A SALON DIALOGUE

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

"What a pity it is," said Betty Chamberlin to me, "that Harry Ashurst is going to throw himself away on that Perkins girl!"

"What's the matter with Ida Perkins?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing," replied Betty, "only she's not half good enough for Harry."

"Why don't you interrupt the proceedings?"

"How could I do that?"

"Step in between them."

"You flatterer! One would think to hear you talk that I could have any man I want for the asking."

"So you could and not half try."

"Betty tried hard to conceal the pleasure my appreciation of her powers gave her, but failed."

"There's one man I couldn't!"

"Who?"

"The first letter of his first name is J."

"That's because you never tried."

"My first name is James."

"Perhaps I will."

"What would poor Harry do in the meanwhile? He would be swallowed up by Ida Perkins."

"Oh, that affair could wait."

"When are you going to begin on me?"

"You? Oh, you can wait too. Good morning. Come and see me soon. I have things to tell you."

"Very soon. Goodbye!"

This scrap of conversation, which I am free to admit was not concentrated wisdom, occurred at the glove counter of Jones, where I met Miss Chamberlin. The next time I saw her was at Mrs. Winters' salon, so called from the brilliant dialogues that take place there. Betty was tied to Ashurst. He was a graduate of a scientific school and could drown her in a pool of ideas seven feet deep. In a sandwiched between two girls directly behind them. We conversed with one another, but had our ears open for what Ashurst and Betty were saying. One of the girls beside me was Ida Perkins. The only remark that could be considered to refer to the couple in front of us was made by Ida. It was this:

"Why do you bright men get stuck in the honey of stupid girls?"

"Leave out the 'you,' and I will answer the question," I replied.

But she wouldn't, and I confess I would not have been pleased if she had.

Betty made a lodgment with Ashurst at that salon, and this is the way she did it.

"I have heard, Mr. Ashurst," she was saying, "that you are not one of the kind to feel certain of anything and that you never force your opinions on any one."

"Confound those persons who know everything!" grunted Ashurst.

"So say I—that is, I mean persons who don't know as much as other persons who know a great deal, but are not constantly trying to show it off."

This was a trifle mixed, but Ashurst didn't seem to mind it.

"Some of the women here make me laugh," Betty went on. "They think they're quite wise. Don't they tire you, Mr. Ashurst?"

"I don't know; some of them do."

"I heard one of them just now talking about the big European war. She said the allies had the best generals, only they had been short of ammunition."

"Which allies?"

"Why, I suppose she meant—the three more than one ally?"

I saw Ida Perkins and Belle Townsend—Belle was the other side of the sandwich that had me for a middle—look at each other. Fortunately for Betty a lady passed her, bidding her good evening and making a remark about the weather. So Bet was not obliged to go any further into the military problems of the great war. Indeed, it had not been her intention to do so. She had become inadvertently drawn into it by attempting to hold up one of her rivals in an unfavorable light.

"Are you fond of motoring, Mr. Ashurst?" was her next remark. "I don't suppose you are. At least no busy man as you are is likely to have time to enjoy himself."

Ashurst was the scientific adviser of a gigantic manufacturing corporation. He looked relieved that Betty should have spared him the trouble of answering the question she had asked him. Bet has beautiful eyes and knows that they serve her a better purpose than her tongue, for unfortunately the latter member cannot wag without drawing on her brain.

"The reason why I asked you if you were fond of motoring is that I have a car, and if you could spare me some afternoon about 4 o'clock—"

"I should be very happy," was the reply.

"Don't you think an ice would cool us? These rooms are very warm."

They arose and went elsewhere. Bet had caught sight of Ida in rather too close proximity to suit her.

The next time I saw Betty I congratulated her on her engagement to Ashurst. "Didn't I tell you?" I said, "that you could if you tried?"

"What's this I hear about you and Ida Perkins?" she asked, looking at me anxiously.

"Oh, we're engaged too."

I have never since regained the place I occupied in Betty's good graces. I don't see why. Surely she could not have Ashurst and me too. Perhaps if I had married any but the girl she robbed of another man she might have remained my friend.

has to be met. This source of infection is declared by C. E. Stewart, fruit inspector of Lane County, to be worse than fruit trees and that if it could be eliminated danger of spread would be placed at a minimum. He thinks it would be a good thing to compel the destruction of every wild crabapple tree in the county, if that were possible. Of course the policy would have to be extended to every other county in which the disease has appeared, and include other native hosts, notably the hawthorn, service berry and mountain ash.

