FIRE PROGRAM READY

Many Events Planned for Two-Day Tournament at County Seat

Oregon City's firemen, who will be hosts to the Willamette Valley Firemen's association at the big annual tournament, September 6 and 7, have planned a big series of competitive events for the gala occasion; and a wealth of prize money has been offered. In addition to this a number of fine cups and trophies have been put up by various firms and individuals interested in the fire-fighters, so there will be plenty of impetus for the various teams to do their best.

The festivities will open Monday morning at half past nine with a monster parade of local and visiting fire apparatus; and while the local "smoke eaters" are not making any promises, it is rumored that some of the Portland professional fire-fighters may be on hand with a sample of their automobile apparatus. The parade will be the signal for everybody to get ready to see the "big doings;" the completed program for which is as follows:

Monday, September 6, 10:30 a. m.—Straightaway wet test; prizes, first $40; second, $20; third, $100. 11:30, exhibition drill by Corvallis fire department. 1:30 p. m., Siamese race; prizes, first, $15; second, $10; third, $5. 3 p. m., New York test; prizes, first, $40; second, $20; third, $10. 4 p. m., patching leaky hose; prizes, first, $7.50; second, $5; third, $2.50. 5 p. m., ladder race; prizes, first, $15; second, $10; third, $5. 5:30 p. m., water fight; prizes, first, $12; second $12; third, $8; fourth, $8.

COUNCILMAN IS ROBBED

Henry M. Templeton Loses Porch Decorations in Night

Councilman Henry M. Templeton, who sharpens lawn-mowers for the city, and who lives at 619 Fifth street, some months ago leaped into fame when he recommended to the Oregon City rulers that the night police force be cut down. Mr. Templeton has now changed his mind, and thinks there ought to be more policemen on the hill.

The reason for this change of mind on Mr. Templeton's part is that recently some persons to him unknown have sneaked upon his premises in the stilly hours of the night, and removed therefrom several beautiful and valuable plants. Mr. Templeton says that he does not mind having admiring citizens occasionally pick a bouttonierre from his flowers; but he seriously objects to having people come in the night time and uproot plants that he has nourished and raised from infancy.

All marauders are hereby warned by Mr. Templeton that if any more plants disappear from his premises, he will ask the council to appoint twelve special policemen to watch gardens on the hill during the night.

FARMERS FIGHT FIRE

Blaze Near Molalla Put out after Prolonged Battle

A forest fire last week between Trout and Pine creeks, in the Molalla country, was kept from spreading to heavy timber only by the exertions of ranchers living in the vicinity, who turned out and fought the blaze for several hours. When first discovered the fire had not gained much headway, but before a brigade of fire-fighters could reach the scene the flames found ample food in the dry underbrush, and gained a substantial start.

Lack of wind greatly aided the work of the volunteers who fought the fire, and while the heat and smoke were stifling on all sides, the men and boys stuck bravely to their task, and after half a day's battle had all sparks beaten out. Had prompt action not been taken, the fire would have got into heavy timber, and might have presented an extrmely difficult and costly problem.

"DRY" TALK PLANNED

J. E. Anderson, of The Dalles, to Speak Here Sunday Night

In answer to the attack upon the statewide prohibition law recently made by George C. Brownell, Dr. J. E. Anderson, author of the measure, will speak in the First Mehtodist church, Oregon City, next Sunday evening. The Rev. T. B .Ford offered Dr. Anderson the privilege of the pulpit at the time M. Brownell attacked the law and Sunday was the first open date that the man from The Dalles could meet.

The reply of Dr. Anderson to the charges made by Mr. Brownell will have nothing to do with the additional meeting at which the law will be discussed in the Baptist church, when Anti-Saloon league officials will give their viewpoint of the situation that wll confront the state on the first of he new year.

River Service Hurt

Low water in the upper Willamette is seriously delaying boat service between Oregon City and Salem, there being several bars over which the vessels have to "line." Dredging on the upper river is badly needed, and boat men are trying to arrange to have the government do some immediate work on the worst gravel bars.

BILL MISSES CHANCE

Aspirant for Office Neglects Opportunity to Show Independence

William E. Stone, who hopes to get the republican nomination for district attorney, has missed one of the best campaign chances offered, according to astute politicians of the county. Mr. Stone, whose long association with George C. Brownell has made many people regard him as "Brownell's candidate," should have broken into print opposing Mr. Brownell's view of the statewide dry law, say the political experts.

