His Rest Was Broken

O. D. Wright, Rosemont, Neb., writes: "For about six months I was bothered with shooting and continual pains in the region of my kidneys. My rest was broken nearly every night by frequent action of my kidneys. I was advised by my doctor to try Foley Kidney Pills, and one 50 cent bottle made a well man of me. I can always recommend Foley Kidney Pills, for I know they are good." This splendid remedy for backache, rheumatism, sore muscles and swollen joints contains no habit forming drugs.—Jones Drug Co.

GOOD MAPS CHEAP

Government Offers Chance to Everyone to know Home Region

The finest and most accurate maps of the United States are those made by the United States Geological Survey. This branch of the Government service prints more than 3,000 maps a day, or about a million a year, most of which are sold to the public directly from Washington. Book and stationery concerns in the larger cities of course handle these maps, but heretofore there has been no way in which the inhabitants of the small towns throughout the country could get them except by sending to Washington. Now, however, postmasters in towns and villages have the permission of the Post Office Department to handle these maps.

When the Geological Survey prints a new map it sends a sample copy to the postmasters in the area covered, with the suggestion that they tack it up in a conspicuous place, where everyone calling for mail can see it, and order a small stock for sale to those who wish to buy the map. This saves the purchaser the annoyance of sending to the Geological Survey and waiting until the map is received from Washington, and also saves the expense of postage. The postmaster himself receives a small commission on each map sold.

Many active postmasters are handling the maps, and that their fellow-citizens appreciate the accommodation of being able to buy Government maps at the post office is shown by the numbers sold in this way. The record of maps so sold shows that a postmaster in Minnesota heads the list so far, having sold 125 maps the first month he handled them.

Only postmasters in regions that have been recently mapped have been asked to handle the maps, but the Geological Survey willingly answers inquiries made by other postmasters sending them a sample copy of the map that covers their district, if it has been mapped.

It is believed that this new plan of distributing the Government maps will benefit all concerned; it will bring the postmasters a small commission, and it will increase the sale of the maps.

JOHN STARK'S COLUMN

I am somewhat in the position of the little boy who stood at the window indulging in one of those long crying spells such as we sometimes see children indulging in; such as we have indulged in ourselves in our childhood. Of course I do not mean you personally, because you were an "unusual child," but let us say, the children in the next town used to do. A circus parade came down the street and our boy became interested and started crying. After the parade was past he realized that he had not finished his cry, but was at a loss to know where to start in again, so he asked, "Ma, what was I crying about a while ago?"

Some time ago, it may be remembered that I was making a holler about farm credits and incidentally paid my respects to a so-called farmer organization, which proposed as a solution that the farmer should remain in debt about two or three generations and about that time he could retire and enjoy "life, liberty, and the pursuits of happiness" until the end of his otherwise monotonous career of toil and deprivation. To these observations coming from one of the meek and lowly horn-handed sons of toil one of "our superiors" took exceptions, and read me a few lectures on economic topic and et cetera until I nearly forgot "what I was crying about." An empty purse and a slack waistband are however, very good reminders.

Not long ago I had occasion to leave the particular spot of God's footstool, which from courtesy and custom we call "home," and drive an old spavined bronco over roads I seldom go. By going at that slow pace I was permitted to observe some of the conditions obtaining among my bucolic brethren, most of whom are personal strangers; for like the "trusty" prisoner I must return "home" at an appointed time and therefore cannot form extensive acquaintances. Being one of the common herd I generally am passed by unnoticed.

In a general way the farm improvements are very much like tumble down fences. Weather beaten buildings frequently never were painted, and I wondered if an intelligent people would send the lead out of the country to kill millions of men, unknown persons, or would they convert this lead into paint for the preservation and beautifying of the buildings? Can you answer this so that it satisfies yourself when you are out alone?

While many houses seemed fairly well built and painted, rarely were all the buildings painted and "kept up." In all the drive I never saw a lawn—weeds and grass grow at will, or vegetables were grown about the houses in ill kept gardens, or poultry ranged about at will. No place resembled the lawns of many city residences. Why? There is a reason! While I was inside of none of these I thought from experiences and observations of other times and places it did not require investigation to form an idea of inside appointments. Generally furniture of the cheaper grades, few books and those of the Bertha M. Clay variety, and of course the "Holy Bible," which none of them ever read, or if they do, think it over, and were they asked the question put to the Ethiop: "Understand thou what thou readest?" could they give an answer demonstrating intelligent inquiry? The journals are usually perhaps a homepaper and some popular farm journal, and finally, perhaps some popular weekly and a so-called "religious" paper. This constitutes the literature. Seldom do you find there in books of philosophy or technique, or standard magazines. Again, there's a reason!

