

GARFIELD CLUB MAKES SUCCESS

ESTACADA FOLK SOLVE PROBLEM OF COUNTRY LIFE
BY CO-OPERATION

ORGANIZATION IS HELP TO ALL

Social Advantages Are Many, but Big Feature is in Community Development Brought About

That Garfield country club, which is composed of farmers and others living in the vicinity of Estacada, has developed into one of the greatest forces in the county for brightening community life in agricultural sections, and lately has attracted considerable attention by the things that it has accomplished for its members and for the district over which its influence is felt. A report upon this club has lately been prepared by members of the faculty of the Oregon Agricultural College; and the following quotations from this report will serve as well as anything to outline the work the club has done so successfully.

The club was organized by G. T. Hunt at a time when community failure confronted Garfield. An attempt has been made to receive care for and entertain properly a large delegation of Portland business men that had planned to conduct one of their boosting excursions in the then newly opened Clackamas territory on the occasion of the completion of the electric railway as far as Estacada, with the idea of aiding in the development of future tributary country. The leading feature of the excursion was to have been a visit to an orchard at that time used as a demonstration fruit farm by the State Agricultural College. The delegation, composed of men and women, was much larger than had been expected, and facilities for transportation and refreshments broke down under the unexpected strain. Staid business men and neatly groomed women were left to struggle up the long hills over dusty roads in the hottest weather, after all available vehicles had been pressed into service. Being of necessity late arrivals at the eating station they also came in for the shortened rations. Following that, they were still at a considerable distance from the orchard, which as a matter of fact, many of them never saw at all. Many people complained of this apparent lack of hospitality, but Mr. Hunt proposed a remedy—a country club that would also serve many other useful purposes.

The day following this about half a dozen men met with Mr. Hunt in the edge of a small forest jungle and formulated the scheme of organization. A portion of the primitive woodland has since been purchased by the club and on it have been erected the club hall, kitchen, horse shed and simple amusement equipment. A still larger portion of the tract, in all five acres, has been cleared of under brush and logs and is being converted into an attractive park. A hand stand, used also as a platform for public speaking and the like, with benches for the members and visitors, has been erected near the mountain spring that supplies water for the grounds. The grounds were bought on credit while the buildings were put up with donated material and labor. Furnishings for the hall and kitchen were also provided with little or no money cost to the club. A piano was bought on installments, but the stoves, tables and dishes are unincumbered property of the club.

Constitution and by-laws are as simple as the general plan of organization. An idea of the broad and undefined privileges of the members may be gathered from the three simple prohibitions—no unbecoming conduct on or about the grounds, no liquor or intoxication on the grounds, and no Sunday dancing. Aside from these restrictions it seems that any member may do whatever he wants to do, and that fact is one of the cohesive factors of the club. Do you want to play baseball? Get a crowd and play it. Would you rather play a more quiet game, cards, dominoes, authors? Then do so. Possibly you prefer a Virginia reel or "chase the buffalo," as you did when in your 'teens; that will be all right, too. But violations of the restrictions are dealt with immediately, and several times persons have been put off the grounds for using liquor. Offenses of this kind are growing rare, and with the exception of occasional rough speech nothing happens to mar the pleasure of friendly intercourse.

What has the club accomplished? It has brought to the people of the country advantages of social, literary and athletic culture, that otherwise are denied to them. It has done much to equalize the advantages of country and city life and even to place the former in the lead, thus doing more than any other one thing, possibly, to check the drift of country children to the cities and towns. It has improved home conditions in that community by

(Continued on Page 8)

PUT THIS AWAY

Information May Come in Handy About Election Day

This is a little story about one of our aspirants for office. Just at present it isn't necessary to say whom it concerns, but later on it may be worth knowing. The story runs about like this:

Once upon a time an attorney in a distant city sent a local attorney some papers to file in a local suit. The attorney filed them, but didn't add his name to them. Then he hunted up the defendant in the action, told him he was in need of a lawyer, and offered to defend him for seventy-five dollars.

The defendant didn't have that much kale on his person, and went out to raise it. He happened to meet another attorney, and to him he told his troubles. The second attorney knew a thing or two, and he wrote to the attorney in the distant city and said he'd like to handle the case locally for him. The attorney in the distant city wrote back that he already had associate counsel, and named him. Then the second local attorney went to the first local attorney and told him he had the letter, and that if he tried to gouge he man he was supposed to prosecute out of $75 for defending him as well, he'd pull the letter.