"By keeping still about the fuss George is raising," said one political war horse this week, "Bill has put himself in the position of being in sympathy with George on the liquor question. If Bill had rushed into print opposing George, it would have looked as if he had really quit partnership with him; and a near-fight could have been staged between Bill and George that would have been good campaign dope. However, Bill didn't see the chance—probably because George himself didn't see it—and now people will think that Bill is largely guided by George's view of the situation. It would have been fine politics for Bill to attack George on this prohibition matter; it would have tended to make him solid with those who distrust George. But by keeping still Bill has passed up this opportunity—and if he hops to it now, everybody will think that somebody tipped him off to the big chance, and people will doubt his sincerity."

DEATH LIST GROWS

"Water Wings" Drown Girl in River and Endanger Another

Because of a misplaced confidence in "water wings," Miss Ruth Boyle, 13 years old, drowned in the Willamette river at Newberg Tuesday; another young woman who was swimming with the "aid" of these treacherous contraptions was nearly drowned; and Louis Sable, a laborer, from Michigan, was drowned while endeavoring to rescue Miss Boyle. The fatalities occurred near the Ray hopyard.

Miss Boyle was swimming well beyond her depth, relying on the "water wings" to keep her afloat. The inflated bags collapsed when she needed them most, and her cries and struggles attracted Sable, who plunged in after her. He was unable to swim well enough to support the struggling girl, and she dragged him down with her. The bodies were later recovered, and the funerals will be held at Newberg.

TRAVELS LONG WAY

Bird Flies from New York to Macksburg, It Appears

Bruno Kraxberger had the pleasure of capturing a sea gull on the Molalla on Sunday. The bird bore a tag inscribed "Metropolitan Museum, New York" and had no doubt been set free from that city.. What its course may have been in reaching the Molalla river, near Macksburg must, of course be left to conjecture. As the gulls invariably keep in the track of vessels to feed upon the waste food that goes into the sea, it is safe to presume that his journey was not overland but must have been either round Cape Horn or through the Panama Canal. He most likely got into the wake of a coast steamer bound for Portland and being attracted by some means into the Willamette, drifted finally into the Molalla.—(Canby Herald.)

ONE MAN BOOSTS

Oregon City Citizen Tries to Help State Exhibit at Fair

Hidden away in four pages of "news" about the Benson Day celebration at the Panama fair, the Oregon Commission's weekly letter this week also mentions that:

"W. S. Bair, of Oregon City, has sent down some fine potatoes now shown at the Agriiultural Palace. Another shipment of potatoes was unfit to show."

The daily papers of last week and the week previous told us all about the Benson celebration, so it was wasted effort for the Oregon Commission to rehash it. However, the fact that an Oregon City man did something for the better advertising of the state is real news, and we are glad that the commission at the fair saw fit to spread the tidings broadcast.

GIRL NEARLY DROWNS

Puts Faith in "Water Wings," and is Barely Saved in Time

These cute little "water wings" don't always work as they should, and as the pretty advertisements say they work. If you think they do, ask Miss Mary Swope, a county seat telephone operator, who went bathing at Canemah last week, and trusted to "water wings" to carry her on a 75-foot swim from the shore to a log raft.

When she was within about 20 feet of the raft the "wings" collapsed, and Miss Swope, who couldn't swim without them, started for the bottom of the Willamette. Fred Haines, who was watching her from the shore, went to her rescue, and was nearly drowned for his chivalry. Others went to his rescue, however, and Miss Swope and the useless "water wings" were eventually brought back to land.

After Gas Company

Councilman Hackett has called the attention of the council to the fact that the Portland Gas & Coke company has not always left streets in good condition after laying pipe, and the company has been asked to rectify things at once.

COUNTY COURT MEETS

Guy T. Hunt and "Forty-Eleven" Supervisors Enliven Session

September term of the county court opened Wednesday, and there was something doing every minute. Guy T. Hunt, of Estacada, and Grant B. Dimick, of the county seat, nearly had a fight over the amount of the county fair fund that was to be given to the East Clackamas County fair; and after the fuss was all over it was discovered that Estacada had been awarded its share of the fund some weeks ago.

