	52.93

MOCK WEDDING HELD

Oregon City Folk Have Considerable Fun at Seashore

To while away an evening at Cannon Beach recently a number of Oregon City people and their friends staged a mock wedding, which developed into quite a feature of the social life of the seashore resort. Miss Nora Wilson of Oregon City, under the alias of "Billie Penelope" was the "bride" of the occasion, and "Christopher Engelbrecht" was the "groom," being in real life Carl Jinger, of Portland. Alfred Schares as "Parson Brown" officiated at the ceremony.

Dorothy Hedges was maid of honor appearing as "Hester Spivens," while Miss Margaret Hoyt, of Hillsboro, officiated as flower girl. Dwight Hedges was ring-bearer. Herbert "Kewpie" Zinger, of Portland, was best man for the occasion.

The ceremony was performed at Camp Never-Inn, and the bride was charming in a gown of sheer material and wore a veil which rather did honor to the lace curtain from which it was manufactured. She carried a large bouquet of everlasting tied with white streamers of scarlet ribbon, and mingled with ferns. The flower girl and maid of honor were beautifully gowned in yellow.

Never-Inn was decorated profusely with ferns and Japanese lanterns. After the ceremony, which went off nicely, in spite of the fact there was "time off" for the bride to recover from a faint, an elaborate supper of watermelon was served.

While the supper was in progress, the bride party was surprised by an old-fashioned charivari, in which all the guests from Sylvan Inn took part. The guests were received by the maid of honor and the best man, while the bride and groom were hiding in an adjoining room. After numerous inquiries as to their whereabouts, they made their appearance, and according to custom the bride threw her bouquet, which was caught by Edna Tabor Miller, of Oregon City. In the excitement which followed the bride and groom made their escape, leaving the others of the party to serve refreshments.

The affair afforded a great deal of amusement for those present. Other Oregon City people to enjoy the affair beside those who took active part, were: Mrs. J. E. Hedges, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Miller and son Gordon, Edna Tabor Miller and son "Billy," Mrs. R. H. Tabor, Mrs. Blanche Mautz, Miss Celia McFarlane, Mrs. J. W. Moffatt and son John and daughter, Jean, and Miss Anna Gray.

CHURCH DEDICATED

Scandinavians Occupy New Building at Outlook

The new, commodious Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church in the Swedish colony at Outlook, Clackamas county, Oregon, was dedicated Sunday, August 22nd. An elaborate program was prepared. Several Swedish and American ministers assisted the Rev. John Ovall in the dedication ceremony. The services during the day were: Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock, after which followed divine service; luncheon at 12:00 noon and sermon and dedication at 3:00 p. m. A number of able singers and musicians gave several selections during the day.

This church is one of the numerous churches founded by Mr. Ovall, and indicates the continuous settling of Scandinavian people in this Northwestern country.

STARK'S COMMENTS

One of the city commissioners of Portland is making an attempt to solve the charity problem and incidentally deal with the mysterious question of unemployment. He will work more than union hours if he brings success by such methods as seem at hand. That the powers that be are all at ease over the question can easily be guessed when we remember that this is the busiest time of the year. The prediction is made that conditions will be far worse the coming winter than last. Consequently some plan must be adopted in line with President Harrison's idea "to make the rich secure and the poor content."

Realizing the importance of the importance of the problem I will offer them several plans to meet this perplexing problem under a "money-back guarantee." These public benefactors are at liberty to try any or all of the plans suggested.

Organize prosperity parades and all about "prosperity." Hold public meetings where prosperity editorials from our important papers and interviews from prominent financiers are read. Haul the Liberty Bell around town accompanied by the Fort Vancouver band playing "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Just as soon as the clergy come back from giving us a much needed rest, have the Ministerial Association offer up prayers. Gather up the various church choirs in one assembly and have them sing: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Of course our influential business men may be able to get the president to agree to intervention in Mexico "in the interest of humanity and to protect our interests" where a good many could get shot, or we might load a lot on some boats and send them over towards Europe until they meet a submarine "to uphold our national honor," all of which would greatly relieve the situation. However, something must be done at once to keep these men from starting something themselves.

Perhaps it might also be a good idea to start an inquiry as to whether we should have 24 quarts of beer and two quarts of "red-eye" or just the oooooooooo TAOIN TAOI AOAAA beer. This question is important in the unemployed problem and a campaign should begin at once, as a lot of soft-handed reformers could be employed. The question should be settled by A. D. 2000. By that time everybody who was interested could be fully prepared without "interfering with business." The willing workers could also be convicted of something and put to building roads for "our best people." Those who positively refused to work could be given some public office.

Should all these plans fail to solve the problem, then it would seem that some soft-handed leader should be sent to Europe to study this vexed question. Later on the "Worthy Master" of the state grange and the heads of the other so-called workers' organizations could be appealed to, who could solve it in a manner similar to their famous rural credit plan in say 50 or 100 years.

Now that the masters of bread admit out right to grub, the question arises: how much fodder are we entitled to have? It is important to know how often we are permitted to pass our plate for a "helping." When we of the "lower orders" meet up with the upper "clashes" it is essential that we be instructed properly in et-a-cat. Inasmuch as the captains of industry are pleading guilty of failing to provide honorable employment for all of us it will interest us to know how they are going to mend matters that opportunity for all willing workers shall not again be wanting. Much in fact all of this solution depends upon the attitude of the workers themselves. If a show of disposition to take the management of industry out of the hands of those who have so bungled the job it is a sure sign that grub enough to satisfy our wants will be forthcoming. If we stand back in modest abasement the charity purse will rate high in water, and employment will call for trying conditions. Were the working class informed on the subject of right and justice, they would tell the present masters to abdicate.

As matters stand, the workers will get a big "bum jolly," and in the mean time the masters will be busy for coming events.

What is the object of all this noise about "unpreparedness for war" coming from so many sources? All these same people who thus are clamoring, are also carefully telling us that they are for peace, but—whom do these watchful sentinels fear, think you? What for do they dread? You may see the dreaded enemy by looking straight ahead the next time you apply the razor to your face. This is the opportunity the masters of bread have been looking for when it would be easy to get a big navy and a large increase in the standing army. Hungry men are not reasoning creatures. So it is best to be prepared: a gun in hand is worth a wagon load of brick bats. Not many of you will heed these words, and the time is surely coming when such as I will not be permitted to sound the alarm.

Look at Europe. Do you think this all started in one day? For years preparation has been made. The only class which could have prevented this awful disaster was composed of the workers, had they but understood it. Scores of men and women suffered imprisonment in Germany and Siberia in Russia for giving but a warning. Now the storm is upon them in all its fury. The same causes that brot about the European conflict are working over time in America. The House of Hayes know it and are preparing in haste. In the meantime they are keeping us of the common mold in a sort of a good humor about charity soup, which they propose to put into us. Later we will be in the broth.

They are also entertaining us with ghost stories and patriotic stunts. The man or woman who is not confused by all this noise will see that coming events are casting a dark shadow over this land. Remember this—I have spoken my word of warning. Stand still a moment; look about you at the strange show. There is a reason! Take heed that no man deceive you!