Which shows that some attorneys are honest.

And also that some others don't care how they get their fees as long as they get them.

Which kind ought to run for office.

EXPERT IS SECURED

Federal Government and O. A. C. to Combine for Farmers

Oregon farmers are to have the services of a farm management specialist in determining the factors of success and those of failure in farming operations in the various agricultural districts of the state. A cooperative agreement has been entered into between Director R. D. Hetzel, of the Agricultural College Extension division, and W. H. Goddard, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, for adding a farm management demonstration bureau to the extension service of the College. H. F. Keyes, an experienced specialist in farm management, who has been transferred from Connecticut to Oregon, to carry on this work under the direction of the College extension service.

Mr. Keyes will make a thorough survey of groups of farms in different parts of the state to determine the factors that contribute to the success of farm operations. The information secured in this way will be forwarded to the College where it will be formulated into working plans and offered to the farmers of the districts considered. In his work here Mr. Keyes will be assisted by county agricultural agents in the eleven counties maintaining them, whose assistance will materially advance the investigations.

HISTORIC RELIC FOUND

Survey Pin, Uncarved Beneath Old Paving on Main Street

A hand-wrought iron pin, of undoubted age, was discovered by workmen engaged in removing the old brick pavement on Main street this week. The pin, which was discovered near the intersection of Eighth and Main streets, was about two feet in length, and originally was probably some two inches in diameter. Rust and time, however, had reduced its original thickness to a considerable degree. The pin was undoubtedly a "corner stake" of some early survey of the site of Oregon City, and probably marked a starting point for measurements of surrounding tracts.

Efforts of Councilman John Albright, who was told of the pin shortly after it was discovered, to have it preserved and turned over to the Historical Society, were frustrated by some careless workman, who threw it in a load of the discarded bricks, and so permitted it to be hauled away. Search for the pin was made by some of the workmen a day or so after its discovery, but up to the time of the Courier's going to press it had not been recovered.

Ed Olds Takes Crack at Schuebel

Oregon City Courier: I see by an item in the Oregon City news of the Telegram that my friend, Christian Schuebel, wants the State of Oregon to buy the land grant land and then sell it to the actual settler at its commercial value after he has robbed the timber from it. I thought Schuebel was honest and I still think so, but I don't believe he knows any better.

I would like to ask him some things. First, if the State of Oregon is not a corporation? Second, was not that suit won from the railroad company because it was trying to sell it in large tracts to the large timber holders, and not to the actual settlers according to contract?

Now Schuebel wants to step in and rob the actual settlers out of their rights, according to the contract, but first of all he wants to steal the timber and give it to the State of Oregon. (What are you going to do with that timber? I suppose give it to the Waurhauser people or the Booth Kelley's.) Don't you know, Brother Schuebel, that according to

(Continued on Page 8)

"SMOKE-EATERS" PLAN GALA TIME

OREGON CITY TO BE HOST TO FIREMEN OF VALLEY COMMUNITIES

EXCITING RACES TO BE HELD

Red-shirted Boys Will Compete in All Kinds of Sports, and Carnival Attractions Will Be Many

It will be a good idea to forget all work and serious duties on September 6 and 7 and come in to the county seat for those two days, for there are surely going to be things doing on those dates.

Why? Well, the Willamette Valley Firemen's Tournament is going to be staged then, and Oregon City will be host to the red-shirted "vamps" from all towns between Corvallis and Astoria. The Oregon City boys are going to "blow in" about $1200 in providing entertainment for the visitors, and there will be $800 in prizes offered for the various teams who will enter the many competitions.

Oregon City, Astoria, Corvallis, Camas, St. Johns and Molalla fire departments will have large delegations on hand, together with some of their apparatus; and it is possible that before the great carnival becomes a reality that Gresham, St. Helens and Vancouver will also get in the game. There will be enough firemen in the county seat, and enough fire-fighting apparatus, to frighten any blaze to death; and besides the real fire-fighters, there will be a whole lot of people here to see the fun. The city will be decorated profusely for the two days, "open house" will generally be kept, and there will be something doing every minute of the time.