A majority of the 60 odd road supervisors—60 odd, not "odd road supervisors"—were on hand to find out if the county court was going to adopt Commissioner Mattoon's plan of abolishing the supervisor system and dividing the county instead into four road districts. They had a lot to say about it, but didn't learn anything definite.

Routine matters were taken up in between spasms, and a record day's business was done.

BOY IS KILLED

Youth Touches High Voltage Wire With Hat, Drops Dead

Melvin A. Larsen, working on a section gang on the Cazadero division of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, climbed one of the steel poles that carry the 60,000 volt transmission line near Anderson station Saturday afternoon. Companions called to him to come down and to beware of the big copper wires, but young Larsen didn't believe that the wires were as deadly as they have the reputation of being; and to prove his theory, touched one of them with his hat.

There was a flash of blue flame, and Larsen's dead body dropped 40 feet to the ground. His father, employed in the same section gang, heard of the accident, and rushed to the scene. All he could do was to arrange for an undertaker to take charge of the body. Larsen and his son are farmers in this county.

MOLALLA DOING WELL

Second Crop Strawberries Now in Market Show Up Well

Mr. Pringle Shaw has been placing strawberries on the marrket this week. He raises the Marshals. He had a very good spring crop. After the berry harvest, he mowed the vines close to the ground, and the rains which fell started them to grow and they made a phenominal growth for this season of the year. They blossomed and matured a good many berries which is the second crop for the season.—(Molalla Pioneer.)

Bohemian Hop Outlook

Under date of July 14, Consul Wallace J. Young, of Carlsbad, reports that the stand of new hop vines in that section of Bohemia is most satisfactory, and that with a continuance of favorable weather there will be an excellent crop and an early one.

GRANGE HEARD FROM

Agricultural Expert Not Definitely Favored, Say Writers

A. C. Thomas, and James Bell, secretary, of Sandy Grange 392 ,have written to the Courier to correct an impression which has been spread regarding the action of Pomona grange at its July meeting at Sandy with the local. Messrs. Thomas and Bell say that final action on recommending the employment of an agricultural expert was not taken at the July meeting, but that the subject was left open for further discussion at the Ocober meeting.

Sandy grange, at its August meeting, went on record as being opposed to the employment of such an expert "as it was the opinion of the grange that we have too many experts in the business of taking our taxes already without visible results"—to quote the letter.

Pore hin Street

For over forty years the house at present occupied by Mrs. Thompson, at Seventh and High street, Oregon City, enjoyed the distinction of having its front porch, three trees and its fence in the street. When Seventh street was cut through to the bluff the fence, trees and porch were cut off and subsequent investigation showed that the old McLoughlin plat indicated that the porch, trees and fence had no business there in the first place. This came out when Mrs. Thompson balked at an assessment of $1632 on a property valuation of $2700, and asked the council to reduce the assessment to $1350. The charges against the property are for the betterments on Seventh and High streets.

Fines Total $120

The report of Chief Shaw, of the county seat police department, shows that fines amounting to $120 were collected by the city from prisoners arrested during August. There were 15 arrests, 19 meals were served inmates of the jail, and 43 hoboes were given night's lodging. Licenses added $57 to the amount taken in for fines.

Hackett Looks Ahead

Councilman Hackett is opposed to the promiscuous vacation of alleys, for he says that the city will need them some day. Owing to this applications for the vacation of alleys in blocks 21 and 18 were laid over at this week's council session, and will be investigated by the street committee.

MILL RESUMES WORK

Milwaukie Plant, Long Idle, Once Again Employing Men

The Milwaukie shingle mill of the L. B. Menefee Lumber company resumed operations this week after a long period of idleness. When working full-handed the mill gives employment to between 40 and 50 men, most of them residents of Milwaukie and Island. When the shingle market is not booming at present, the Menefee concern is planning to make a market of its own by putting out a heavier shingle than usual. The reopening of the mill will mean much to Milwaukie people.

Worked for Courier 10 Years Ago

H. M. Coudict, of Guthrie, Okla., passed through here today on his way home from San Francisco, where he went as a delegate to the International Typographical convention held in that city August 13 and 14th.

