FRANK STURGIS PAYS HIS BILL

VISITOR DROPS INTO SHOP AND RELIEVES HIS MIND
ON MANY SUBJECTS

OPINIONS OF COUNTRY TOLD

Courier Staff Is Entertained Unexpectedly by "Professional Nomad" from Ohio

The Courier has before now remarked that many strange things come into a newspaper office. And during the past week we have had an assortment of samples. First there was Mr. Lynch, who wanted assistance to reach his invalid aunt in California, and who was willing to do any kind of work. We told him so he could get a job laying hot-stuff on Main street, but he said his lungs couldn't stand tar smoke—and he went.

Then there wandered in Pete Hen-nesy, who said he used to work on the New York Sun, and who declared that at one time he had been "chief police reporter" on the New York Herald. He wanted a handout for a meal, and he got it.

And when, in the midst of the firemen's tournament, a gentleman of apparent leisure and some travel blew in, we expected a similar request.
Judge of our surprise when the visitor said:

"I'm Frank Sturgis, and I want to subscribe to your paper."

We put on our best editorial smile and extended him the glad hand, and he laid thirteen pennies, two nickels and a dime on the office counter.

"I don't know how long that will buy the paper for," said he, "but give me a receipt, and as long as its paid for send the paper to my mother at this address."

He shoved out a piece of paper with a Cleveland, Ohio, address upon it.
Continuing, he discoursed as follows:

"You see, I'm a professional nomad. I travel till I get tired. If I get tired near home, I go to mother's and read all the papers that have accumulated for me. And they are my mighty interesting souvenirs of my trips. Mother saves them for me.
Sometimes I don't get home for a couple of years, but I usually try to head into the old roost just about November, and so get turkey for Thanksgiving."

"As I go about this country I talk to the newspaper boys, and when I have the price I subscribe for the papers. That's how I get my winter's reading, see? But never mind that, I want to tell you what I've heard."

"This trip I'm on my way home from California, where I went to see the fairs. Down at San Diego I had good luck, and got a job as a 'wild man from the Philippines' for a couple of weeks. But at San Francisco I couldn't even get a hand-out.
They are so tight at that fair there that even the cops have to pay to get in. Coming out of Frisco there were 138 other fellows on the same freight train, and they all agreed that California was no place for a poor man.
It may be all right for tourists, but only the kind that smell of gasoline."

"Coming up into Oregon things got different. This side of Ashland the 'shacks' on the train didn't even try to collect fare from us 'side door passengers,' and in some of the towns the cops would even come down to camp at night and drink some of our coffee. When we got up into the hop country some of the constables bothered us a bit, and tried to get us to go to work picking lice off the vines, but most of us old-timers said our fingers were sore, and they let us beat it out on the next train."

"And I want to tell you this about Oregon: you're sure got a lot of honest people here. Why, in one town—I don't care to tell you the name—they actually leave dimes in the milk bottles over night for the milkman to get in the morning. No, that dime I gave you didn't come that way; I found it on the sidewalk down here by the merry-go-round. But as I was saying, you've got a lot of honest people in this state, it seems to me.
I got into one town on a Sunday, and they were holding a revival meeting.
I went in to get out of the sun, and the guy who's doing the preaching sees me, and asks me to help him pass the plate. I guess he thought my clothes and face would make a hit with the audience—he was preaching something about the lost sheep.
Well, I passed the plate, all right, and when I gave it back to the guy, he didn't even look into it, to see how much was there. He made me so ashamed by his actions that I dug down in my jeans and gave him half a dollar I'd held out on him."

"You what," we interjected.
"Yes, I did. I split even with him.
I palmed that half and two-bit pieces, and I thought it was only fair since he'd trusted me to cut it in two with him."

"What did you hear about prosperity," we asked him.