WASTE IS CHARGED

Congressman Tavenner Says Too Much Is Paid for Ammunition

Discussing the gigantic profits of the "ammunition ring," composed of several of the big steel firms led by the Bethlehem, Carnegie and Midvale plants, Congressman Clyde H. Tavenner recently inquired as to waste of public moneys through overpayments for ammunition, saying in part:

"Why has the War Department been paying the ring $17.50 for a 3.8-inch common shrapnel when it can manufacture and is manufacturing the identical article at Frankford for $7.94? Seventeen dollars and fifty cents is more than twice $7.94. The Government could manufacture two shrapnel for the price it has been paying for the private manufacturers for one and have $1.62 remaining to the people's credit on each transaction. Is it any wonder we do not have as much ammunition as we should have for the money that has been expended? It is the public funds that are being spent here, and the people have a right to have these questions answered."

"We are manufacturing a 31-second combination fuse in the Government arsenal for $2.92 for which we have been paying the ring $7."

"These illustrations are not exceptional, as I will endeavor to show by the fact that on a contract given to Frankford Arsenal for ammunition valued at $1,900,064 we are saving $979,840; or, in other words, we are saving approximately $1,000,000 on a $2,000,000 order as compared with what it would cost had that contract been awarded the ammunition ring. Does not a showing such as this warrant a policy of turning the really big orders over to government manufacturers instead of allowing the war traffickers to charge us practically any price they may agree upon between themselves?"

"In a recent speech before Congress President Wilson stated that like good stewards, we should account for every dollar of our appropriations as to make it perfectly evident what it was spent for and in what way it was spent." Surely no such thought was in the minds of the Army and Navy officials who have been doing the purchasing for those departments.

"The reason this matter deserves the immediate attention of the American taxpayers is that the cost of militarism in this country has been growing faster than the average man even dreams. In 1890 the annual cost of our Navy was $20,000,000. To-day it is $140,000,000. There is no use to ask the reader to stop and try to realize how much money $140,000,000 is, because it is an absolute physical impossibility for the human mind to do it."

WEST LINN SCARED

Brush Fire Threatens County's Newest City Monday Night

Fanned by a high wind that blew from the north, a brush fire that broke out on the west side road Monday evening spread rapidly in a southerly direction, and for a time threatened to spread to houses in West Linn. Directly in the path of the flames stretched the power line of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, and a crew was hastily sent out from Station A to keep the poles from igniting and dropping the high voltage wires to the ground.

A change in the wind late in the evening shifted the direction of the fire back from the river, and no damage of any seriousness was done in the limits of West Linn. The fire burned all night, illuminating the western sky, and was not extinguished until a shower fell Tuesday afternoon. Even after the light rain, glowing embers remained as a menace to nearby property.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting, spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Harvest Time in Shantung. Now, come and see a harvest in Shantung. Here, too, it is the time of supreme interest to the whole family. Life in the country is practically measured by so many wheat harvests, and every old man and woman hopes to live to see one more. For weeks before all plans are made with reference to it. Carpentry, masonry, work of every kind must either be finished before "pulling wheat time" or laid aside at that time to wait until the harvest is over. No matter how important in the eyes of a foreign resident the work in hand may become, he cannot beg or buy his workmen to continue when once the wheat is ripe. In the hospitals all the patients want to get well by wheat pulling time. Some must stay on, but many a one incapacitated in hand or foot for real work goes home to take his or her place in "watching the gate," that all the rest of the family may go to the field and thrashing floor.—Christian Herald.

The Irish of the Balkans.

The Serbians are the Irish of southeastern Europe, with all the virtues and some of the weaknesses of the Irish people. They are especially proud of their national poetry, which they possess as no other nation possesses in modern times, for they still have their national bard—men who live by making national songs, not highly cultured poets, but men in the street. They do not go to a newspaper to report what they hear, but to the next inn or coffee house, and there take up their instruments to recite what they have to say. Virtually our bards are ancient reporters. The old ones sing. Those of the present day stenograph. The Serb language is the richest and most musical of the Slav dialects. The Russian language has that reputation, but it is not so musical and clear and rich.—Miyatovich, Serb minister to England, in the Manchester Guardian.

Clouded Windows.

Many people have a window or a part of one which they would like barred to the too curious gaze of passers-by or, possibly, of neighbors.

This can be managed by prettily crystallizing the window glass as follows: Fill a jam pot one-third full of gum arabic and add a little hot water. Let this soak for some hours and when the gum has quite dissolved add the same quantity of epsom salts. Then stand the jam pot in a basin of hot water and stir well until the salt has quite dissolved. Apply the mixture to the glass quickly with a camel's hair brush.

The effect is like crystallized ground glass, and, while light is admitted, no one can see through it. The effect of plain ground glass is obtained by using a linen rag instead of a brush and putting the preparation on thinly.—Exchange.

It Was a Nice Stone.

General Sir John Younghusband, the well known writer on military subjects, was once cleverly victimized by some Indian natives. At a village where he was encamping the dusky inhabitants brought to his tent a number of sapphire-like stones which they stated had been dug up at a spot some distance from the village. Sir John was convinced that he had luckily hit on a treasure mine. He bought every stone the natives possessed.