Mr. Condict was employed as printer at the Courier in 1906, then owned and published by A. W. Cheney. The Courier was located at that time where the Oregon City Creamery is now situated.

Mr. Condict has made numerous stops over the country on his way from Frisco, and reports that business is on the boom.

Help for Miller

City Engineer Miller has been empowered by the council to hire an assistant to help him in checking up the Main street and Sewer District Ten assessment lists. The work will probably take two weeks.

WAR PRISONERS' THEATER.

English Captives In German Prison Camp Give a Show.

The following story of life in a German prison camp was issued a few days ago by the German information service as proof that Germany is kind to the enemies who fall into German hands. The translation reads:

"On the evening of the day on which Lord Kitchener stated before the British parliament that English prisoners in Germany were harshly used a vaudeville performance by the prisoners and for the prisoners took place in the camp at Ruhleben, says the Berliner Tageblatt. The program gives evidence of good humor, which could scarcely exist with bad treatment.

"The commandant of the camp sanctioned the performance, and from the program it is seen that the prisoners among whom there are well known artists, made the performance a very jolly affair. To be sure, one must not conclude from this that the prisoners receive any preferential treatment The vaudeville performance in Ruhleben is simply one of the many proofs that the treatment of prisoners is governed by the strict principles of justice and humanity."

The Word "Canvassing."

How "canvassing" got its election significance is a puzzle. The word appears originally to have meant tossing in a canvas or blanket and thence generally mishandling or assaulting. "I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat," is the Duke of Gloucester's threat to the bishop of Winchester in "King Henry VI." The next stage of meaning was that of destructive criticism, from which to thorough discussion—"canvassing" a subject—was simple enough. But how exactly did it arrive at the election sense? Dr. Johnson explained that the term meant "trying votes previously to the decision" and derived it from "canvas, as it signifies a sieve."

USEFULNESS.

It is a great satisfaction at the close of life to feel that you have lived not for yourself alone, but that you have been useful to others. You may be assured also that the same feeling is a source of comfort and happiness at any period of life. Nothing in this world is so good as usefulness. It tends to the improvement of your own character.

Making Alloys Is an Art.

Great art is requisite in making alloys. It is true that they are readily formed by melting metals together in a crucible or in properly constructed furnaces, but it is necessary to insure perfect fusion and to prevent loss Zinc is a volatile, inflammable metal and easily catches fire. Indeed, it is not at all uncommon to find that two alloys of exactly the same component parts differ very materially in properties in consequence of a difference in the mode of preparation or in the care bestowed upon them.

Meyerbeer and Thunder.

Meyerbeer, like Handel, composed best in a thunderstorm. He had a room made at the top of his house with glass roof and sides, so that he might enjoy these conditions to the full whenever they presented themselves. It is said that no beast of the field, no raven or nightjar, could scent the approach of a storm more unerringly than Meyerbeer, and nothing was allowed to interfere with his solitary enjoyment of it when it arrived. Wherever he was he would leave at the first premonitory rumble.

Decline In Status.

"I heard Mabel say when she was engaged that she had selected the very flower of her admirers. I wonder what particular one she likened him to?"

"Well, when they were first married she considered him the very pink of perfection, but now the baby has put his nose out of joint, he's just a plain poppy."—Baltimore American.

COUNCIL BACKS GOOD ROAD PLAN

burst, Mr. Templeton maintained modest silence when the finance committee report showed that he was to get two dollars for repairing two city lawn mowers.

A delegation from the W. C. T. U. was in the council chamber to discover what had happened to the proposed city ordinance regulating the age of admission to pool halls. City Attorney Schuebel gladdened their hearts by discovering a hitherto unknown ordinance, passed May 29, 1911, providing that no minor should be permitted in any pool hall within the city; and that minors in such places, or pool hall proprietors who permitted them to be present, might be fined $50 or given 25 days in jail. At the request of the delgation, Mayor Jones ordered the chief to rigidly enforce these provisions—and the chief went out and proceeded to cut down pool hall revenues one-third.

Application of property owners on Division street for an appropriation of $50 to piece out the paving of their street was denied on motion of Mr. Templeton, who said "the street ends somewhere now, and will always have an end. If we piece it out with a plank, we will have to keep on piecing it out indefinitely."