So it will pay to come. Among the features already framed are two monster parades, in which a remarkable showing of fire-fighting apparatus will be made. There will also be floats and uniformed bodies of marchers; and if plans work out as is hoped there will be also special carnival features that will be well worth seeing. Then there will be all kinds of sports and races in which the different fire-fighting organizations will participate; and there will be some special races for other people as well. One of the novelties will be a race between a team of "fire-girls" from Astoria and a squad of local lassies, who will try to beat the records made by the boys in showing speed with a hose-cart.

Of course no gathering of firemen is complete without a water fight, and there will be several water fights on the program. Quite a number of the teams that will compete have reputations for their skill with the hose and nozzle, and a pretty good imitation of a Flanders trench battle is assured when these teams get into action. All of the sporting events of the tournament will be staged on the new pavement of the county seat's main highway, so there will not only be a perfect field for the contests, but there will be ample provision for spectators.

Remember the dates, September 6 and 7—and make it a point to be on hand.

ALL "IN SWIM"

Clackamas County Teachers Have Frolic at Oak Grove

About a hundred of the teachers attending the county institute took a holiday the latter part of last week and went to Oak Grove, where there is a real nice and sandy beach on the shores of the Willamette. After watching campers and others sporting in the water awhile, the teachers decided to get "in the swim" too, and there was a rush for bathing suits.

Now be it known that most of the bathing suits at Oak Grove are of the one-piece variety. At first some of the teachers demurred to this, but as there were enough volunteers who were not afraid of one-piece suits to start the crowd, all finally decided to take a chance—and all had a very fine time. Throughout the afternoon the Oak Grove beach was a pretty good imitation of Newport or any other fashionable watering place, and between the one-piece suits and the sparkling solitaire diamonds that glittered on the schoolma'ams' hands, the scene was indeed a brilliant one.

County Superintendent Calavan considered the outing did as much good for the teachers as any other feature of the institute, and henceforth the "annual swim" of the schoolma'ams will be a county feature.

MANY GREET COUPLE

Friends Observe Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Beach

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Beach was celebrated August 20, and among those who took a prominent part in the gaiety of the occasion were members of Meade Post

(Continued on Page 8)

WAR BREAKS HERE

European Conflict Finds Echoes in County Seat This Week

There is trouble in store for the fire committee of the city council in the county seat. Sometime ago Councilman Long told the council that the fire station, otherwise known as the city hall, needed to be repainted, and the council told the fire committee to go ahead with the job.

The building was painted a neutral grey. That was all right, and everybody admired the job. Then this week they painted the doors, and they painted them green—a bright, vivid, Erin-go-brach green.

Into the street rushed Louis Noble, all in eruption. "Look what they've done," he shouted, "they've insulted me. I have my place right next door, and everybody knows that I'm German, and they've gone and plastered that Irish green all over the building. What do they mean? Is Oregon City's fire department all Irish, or is it supposed to be as green as those doors?"

"It means that the Irish and the Dutch are going to get together," volunteered Lee French, who cruised into the field of action.

"Oh, then the fire committee wants the Germans and the Irish and the neutrals to get together and lick the English and the Russians, I suppose," said Justice Sievers, who had been attracted by the discussion.

Unable to settle it, the helligerents decided to refer it to the next meeting of the council, when the fire committee may be asked to explain.

In most cities red is the fire department color. In some cities blue is the police color. In New York green is the color that decorates the lamps at all police stations. Maybe the fire committee was just trying to be original.

MAYBE THIS IS SO

Rumor Has it That Ancient Prophecy Is Found in Streets

Maybe Jack Albright is to blame for this, and maybe he isn't. At any rate there is a story going round the county seat that the other day, when the remains of the bricks were torn up from Main street, preparatory to replacing them with real paving, that an ancient prophecy was found under the pavement. This prophecy, it is said, was wrapped in oiled rattlesnake skin, so that it was well protected, and read as follows:

"Know all men by these presence that the following will as surely come to pass as did the big flood and the day of the big wind, which I foretold five years ago.

"That in the future, and on or about the following dates of time, many strange things will occur, to-wit:

"That in the twentieth century or ten years later, people will be able to go from the river to the end of y old Oregon trail without climbing over the bluff, and that water will support them in their journey through the air.