"Do you mean what I did hear about it, or what did I see? I know

MILITARY COST IS UNREASONABLE

CONGRESSMAN TAVENNER, OF ILLINOIS, QUOTES FIG-URES IN ARGUMENT

WASTE OF FUNDS APPARENT

As Compared with Old World Nations, United States Does Not Get Value Received for Outlay

That the United States is paying for her military and naval defenses at a rate far in excess of any other nation, and is getting less for the money, is shown by Congressman Clyde Tavenner, of Illinois, who has prepared a summary of figures on the government's "war" expenses that is truly surprising. Congressman Taven-ner believes that the United States should have an adequate army and navy; but is emphatically protesting against the lavish payment of huge sums annually to the various firms engaged in manufacturing army and navy supplies.

Congressman Tavenner is conducting a campaign for government-owned munition factories, for federal armor-plate plants, and for a complete revolution of army and navy affairs in this country. He would have all the "war" business strictly confined to the government's hands, so that private concerns that form the "war trust" cannot profit from the nation's endeavors to keep preparing for international emergencies that may arise. Some of the figures cited by Congressman Tavenner in support of his argument are as follows:

"The increase in the cost of our Army and Navy in the last 20 years is enough to stagger the imagination and baffle the senses. The cost of our Army and Navy is greater in proportion to its size than that of any other nation on earth. The increase in cost is absolutely abnormal when considered in proportion to the increase in our population, or the increase in wealth, or when considered with the increased cost of preparation for war in other countries in time of peace. In this connection it is legitimate to ask to what extent the awful increase in cost is due to the systematic agitating of possibility of war by those who profit financially from the ever-increasing expenditures of the military branches of our government."

"In the last 30 years our population has increased 85 per cent, our wealth 185 per cent, and our expenditures 400 per cent."

"During the 15 years prior to the Spanish-American War our annual appropriations for the Navy ranged from $14,000,000 to $30,000,000, and for the Army less than $25,000,000, averaging for both less than $50,000, 000."

"In 1883 our appropriation for the Navy was $14,903,559; in 1890, approximately $29,000,000; in 1914, $140,000,000. Our appropriations for the Army and Navy combined for the ensuing year will be in the neighborhood of $240,000,000."

"During the year 1912 our entire revenue, not including postal receipts, amounted to $702,000,000. Of this we expended $654,000,000 or 67.88 per

what you mean. You mean did I see the honest laboring man carrying the full dinner pail? I did. But he was carrying the pail full of bolts and nuts that he had swiped from the mill, and that he was going to hock for the price of a steak. But it ain't the fault of the administration. And you can't make the people think it is. Everybody that I talked to is solid for Wilson and the democrats, and they are all quoting Thomas Edison and his prophecy of seven years of good times. They all know what's the matter, and they are blaming the war in Europe, and the fact that sewing machine factories are turning out shells, instead of sewing machines."

"That's the trouble with us people —we want to make money too fast.
Instead of minding our own business and manufacturing the things we need; why just as soon as war breaks out we all try to make stuff for the Germans and the Allies. The farmers hold their wheat for higher prices that they expect will come from the war, and everybody stops working and tries to figure out some way of getting a piece of change. If we'd forgot the war, and mind our own business, and make and buy our own stuff we'd all be just as well off as we were before, and there wouldn't be any hard times. Look at me, now—I'm not trying to make a piece of money by inventing a flying machine for the Italians, and I've got as much money as I ever had."

"Well, don't let me keep you from work. I've got to slop along. I don't like the looks of your sheriff—somebody tipped me to him down the street—and he looks as if he'd take me for a hobo and throw me in.
Goodbye, and don't forget to send the paper to mother as long as its paid for."

FIREMEN ENJOY HARD CONTESTS

CORVALLIS LEADS IN NUMBER OF POINTS WON, WITH OREGON CITY NEXT

ST. JOHNS BOYS LEAVE EARLY

Big Crowds Witness Exciting Events of First Two Days of Week in the County Seat

With the Corvallis Firemen's band playing upon every opportunity, and in between opportunities, too, the Willamette Valley Firemen's tournament held in the county seat Monday and Tuesday of this week was a success from start to finish. Big crowds visited the city on each of the days and watched with bated breath every event on the program; while the informal amusements offered more than kept visitors busy during the time not filled by the firemen.