Estimates for the improvements of downtown side streets, as prepared by the city engineer, were accepted, and resolution of intention to pave in each case was adopted, Property omners will have 15 days in which to protest. The estimates for the cost of the wrok are as follows:

Third street, $2450.70; Fourth street, $2589.30; Fifth street $2268.00; Sixth street, $1798.40; Seventh street, from Main to end of bridge, $137; Eighth street, $2327.85; Ninth street, $2477.45; Tenth street from Main to present end of street, $1195.45; and six alleys, titalling $1776.60. The figures on all streets but Seventh and Tenth include improvements on both sides of Main street; making a grand total of $17,020.75 for the further improvement of downtown streets in the county seat. This improvement, if done, will be at the expense of property holders.

Upon recommendation of the city engineer $4800 was ordered paid the Worswick concern on account of the Main street job as far as completed up to the last day of August.

An ordinance appropriating $3,150 for a direct pipeline from the new South Fork reservoir to the base of the elevator, to run the municipal lift, was up for first reading. This ordinance passed once, but owing to a mistake in the minutes, saying it had been defeated, it has to go through the mill again. Councilman Hackett tried to kill this appropriation, and was assisted by Councilman Cox and Templeton; but in spite of the trio of "noes" it went on to second reading.

Improvement of Seventh and Tenth streets, from Main street east to the railroad, was ordered by the final passage of ordinances, and bids for the work were called.

The much discussed junk ordinance, which has bobbed in and out of council proceedings for a couple of months, was killed after Councilman Albright had proclaimed that "there are a couple of attorneys in this town who can put their fingers on the noses of some of these councilmen, and they'll vote for any old thing." Mr. Albright didn't say who the councilmen were, but Templetin, Metzner, Meyer and Cox voted for the junk ordinance.

In the course of the real funny stuff that goes with every council meeting, Councilman Templeton called for members of the council who read the Oregon City papers to make themselves known. Three raised their hands. Councilman Templeton then volunteered the happy thought that there was no use in putting notices in the papers "as nobody reads them."

Councilman Albright suggested that the city buy a three-seated motorcycle for the use of Mr. Templeton and the street committee, so they could get around and do their work.

Discussion of the advisablity of asking the Worswick people to work "overtime" in the Main street job, so it could be finished for the firemen's tournament, reminded Mr. Hackett that the council itself was working overtime, and the bunch promptly adjourned.

CARVER "STRIKE STORY" DENIED

beautiful sob story as absolute fabrication, when interviewed by the Courier this week; and added that he deply regretted the apparent desire to "knock" his road evidenced in certain quarters.

"There has been no trouble with labor on the road at all," said Mr Carver, "and we have been paving the same scale of wages on the work right along. I do not know of any large body of men that has stopped work; in fact only one man has been laid off—and he was a foreman whose work was for the time being completed."

Mr. Carver reports that construction of the line has progressed most favorably, and that the only point where any delay has been met has been at the Bybee avenue crossing of the Southern Pacific, in Portland. With every expectation of an early adjustment of this trouble, Mr. Carver expects to have service on the line into Portland by October.

"The only point where we have been even temporarily held up," said Mr. Carver, "is at the crossing of the Southern Pacific. At Bybee avenue we will tunnel under their tracks, and negotiations are now under way to utilize the Southern Pacific right-of-way until this tunnel is completed. If we can do this, we will have service into Portland within a month. In view of this the plan of establishing a 'shuttle' service between Clackamas and Milwaukie has been abandoned, as it would be useless to start this short service for only a brief period. We are getting ahead as rapidly as we can, and if we make arrangements with the Southern Pacific, we will have Portland service established well before this winter."

Ballasting of the line as far as completed is going on rapidly, and the track is now in first class shape for the greater part of the road's mileage. Two engines are in constant service on the road, hauling gravel and construction trains, and some high speed is being developed over portions of the track, showing that the roadbed is in tip-top condition.

Residents of the Clackamas valley are eager for active operation of the line, as it will furnish them with quick and direct communication with Portland markets. A large amount of farm and dairy produce will be handled as freight on the road as soon as the trains are put in operation, and judging from comments made by Clackamas valley folk, the line will have a heavy passenger patronage as well.