(Editor's note: Can this refer to the municipal elevator?)

"That the time will come to pass, when our children's children have grown to man's estate, when McLoughlin's settlement will be ruled by one man, who shall be neither king

(Continued on Page 8)

BORING MAN HELD

Edward Sweitzer Charged with Threatening Girl's Life

Edward Sweitzer, a young man of Boring, was arrested by deputy sheriffs in Portland this week charged with having threatened to shoot Miss Catherine Heufert, a former neighbor. The Heufert girl said she met Sweitzer when her family lived next door to his at Boring, and that ever since meeting him he has made violent love to her.

According to the Heufert girl, Sweitzer recently threatened to shoot her if she would not listen to his love-letters, and the girl asked the police to protect her. Sweitzer, it is said, was loitering in the neighborhood of the girl's place of employment when he was taken into custody.

After being arrested, Sweitzer declared that he meant the girl no harm, reiterated that he loved her, and said he would not shoot her for worlds.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Writer Doesn't Like Looks of Latest Federal Scheme

Editor Courier: I see by the daily papers that the Industrial Relations Commission has recommended the purchase by the government of all telephone and telegraph lines controlled by the Western Union, Postal and American Bell companies.

Why shouldn't they?

Presumably the Industrial Relations Commission is bossed by "big business" and will do its will. If there was any likelihood that the telegraph and telephone companies could continue for many years to reap the harvests they have in the past, the commission would probably leave them alone. But as the people are getting wise to their profits, and as the government may at any time investigate the companies as a "trust," it is but natural that these concerns should want to get out from under.

(Continued on Page 8)

G. C. BROWNELL'S PLAN A SUCCESS

LOCAL POLITICIAN BREAKS ANEW INTO PUBLICITY BY HITTING "DRYS"

GETS DATES LISTED AHEAD

Dr. Anderson, of The Dalles, Will Reply to Local Man's Attack on Prohibition Amendment

Last Sunday George C. Brownell reaped the first fruits of his nicely laid scheme to get a boost into the limelight once again, and to get there without having anything out of the deep past hanging to his coat-tails—anything political, that is. Mr. Brownell was accorded the courtesy of the platform in the First Methodist church, and after being introduced by the Rev. T. B. Ford, he paid his respects to the Courier and then launched into a good, old-fashioned prohibition harangue.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Brownell said that he did not intend to be a candidate for office. Mr. Brownell picked his words with much skill in making that statement. He does not "intend" to be a candidate, but should an overpowering pressure be brought to bear upon him to run for some nice job, he has not said he would refuse. Caesar did not "intend" to be emperor of Rome when he framed some of his political backers to offer him a golden crown, and to prove that he didn't "intend" to be emperor, he let them offer him the crown three times. Likewise this T. Roosevelt party probably didn't "intend" to take that third cup of coffee, but he changed his mind—when the coffee showed signs of getting cold.

Before the meeting was over Mr. Brownell had got himself assured of a chance to "appear before the people" in a town further up the valley; a committee of citizens waiting upon him and telling him they would like to have him visit them and tell them what was the matter with the prohibition amendment. Mr. Brownell also got the groundwork laid for a debate with Dr. Anderson, framer of the statewide "prohibition law," which is to go into effect the first of the year. Dr. Anderson got Dr. Ford's permission to reply to Mr. Brownell in the local Methodist church—and the chances are good that George will be on deck when that reply is made.

In his speech on prohibition Mr. Brownell hastened over the criticism of the "prohibition" amendment, and then for the better part of an hour quoted figures from the Anti-Saloon League yearbook. He flayed the Demon Rum in fine style, and made an excellent prohibition speech. But, in spite of that, he failed to convince many of those who heard him that the people of Oregon didn't know what they were voting for when they voted for the "24 quarts of beer and two quarts of hard booze dryness" that is soon to overtake the state of Oregon.

Regarding the Courier Mr. Brownell was quite moderate. Probably he appreciated the publicity the Courier gave him, and hoped it would give him some more. The Courier is now doing that, and it probably will give him more in the future—as need may arise. Replying to the Courier's remarks last week, Mr. Brownell said that he expected to be criticised when he took the stand that he did, and that he didn't mind criticism. The Courier knew this at the time—Mr. Brownell resembles P. T. Barnum in that respect; he'd rather be criticised than not mentioned at all.