"I had dreams of boundless wealth," said Sir John when relating the story, "and on my arrival at Calcutta I hastened to have the stones valued. 'Lovely color, light, perfect, not a flaw, worth 50 guineas apiece—if they were not made of Birmingham paste!' was the expert's crushing criticism."—London Tatler.

Story of a Postal Card.

Don't despise the badly written postal card, moralizes a writer in Business. He received a card that was written in a scrawl and showed signs of having been in the writer's pocket for some time after he had signed it. But it was answered just as if it had been written by a reputable business man. And it was. It seemed that the card had been hastily written on the cars, put into the merchant's pocket, discovered several days later and then mailed. "We have since," concludes the writer, "done a very nice business with this man."

His Music Room.

"And you call this your music room?" "Yes."

"But there are no musical instruments in it?"

"No. It's so constructed that I can't hear any of the surrounding music that may be turned on from time to time."—Violin World.

A Lesson in English.

Teacher—Now, Clarence, can you tell me what "can't" is the abbreviation of? Clarence—It's the abbreviation of "cannot." Teacher—That's right. Now, Edgar, what is "don't" the abbreviation of? Edgar—"Doughnut."—Chicago News.

Try to Deserve It.

Contentment in old age is deserved by him alone who has not lost faith in what is good, his persevering strength of will and his desire for active employment.—Turgeneff.

"Did he? My dear fellow, you ought to see his face."

Spray for Tomato Aphids

The tomato aphid is a small, dark green insect that attacks the tomato frequently in Oregon, and less often the potato, says A. L. Lovet, assistant entomologist of the Agricultural College. It does not often occur in injurious numbers, but when it does the contact sprays as employed for similar aphids will prove effective in the control of this aphid.

SUNDAY AT BEACH

Oak Grove Offers Many Attractions and Some Extras 6

Pretty close to a thousand people found the sandy beach at Oak Grove Sunday of this week, and spent the day wallowing in the warm waters of the Willamette. Among the rich and haughty people who "motored" to the resort were the Hon. Christian Schuebel and party, from the county seat; and among the humble who walked down through the dust were Ed Olds, Rex Lampman, the unofficial press agent of Oak Grove, did not go down, but remained on his front porch, drinking lemonade that he kept cool by leaving it in jars in the family wash-tub.

The thousand people who visited the beach disported themselves in the water as the spirit moved them. One of the thousand, a Meier & Frank clerk, respondent in a white bathing suit, and equipped with "water wings," got out beyond his depth and had to call for help three times before he was hauled ashore. A beautiful lady of some twenty summers and about 32 winters, lolled all afternoon on the sand in a striking black bathing suit, but was careful never to go near the water. Other beautiful young ladies were not so particular, and went in swimming to their own joy and to the joy of all beholders.

And along about seven in the evening a gentleman with long whiskers and a scattering of white hair on the sides of his head, revealed the secret of popularity of Oak Grove beach. Said he:

"This place is just like the seashore—with one exception. It costs ten dollars to get to the seashore, but it only costs ten cents to get here."

Aside from that, and from what has already been said, a cute blond found out that Oak Grove beach had yet another attraction, when she pulled up from the sandy bottom a perfectly good and alive crawfish attached to one of her darling little toes.

BERRY JUICE PLEASES

Willamette Valley Drink Wins Friends At Frisco Fair

Panama-Pacific Fair, Sept. 2:—The Willamette Valley loganberry and prune are being demonstrated semi-occasionally and that both are in great favor is evidenced by the number of grocers now coming to book orders or to get information. In a two-hour demonstration one day last week no less than thirty-three loganberry juice orders were taken. This juice is being demonstrated at the Emporium, the largest department store in San Francisco, and there is no question in the minds of any but that this product, with proper exploitation, will develop plants in Oregon that will require all the loganberries possible to raise even in this prolific region.

AID FOR BOYS

Free Courses at Agricultural College Are Planned

Opportunity will be offered to 25 Oregon boys to attend the Agricultural College summer camp school, all expenses paid, if the plans now under way mature successfully. N. A. Maris, of the State Educational department, and F. L. Griffin, state agent of boys' and girls' industrial clubs, have agreed upon the general features of the plan, which provides for sending the winner of each of the 25 main and subdivision projects in which the industrial club work is to be carried this year, to the popular Boys' Short Course at the College next summer. It is the plan of the departments to have all expenses of every winner fully paid from the time he leaves until he returns, no matter what part of the state he comes from.

Demented Man Taken

Thomas Randolph Fisher, 32 years of age, of Portland, was picked up for the second time within a month by the sheriff this week, and was held at the county jail pending a decision as to what is best for him. Fisher has been living with his parents in Portland, but has several times broken away from their care and wandered about the country. Two weeks ago he was taken in charge near Damascus and returned to his people; and this week was found wandering near Molalla, where many women were frightened by his appearance. He may be sent to the asylum if it is found that his people cannot control him.