Corvallis took the honors of the meet, with a total of 48 points to their credit. Oregon City came second with the final tallies were made, making 35 points, and St. Johns ended the list with 17 points. St. Johns would undoubtedly have made a better showing than this if its team had remained for the second day's events, but the Peninsular boys had to go home after Labor Day, and so were handicapped.

Many of the events were so closely contested that the judges had the greatest difficulty in picking the winners. Often men of the opposing teams finished neck and neck; and throughout the entire program the best of effort was put forth by every man in the races and tests. The water fights were spectacular and were not settled till the last minute; and at no time was there any evidence of any team or contestants "quitting cold."

It was generally regretted that a large turnout of volunteer firemen were not on hand. Some of the teams expected to enter the program found it impossible to reach the county seat; but those that did come made up for what they lacked in numbers by the fine spirit they put into their work. Oregon City tried to show all its visitors a good time, and in return the visiting firemen did everything in their power to entertain the crowds of spectators.

Features of the tournament that deserves more than ordinary mention were the two water fights; the ladder contest, in which some fine work was done at an imaginary fire in the Electric Hotel, and the banquet Monday night. All present voted that the feast was one of the most enjoyable that they had partaken of; and the speeches of the occasion showed that warm goodfellowship was the ruling spirit.

The tournament had its funny sides, too. Fire Chief Jack Frost, of the county seat, resigned three times during the progress of the program; but nobody minded it, and when Jack finally kept on being chief after the resignations nothing was said about it. Then, at the banquet, no invitations were sent local newspapermen, and the nearest thing to representation that "the press" had was young Riches, who writes for the Journal.
Riches says that he was invited, but there are those who say he just "fronted in." And in the water fights it is reported that some people in the crowds got as much of a ducking as the opposing teams; but that was to be expected.

Taken all together, the tournament was a success from every viewpoint, and none of the local boys begrudge the Corvallis "smoke-eaters" the laurels that they won. The Corvallis team came here in the best of condition, they were fine men, and they won by sheer superiority. And in winning they made friends, for there was never a more sportsmanlike aggregation in any meeting of volunteer firemen.

CITY GETS $25

Man Arrested with Suitcase Filled With Beer Pays Fine

The most famous man in the court records of the world—none other than "John Doe" himself—was arrested Monday evening in the county seat for violating ordinance No. 680. This ordinance is more familiarly known as the Jones anti-beer measure, and is Oregon City's adopted version of the coming statewide prohibition law.
John Doe had a suitcase in which were 12 bottles of beer and a bottle of port.
Patrolmen Cooke and Woodward rounded up John Doe at a dance and locked him up in the city jail. Tuesday morning he was arraigned before Recorder Loder and taxed $25, which he paid with a grin and at once departed. It is some time since "John Doe" has figured in a case that has ended in a fine; but John's money looked just as good to Oregon City as if he had told his real name, so they let it go at that.

COUNTY COURT BALKS

Proposal to Hard Surface Mile of Road Not Well Received

Delegations from the county seat, Gladstone and Parkplace visited the county court Friday of last week and urged the adoption of the offer of the Standard Paving company, to lay a mile of Worswick paving on the Oregon City-Gladstone road at a cost of $1 a yard. After hearing arguments in favor of the scheme, and after reading a resolution of the Oregon City council, favoring the plan and offering Oregon City's share of the road funds as part payment, the county court turned the matter down.

Judge Anderson said he would be glad to try the scheme, only the county had no money to spare, and road appropriations for the year had already been spent. Commissioner Mattoon was willing to have the work done; but Commissioner Knight really blocked the plan, by holding out for improvements in the south end of the county, where he has property.
Mr. Knight said that he would like to see some samples of hard surface road, but thought they would look best on the road between Canby and the Pudding river.

While the action of the county court did not take the form of a positive refusal of the requests of the several delegations on hand, it is not believed that the commissioners will take any other action on the matter in the near future.

BLIND PIG FOUND?