So "our George" is now launched well before the public on a campaign which he can switch any way that may be most expedient—"wet," "dry," senatorial or otherwise. He can be labor the prohibition law, as it is called, and can hook onto the Anti-Saloon League kite, if that is worth while—or he can pound the "dry" law and try to get it repealed, for which the "wets" would pay handsomely. Or he can just pose as an "insurgent," and so pile up a following of sorts—just as any "insurgent" can produce a following. Either way the cat jumps, George is in a position to either catch it or dodge its claws. And for a politician, this is an enviable way to be.

Hurray for George!

MERRY CREW VISITORS

Oregon City Given Demonstration of "Down with Drink"

Saturday evening they were going to have a little celebration near Colton in honor of the completion of a big barn—or at least so the report ran in the county seat. In preparation for this celebration Messrs. Hendry Obre, Peter Larsen, John Gustavson, C. Dellon, M. Johnson and Karl Lindahl visited Portland and chartered the touring car driven by Arthur Rickert to transport them and some beer, whiskey and other refreshments

(Continued on Page 8)

CHRIS HAS PLAN

Hon. Mr. Schuebel Offers Solutions of O. & C. Land Grants

The Hon. Christian Schuebel, city attorney of Oregon City, member of the legislature, and candidate for republican nomination for district attorney, also noted prohibitionist and man of positive opinions, has a way out of the Oregon & California land grant tangle, which he will probably spring at the September conference on the middle that has been called by Governor Withycombe. Mr. Schuebel's solution is two-fold; if one plan doesn't suit, he has another.

First of all, Mr. Schuebel is in favor of having the state buy the lands from the Oregon & California railroad at $2.50 an acre, and then sell them to settlers and place the profit in the irreducible school fund.

Secondly, in the event of the first plan not being accepted, Mr. Schuebel would have the government buy the land for Oregon, sell it to settlers, and turn the profit over to the irreducible school fund.

Mr. Schuebel seems to be sure there will be a profit, and thinks it should go to the irreducible school fund. Considering Oregon's most crying need, quite a number of people are wondering why Mr. Schuebel would not prefer to have the "profit" turned over to the purpose of building good roads.

Also, some folks are wondering how it comes that Mr. Schuebel is sure there is going to be a profit? And why wouldn't it be just as good for Oregon to throw the lands open to settlement, if they are bought from the railroad—and so fill up some of the wilderness that decorates the western part of the state?

WHAT IT DID

Merchant Gives His Views of Last Wholesale Liquor Arrest

An Oregon City merchant commented this week upon the recent arrest of an automobile party for drinking liquor in the city. His remarks show the "other side of the case."

"If we are going to have a dry town, we ought to have it 'dry' all right," he said, "but this business of grabbing six farmers who were passing through with a lot of beer for their homes is going it pretty strong. The city gets $110 in fines from the bunch, it is true—but what do the merchants get? We get more than $110 in fines—for every one of those farmers has women folk who traded here formerly, and they'll all be in now and say 'Well, I can't trade here any more. You arrested my men folk and fined them $110, so you can't expect me to patronize your town. Hereafter I'll go to Portland when I want to do some shopping.' You can't blame them for that, either."

Several of the county seat business-men have said that as long as the law permits beer and liquor to be shipped in, they think that the city should overlook cases in which farmers are passing through the city with supplies for their homes, and not arrest them and impose such heavy fines.

CLERK EXPLAINS LAW

County Official Reminds Foreign-born Folk of Voting Qualification

County Clerk Harrington has issued the following memorandum for the benefit of foreign-born residents of the county who may desire to vote at the coming elections.

"Any persons of foreign birth, desiring to make application for final papers, must do so on or before November 9th, 1915, in order to become a citizen so that he may vote at the primaries held in May of next year. You are no doubt aware that the law has been changed so that a person of foreign birth, who has not become a citizen by parentage, must have his final papers before registering to vote. The new registration system will begin on January 3rd of next year, and all naturalized citizens will be required to present their second papers or certificates of citizenship when making application to register.

"If you have any acquaintances who are desirous of taking out their final papers, would be grateful to you if you would inform them that the time is short for making such application, if they desire to register and vote at the primaries held in May of next year."

