BOSTON FOR THE BOY SCOUTS

A letter to the editor of The Boston Transcript says in part:

"Everybody sees that we are entering on an era of serious readjustments in wages and prices, and that in very many cases lack of employment for a time and clashes of opinion between employers and employed will be inevitable. Unless we adopt every reasonable means to promote right understanding and good feeling between our various groups—unless we keep to the front the importance of hearty co-operation—much hard feeling is sure to be generated, and we need only to read the newspapers to be warned of the possible results.

"We cannot expect a complete safeguard against this danger, but the public is coming to recognize that the boy scout movement gives considerable protection, because it greatly promotes mutual understanding and good feelings. It not only stimulates properly the boys enlisted in its ranks and so sets good fashion for all boys, but it leads the parents and many friends of the scouts to perceive how greatly their interests are cared for by the community."

Bachelor In Clover Bill Cook Is Cook This Is The Real Life

Bill Cook, deputy county assessor, has always been a most popular young man of Hazelia, his former home place, and from indications at the Chautauqua park he still retains that honor. With six young women in the prettily arranged camp Bill is still "holding his own," and believes he can keep up his good record until the close of the Chautauqua session. In order not to have the position of wood boy bestowed upon him, Cook has provided the camp with an oil stove, but does not object to furnishing the oil that goes with the stove. Meals are always on time when Bill is at the camp, for his appetite soon reminds the fair cook that the meals must be prepared to suit Bill Cook.

Cook is well named, for it is his duty to prepare the breakfast if he wishes to arrive at the assessor's office on time, and the menu for that meal compares favorably with the other meals prepared by the young women. He has become the life of the camp, and having accepted the position of chaperon last year, was immediately selected for this position this year, and although a year has been added to his life he is the same good-natured old Bill Cook.

The camp, located near the pavilion, has been named Hazelia Camp, and making their headquarters there are Misses Marion Eastman, Blanche Duncan, Ethel Thompson, Ethel Baker, Audrey Wanker, Edith Wanker and Bill Cook, the bachelor.

Great Czecho-Slovak Band on Western Tour

Jaroslav Cimera Presents His Splendid Musical Organization Here at Chautauqua

The fifth day of Chautauqua will be a memorable one this year because it means the coming of Jaroslav Cimera and his Czecho-Slovak Band in two great concerts. Cimera, one of the greatest band leaders of the day, is a native of Pilsen, Bohemia, home of the liberty loving Czecho-Slovaks. He brings to Chautauqua an unusual organization of musicians from that land of romance and music. He ranks as one of the finest trombone soloists ever heard in the country, and with a band composed of many exceptional artists audiences may be assured of hearing two rare and delightful musical programs on the fifth day.

As an added attraction, Madame Helen Cafarella, lyric soprano, will appear as soloist at the evening concert. Madame Cafarella is a soprano who has achieved unusual prominence.