Eight and a Half Quarts of Booze Discovered by Police

The bright eyes of Patrolman George Woodward were responsible for the discovery of what city authorities believe to be a "blind pig" run by John Dickens, in rooms at Fourth and Main street. Dickens was arrested Monday of this week and held for investigation. Following his arrest his rooms were searched by Chief Shaw, and eight full quart bottles of whiskey and a half emptied bottle of the same beverage were found.

Dickens came to grief because Patrolman Woodward had spotted F. A.
Maars coming from the place with "something on his hip." Woodward grabbed Maars, who later admitted having purchased the whiskey from the Fourth street place, and who is accused of having made three separate purchases on different occasions.
He will be persecuted for each purchase, and is at present under $225 bail. Maars says that he got the whiskey for another man, and was not going to use it himself.

AUTO TURNS OVER

Former Residents of Oregon City Hurt on Road near Camas

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Toban, formerly well known residents of the county seat, but now living at Camas, had a narrow escape from death Sunday afternoon when their automobile skid-ded and upset on the highway near Camas, Washington. Members of the family in Oregon City, alarmed at first news of the accident, hastened to the Washington town to be of any assistance possible; but were relieved upon arriving there to find that early reports had been considerably exaggerated.

Mr. and Mrs. Toban were returning from a picnic, and struck a wet stretch of road, on a slight grade.
In trying to slow down the car the brakes locked the wheels, and the car skidded against one side of the road, turning over when the wheels struck the gutter. Both Mr. Toban and his wife were badly shaken up, and Mr.
Toban had two ribs broken. Mrs.
Toban sustained a fracture of one rib. After medical attention both were resting easily.

SHERIFF IS SHOWED

Mr. Wilson Presented with Bottle of Cream in County Jail

William J. Wilson, who works in the sheriff's office with Mr. Hackett, was presented with a bottle of fine, rich and fresh cream Wednesday by P. I.
McKinney, of Canby. The presentation came as a great surprise to Mr.
Wilson, who was not expecting any such attention.

The ceremony occurred some three hours after Mr. Wilson had returned from Canby with Mr. McKinney. Mr.
McKinney spent the intervening time sitting quietly in the sheriff's office.
About noon Mr. Wilson took his visitor down to the county jail, and brought him a bottle of cream, among other things for dinner.

Mr. McKinney removed the cap of the bottle, and exclaiming in an eloquent voice: "The Lord tells me to do this," broke the bottle of cream over the sheriff's head.

Later he went to Salem to sojourn in the asylum.

As Eugene Sees It

An Oregon City preacher walked from the beach to his home and on the way drifted to a farm that needed harvest hands. He spent the day out in the open under the hot sun working until the farmer's usual "closing time." Today he is going to preach on "The Open Road." Probably he desires to warn his congregation against taking side trips.—

FAIR PROMISES MANY FEATURES

COUNTY'S BEST LIVESTOCK TO BE ON DISPLAY AT BIG
CANBY EXHIBITION

FOUR BANDS TO GIVE MUSIC

Clackamas Fair This Year Will Offer Many Proofs of Great Resource-es of Lower Willamette

(By Nan Cochran)
The Clackamas County Fair, to be held at Canby, Oregon, from September 20th to 23rd, inclusive, promises to be one of the best fairs that has been given by the Clackamas County Fair Association, and many of the livestock men are already enthusiastic over the big event, and are applying to the secretary, Ward B. Lawton, of Oregon City, for space. A. I. and J.
Hughes, well known breeders of the Guernseys, are to have in all 17 head of their pureblooded stock, while John Riches and son, who are also breeders of the Guernseys, are to exhibit four head.

John T. Whalley, of Portland, will send four of his choice herd, and N.
C. Jamison, of Clackamas county, who is the owner of several head of Guernseys at Corvallis, is contemplating bringing some of his stock to the show. Mr. Jamison, who is tester of the Clackamas County Cow Testing Association, is very enthusiastic over the dairying industry in the county.

N. H. Smith, the well known breeder of Jerseys, will have some of his famous stock on hand. Charles Rider, who resides near Oregon City, will exhibit a Guernsey bull, and Frank Hutchinson will bring his Guernsey bull. Never before has there been a stronger competition for the prizes offered in the Guernsey class than this year.