GOOD WATER WANTED

Milwaukie Folk Vote for Bull Run; Turn Down Local Plants

At a special bond election held in Milwaukie last Saturday the citizens, by an overwhelming majority, endorsed the issue of $25,000 in bonds to complete the installation of a municipal water system, using Bull Run water taken from the Portland mains at Errol station. Part of the money for Bull Run water are already in place, and the bond issue voted is to provide a distributing system.

At the same election the people, by almost as large a majority as they gave Bull Run water, voted against the purchase of the three local water companies for a total of $20,000. With the exception of the Sellwood company, it was generally felt that the

(Continued on Page 8)

ROADS, POLITICS AND SOME PEEVE

VARIOUS COUNTY FOLK ARE STIRRED UP OVER HIGHWAY WORK

BOND ISSUE SCHEME UP ANEW

General Impression, However, is that Discussion of Subject Will Eventually Bring Results

Ever since "Uncle Billy" Mattson came out of the twilight sleep and said that the road supervisor system wasn't any good in this county, and that the county court was considering dividing the county into four road districts and putting a competent roadmaster in charge of each division, the air has been filled with remarks on roads. Here in Clackamas county there is always a considerable sprinkling of road remarks in the atmosphere—but the recent remarks have been of a different kind, and a number of them have been practical.

County Judge Anderson has come out firmly for better roads, and has announced that he would favor the laying of an economical bituminous macadam—a road that has given excellent service in this county whenever it has been tried, and that has stood up well even under automobile traffic. The Courier last week said it was glad that Judge Anderson had taken this stand, and the Courier is with the judge from now on for bituminous macadam. The county can afford to lay this kind of road, it will be found serviceable, and it will be a big step forward in opening up this county to a fuller settlement and development.

Commissioner Knight, who lives down Canby way, and who has some property along the main road running south through the county, thinks it would be nice to "hard surface" the Pacific Highway, and to start the hard surfacing at the Pudding river. The Courier doesn't share this view exactly—it thinks that the county ought to do its best for the roads that the farmers use first of all—and leave the Pacific Highway to get its share of improvement in its regular turn.

Regarding the abolishing of the supervisor system—the Courier has always believed that the supervisor system was a waste of money and a hotbed of political favoritism. The scheme outlined by Commissioner Mattson would be a hundred times more preferable, and would produce much better roads. It is whispered, of course, that if the county should be divided into four districts, one of the districts would be handed over to the tender mercies of Ed Olds, of Oak Grove. The Courier doesn't believe that the county court would do any such thing—if the county court does away with the road supervisor plan and substitutes the four districts, it will not risk its political neck by playing favorites for Ed's benefit.

The Enterprise, as was to be expected, has seized upon the renewal of interest in roads to boost the old bond issue plan; and daily yawns its head off for a revival of the 20-year indebtment plan that will make the roads cost twice as much as is apparently paid for them. The Enterprise doesn't like the idea of an oil-macadam road, or a bituminous macadam highway, because the county could lay that sort of road without opening up any chance for an advertising campaign backed by a patent-paying company. However, in spite of itself, the Enterprise is doing its share in bringing out anew the waste in the old road system—so its bond-issue leanings may be pardoned for the time being.

And now, in the course of the general house-cleaning and washing of old road linen, it transpires that the Honorable Christian Schuebel has added a little more woe to the county court in road matters. From reports at hand it appears that Chris told the county court that a new law passed recently by the legislature, provided that 66 2-3 percent of all road monies collected in incorporated towns in the county should be given to the towns. As a matter of fact, with the excep-

(Continued on Page 8)

WOMAN IS HURT

Runaway at Tualatin Proves Serious to Mrs. Smith Turner

Frightened by a passing freight train, a team of horses which Mrs. Smith Turner was driving past Tualatin Station Saturday night became unmanageable and dashed madly down the road. In the wagon drawn by the horses were three children, aside from Mrs. Turner; and all four were thrown out.

Two of the children escaped with but minor bruises, one had a finger broken, and Mrs. Turner sustained a fracture of the shoulder and internal injuries.

A number of men were lounging about the station at the time of the runaway, but made no effort to assist the woman or children in the wagon.