

Newsy Briefs From All Over the County

Macksburg

MACKSBURG, July 3.—It must have been such a June as we have had in the present year that inspired our immortal Lowell to write "Oh! what is so rare as a day in June?" The usual hot spell that June brings to most regions in the north temperate zone—has for once—kindly passed us by. No day of exhausting or even unpleasant heat has—as yet—appeared. Yet this lack of heat has in no degree retarded the ripening of the fruit or flowers. Never have the cherries or wild-blackberries been ready earlier; never the roses in greater loveliness or the wild flowers in richer profusion. This—as is well known—is most favorable to the dairy output, that important revenue producer on the ranch. Truly has a beneficent power "Scattered Plenty o'er a smiling land" in this summer of 1919. It was met that in this radiant month of June the last act in the great drama of world-war should close. We may be assured that of this favored period history will record that those two great desiderata—Peace and Plenty—have joined hands over our beloved land.

Never since its inception has our Nation's birthday been celebrated in a more fitting time. Many and many a home, where, a year ago, the shadow of separation and of dread apprehension was hovering low, is echoing to-day with the note of glad return. With hearts overflowing with joy and gratitude will most of our people celebrate the coming Fourth of July.

BEAR ENCOUNTERED BY ASHOFF AND SON

Wednesday night Henry Ashoff and son went as usual after the cows. While wending their way happily down the narrow trail Henry saw the dog dart into the woods. A few minutes after this he heard the dog making an awful commotion. He ran to where the dog was and what should he see but a pair of twinkling brown eyes staring at him. Upon closer inspection it dawned upon his dazed brain that he was standing face to face with a bear. Instead of his hair lifting the hat off his head, Henry was very calm and decided that with the dog's help they could take the bear. After the bear had run around the tree three times with Henry and the dog in full speed after it, the bear decided to climb the tree. When the bear was safely up the tree Mr. Ashoff sent his son to the house after the gun. No sooner had the son disappeared than the bear decided to come down. Mr. Ashoff was in a fix. How to keep the bear up the tree was the problem. Everything that Henry did just helped to convince the bear that "There's a long, long trail a winding into the land of his dreams" and he had better be ambling along. He proceeded to come down and when Henry saw that it was useless to try any more he wiped his shoe off, aimed carefully and gave the bear a farewell kick just before he landed. The bear was in the same mood so he gave Henry a farewell hug and shed a few tears and started down the "Long, Long Trail."

This story is written just as it was given to the writer. For full particulars ask Mr. Henry Ashoff but you know "Curiosity killed the cat."