Very few pictures adorn the walls, and they are usually a few family group photos, such as "pa and ma when they were first married," enlarged from some tintype. Or a few premium soap wrapper chromos. Again, I say there's a reason!

I am writing from observation and experience, covering a long stretch of years and I know, besides, that these observations appearing in public print will wound the so-called pride of many of my fellow men. It is my purpose to state facts and not flatter the vanities of people. For if you want flattery the senators, governors or local politicians will give you your fill—witness a recent gathering at Molalla. After stating facts I propose to show you that there is a better way.

I am nailed to the same economic cross as the general toiler, and were I by myself to rise out of this condition someone else must go down. There is, however, a way by which we may all rise as an economic class.

On this little trip I passed by the habitation of "Our Worthy Master," but except for the name on the mail box could not have distinguished it from any of the other farms. The same general conditions prevailed. Indeed, it would take a clairvoyant to have told the difference in the place of this distinguished person, from the one occupied by the plebeian Stark. I am not acquainted with this ornament, so am not in a position to explain why his place of residence bears such a striking resemblance to that of impoverished "yours truly." One of my valued correspondents informed me that my poverty was due to laziness, "making too much noise," not knowing how to manage, and not being a Granger. Surely these charges cannot be laid to "Our Worthy Master," for it is generally supposed that persons are exalted because of their superiority.

As a traveler from Mars I should judge perhaps the same causes were producing like effects even in his case. Perhaps therefore it seemed proper to make friends with the unrighteous Mammon, which resulted in the treason to the farmers to advocate a perpetual debt under the guise of rural credits. Perhaps when the customary thirty pieces of silver were paid the home surroundings would have improved in appearance. I have been told conscience is sleeping in the original position field these many centuries, so there will not be any heroic climaxes when the asbestos curtain falls. These observations apply in a general way to the president of the ill-starred Equity who resides near, and was particeps criminis in the masterpiece of infamy, which these communications deal with.

Again I wish to remind my patient readers that I bear no personal ill will toward any person who may come in the way of these criticisms. Neither do I condemn the money lender who is also a victim of a vicious economic system. We are all in the same rapids even if we are not in the same boat and we are all liable to break upon the same rock. But it was written "woe to him upon whom this stone falls for him it shall grind into powder."

It may also not be out of place to remind you that the conditions described are not "peculiar to Clackamas county. No local pride need to be hurt by my observations.

Before me I have an editorial of a Portland daily dealing with the findings of the Federal Commission of farm conditions in Texas, which shows a much more deplorable state of affairs than what we here endure, which "heaven knows" is bad enough.

No wonder, then, that a member of the executive board of the Farmers' Union at Fort Worth last year said, that there was plenty of money for us farmers, in the national treasury, and we are going to get it or we will vacate the capitol at Washington. I have heard no more about him. I suppose he was squelched. There's a reason!

Having stated a few facts on this question of a great industrial wrong, I shall leave you to work off a few vanity blushes until I come again, and I shall write you a remedy prescription—not in Latin—but simple English, so simple that the wayfaring man need not err.

JOHN F. STARK.

THE LOVING FRIENDS

Rival Cities Just Ticked to Death Over Other's Troubles

The following item was published in the Rogue River Courier recently and it is being reprinted in the daily and weekly papers of Oregon. It is a free advertisement that will give Medford a cemetery name for a long time to come—advertising that doesn't cost anything in money but that will come mighty high nevertheless:

"The Medford Daily Sun, dated this morning, comes to us with advertisements of but two Medford establishments in its columns. One is a three-inch ad. for an ice cream house and the other a two-inch ad. for an undertaker. The latter advertisement seems especially timely, for it is evident that Medford has got a bunch of 'dead ones' needing his services."

The Courier has a full line of Legal Blanks for sale. If you are in need of Legal Blanks you will find that it will pay you to come to the Courier.

HERE are so many contributing causes which lead to a defective spinal column, that to enumerate them would require an almost exhaustless review of life from cradle to grave.

The position assumed by the child at the school desk, or the man or woman while at work, suggests the tendency for abnormal spinal curvature; also a fall or bruise, no matter how slight, may easily throw the spinal column out of plumb, and these may cause the fatal pressure upon the nerves and throttle the life giving currents, leading to disease of the organs.

Chiropractic Adjusts Spinal Defects

It lifts the pressure from the nerves, permitting them to nourish the famished and worn out tissues and organs. Nature is then able to bring about normal conditions, which mean health.