The Dimick Stock Farm at Hubbard, Oregon, will have their pen at the fair grounds filled to capacity with some of their choice Poland Chinas; and E. R. Gregory, whose farm is located about four miles from this city, is planning to have some of his Berkshires and O. L. C. Swine, with which he is specializing. He will also enter some of his finest poultry.

Mrs. Bertha M. Story, who was awarded many premiums at the recent Southwest Washington Fair on her poultry, is to have a large number of pens of her choicest birds. Other bird fanciers are contemplating exhibiting, including breeders from many sections of Oregon and Washington.

The bands that are to furnish the music for the four days are the Canby, on the first day, this being Canby day; Tuesday, Oregon City day, when the Moose band has been engaged; Wednesday, Molalla day, the Molalla band, and Thursday, the last day of the fair, and which will be Juvenile day, when special attractions will be arranged, the music will be furnished by the Hubbard band. All of these musical organizations are among the best in the state, and there is no doubt but they will be drawing crowds. There will be a large delegation from Oregon City to go to the fair on Oregon City day.

The horse races are to be a great drawing feature, also the Maximo high jumping dogs and the Browning Amusement company, while many concessions are to be on the grounds.
Among the granges that have already applied for space are, Molalla and Warner, and these two organizations are to compete for the prizes in this class. There is no doubt but that Mt. Pleasant will be represented by the Mt. Pleasant Civic Improvement Club.

There will be several individual farm exhibits which will compete for prizes offered in their class, while a number of business houses will be represented by attractive booths.
Among these from this city who are contemplating having booths are the Western Stock Journal, L. Adams, Pacific Highway Garage and the Oregon City Shoe Store.

Mr. Fortune returned from Seio on Wednesday evening, and was successful in securing some of the best racing horses in the Northwest, including the following: Pacers—"Chiquita," with a record of 2:10 1/4; "Sunny Jim," 2:11 1/4; "Grace N," 2:10, and several other pacers; trotters—"Zon Dell," 2:16; "King Zombro," 2:12 1/4; "Boise de Arc," 2:18 1/4; "King L," 2:16 1/4; runners—"Noted Campaign-er," "Sterling," "Marshall," "Whits," "Leo H.," "Mobile," "Midget," "Le-tricia S.," and several others. These are only a few of the racing horses, and Mr. Fortune states that this year's events will be among the great drawing cards and will be the best races ever given on the Clackamas County fair grounds. Mr. Fortune is well known throughout the Northwest as one of the best horsemen, and it is through his untiring efforts that these great racers have been secured.

The following is a portion of the programme that has been arranged

HERE IS A REAL BRILLIANT IDEA

CHANCE FOR OREGON CITY TO SHOW THAT IT IS A LIVE
TOWN WITH BIG SPIRIT

CELEBRATE BIG IMPROVEM'TS

Suggestion Made that County Seat Exhibit Its Water System and New Paving in Proper Style

Why shouldn't Oregon City wake up and show the world what it has?

What has Oregon City got?
Well, at the time when this celebration ought to be pulled off, Oregon City will have the finest water supply system in the Willamette valley; and it will also have a brand new pavement of first class grade on its chief business street.

It ought to celebrate those achievements.

It ought to seize the opportunity not only to show people these things, but it ought to show them the other things that it has—the big industrial plants, the tremendous water power of its falls, and the great agricultural country that lies behind it.

It doesn't need a world's fair to do this. All it needs is a little "get-together" and some advertising.

When New York first decided to celebrate the three-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Hudson river, it planned to hold the most unique world's fair ever imagined.
It wasn't going to build a single "exhibition palace," it wasn't going to have any "fair grounds"—it was simply going to keep open house, and let everybody see what had happened at the mouth of the Hudson river in 300 years. New York figured that itself was enough of a "world's fair," and was a sufficient example of progress.

THERE IS NO REASON WHY
OREGON CITY SHOULD NOT ADOPT THIS IDEA.

Oregon City needn't go to any expense except decorating for the occasion. All the town needs to do is to wake up, to get together, and to really plan something, aside from a councilmanic fight.

The big day ought to be set for a Wednesday, so that a council meeting could close it with a laugh, and leave everybody good natured. The day ought to open with a gala welcoming of the water from the South Fork of the Clackamas as it bubbles through the pipes and springs in a fine, sparkling spray from the fountain at the old city water plant.

There ought to be a queen and maids of honor elected by popular vote—get that? Popular vote. The queen ought to draw a goblet of sparkling pure mountain water and pass it to the guests of honor, who would drink to the health of Oregon City's future.

Then there ought to be a parade of all that Oregon City has got to show, including its jitney. After that the city ought to keep open house for a day, so that visitors here could see what this county seat really has to make it great. Th big mills, the big power station, every business house, ought to be open free to visitors all day long, with guides on hand to tell people what is being made, and to show them how it is made.

Oregon City has some of the most interesting plants in the world, but visitors usually don't see them. It has the great paper mills, that make everything from the delicate tissue paper wraps that come on the finest oranges and peaches to great, heavy rolls of the toughest wrapping paper manufactured. It has the great woolen mills, where a myriad of products are daily turned out. It has a foundry, dairies, wholesale and retail houses—and all of these should be exploited to entertain visitors on this day of celebration.

The city ought to call attention to its paving and it ought to be arranged to have an exhibit of the crops and produce raised in the territory surrounding it. Oregon City has lots to show people, lots to tell them about, and lots of past history of the early Northwest connected with it.
All this ought to be exploited—and people ought to be invited here from all points on the Pacific slope. The celebration could be made so unique that it would be advertised as NEWS in all the Northwestern papers—and if the thing were rightly handled, Oregon City could get so much beneficial publicity that a new era of activity and prosperity would be ushered in.

THIS IS NO IDLE DREAM. It can all be done. And it all ought to be done. All that is needed is for folk to get together, for people to forget the petty bickerings of the past, for everybody to turn to the future, and to pull hard for a new Oregon City and a new Oregon City
spirit.

And, at the same time, Oregon City would have something to show people, something that would be worth seeing, and something of

"ECONOMY" YET RULES COUNCIL

TEMPLETON, VAN AUKEN, COX AND HACKETT LINE UP AGAINST ELEVATOR

BOND SALE IS TURNED DOWN

Weird System of Reasoning Develops at Early Morning Meeting of Oregon City Councilmen

It is not economy to swap city warrants, on which six percent interest must be paid, for bonds, which only draw five percent.

It is not economy to save the city $120 a year in interest.

Such is the reasoning, presumably, of Councilmen Templeton, Cox, Hackett and Van Auker, who Wednesday morning voted down a plan for the disposal of the elevator bonds that had been completed a month or so previously and that only needed a little technicality to correct an error.

The elevator bonds were sold some time ago to a firm of brokers. Subsequently it developed that the bonds had not been advertised correctly, and so that this might be ordered done, a special meeting of the council was called Wednesday morning by Mayor Jones. Present at the meeting were Albright, Metzner, Cox, Templeton, Hackett and "Jit" Van Auker. After it had been explained to the councilmen that it would be necessary to re-advertise the bonds to correct a technical error in the record, and that the company to whom the securities had already been sold were perfectly willing to repeat their bid, and to go through with the sale; four of the councilmen not only voted against the readvertisement, but by their action completely tied up the sale of the bonds, and left them again on the city's hands.

Pending the sale of the bonds Oregon City had issued general fund warrants to the contractors who built the elevator, and on these warrants the city is paying six percent interest.
To save money for the city, the council sometime ago found a purchaser for the bonds; and it was the plan to use the amount received by their sale to pay off and call in the six percent warrants, and leave the city with only five percent interest charges to meet on the elevator cost.

This plan had been completed, and would have worked out before the end of the week, had it not been for the remarkable action of the "economy chorus" of the council Wednesday morning. The transfer of the elevator account from warrants to bonds would have lessened the city's inter-
