"Flag of the free heart's hope and home!
By Angels' hands to valor given;
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in Heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us.
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us."

IN THE "OPEN"

OREGON CITY'S recall organ offered to its readers, on Tuesday of this week, another marvelous display of information(?) about the recall of the county judge. Its statements are so evasive, indefinite or secretive, that they should help kill the effects of whatever effort has been put forth in attempting a recall.

We emphasize words of quotations from the said recall organ for the purpose of interpretation and to show the kind of methods employed in working up recall sentiment: "Financial aid of CONSIDERABLE proportion, is UNDERSTOOD to have been pledged to the COMMITTEE sponsoring the recall" * * * "following a meeting held by the ORGANIZATION, Monday afternoon."

"THE MEETING WAS OPEN and a number of LOCAL BUSINESS men ARE SAID to have attended."

"NEW counts, not yet bared, to be used in campaign INDICATION of statements. "Juvenile court MAY BE base of charge," are headlines of the report.

According to the above "financial" aid is UNDERSTOOD. The recall organ seems here uncertain, quite so. The treasurer, whose identity has not been disclosed to the public, should make the matter plain.

And since the recall is a public instrument, wielded in the public interest, there should be no indefiniteness, no secret or semi-secret procedure. These conditions surrounding a recall are, in themselves, sufficient reasons for the recall of recalls. Open, above-board action is demanded in every movement of this kind.

Who are the members of this "Committee"? "A" meeting was held by the "Organization." The public asks: WHERE was it held? Was it in a business place or on the street? It is usual for newspapers to publish the names of leaders present at a meeting of so great importance as this. Why were they not published?

Why should not those "LOCAL BUSINESS" men present at this "OPEN" meeting on Monday, have been accorded the honor of being present and engaged in the effort of recall, in the bold (?) report of the meeting?

Why was this "OPEN" meeting not announced in some OPEN way, so that ALL the newspapers of Clackamas county might have obtained the proceedings at first hand? The Banner-Courier offers free the use of its columns to advocates of the recall for notices of recall meetings or to present the bases of the recall charges. It offers free space in its columns also for arguments both for and against the recall. But it has not been able, so far, to even locate said meetings.

The report of the Monday's meeting states there are "INDICATIONS" of "NEW counts NOT YET bared." This is rank comment on the whole procedure. Several weeks have elapsed since the first secret meeting was imagined, or held, and to be still trying to "dig up" "counts," ought to disgust the voters with the whole thing. And as a headliner the report says the "Juvenile court MAY BE base of charge." Already it has been given out that this IS the basis of one of the five charges—a slight memory lapse.

And NEITHER the REAL leaders nor the real Bases for the recall have yet been made public in the general belief expressed.

The kind of procedure employed from the first has brought upon the whole movement distrust and condemnation.

THE COUNTY FAIR

THE annual Clackamas County Fair, held last week, was one of the best, if not the very best, in the matter of exhibits, ever held. The community and organization exhibits were excellent. Livestock merited larger attention than it received. The poultry exhibit was, in size and quality, a whole show in itself. The Juvenile Club work, textile and domestic showings, were of genuine credit to both exhibitors and county. The races, too, were good.

Of the entertainment features the "scenic trip" of leading Democrats on Farm Bureau Day received "special mention" in the leading periodicals of the state. Several firms offered very creditable exhibits of merchandise.

The weather was ideal, everything went off on schedule and genuine credit is due those who furnished the exhibits and to the officers who bore the responsibility.

The one great barrier to huge success, however, was the Lack of interest on the part of the people themselves. There should have been two or three times the attendance. More exhibits should have been in place from the many excellent stock and grain ranches of the county. The great problem is to stimulate greater effort.

To offer more attractive prizes is one way to obtain exhibits. To increase the scope and improve the entertainment features is a second. Another is to make more attractive the grounds, buildings and sanitary features. And all of these things cost money, though this should be forthcoming, in part, at least, from the increased interest and attendance. The state and county both lead aid.

The suggestion to employ a man by the year to conduct a model poultry farm; to make the land, otherwise unused, productive of crops; to repair and keep the buildings and fences in first-class condition, is good. The right kind of an employee would earn for the county more than his wages. His efforts, too, could be utilized, both directly and indirectly, in increasing interest and income to this most worthy county project. It is hoped the matter will be taken up at the budget meeting in December and given the consideration it merits.

WHY?

THREE initiated measures are refused place on the November ballot as a result of false certification and fraudulent signatures. Of these three measures the income tax bill, sponsored by the State Grange, is one of the most far-reaching and, next to the compulsory education bill, was expected to encounter the bitterest opposition.

There is yet untouched by legal procedure, however, another income tax bill initiated by a class of individuals who were and are opposed to the graduated income feature of the Grange measure. This measure, so far unopposed, and which, unless some one or some organization with money enough will move its exclusion in the courts, will probably go on the November ballot. Its outstanding feature is a flat rate on incomes. The advantage of this kind of tax over the Grange measure, to those who oppose an effective income income tax, is obvious.

On the flat income tax petitions are 7,064 names, certified to falsely by notaries, while on the Grange income tax petitions are only 4,231 names, to which these same notaries certified falsely.

If the one measure is so flagrantly wrong that it is attacked in the courts and kept off the ballot, why shouldn't the other be kept off also? What are state and county officers, who know these facts, doing to enforce the laws IMPARTIALLY, as they are sworn to do? What has become of the Attorney-General's office in Oregon, that the chief and deputies make no move to make justice equal to all by insisting upon the same procedure for both measures?

It has been current expression that the flat rate measure was intended as a means to forestall or kill the Grange measure. And the present conditions tend to prove this claim. No excuse, so far, has been offered for official blindness or discrimination. Any system or official conduct which will bar one measure and leave the other on the ballot needs reform.

A REAL TEST

HENRY FORD handles the booze and boozier problem without "gloves." In his business both are outlawed. Moonshine and efficiency are strangers. A workman moonshined worketh not for Henry. He hath so decreed and not from sentiment either. It's with him a matter of dollars and cents (sense). This is his order issued to his foremen only a few days ago:

"From now on it will cost a man his job without consideration of any excuse or appeal to have the odors of beer, wine or liquor on his breath, or to have any of these intoxicants on his person or in his home."

It's strenuous, but coming from an employer of thousands of men in one of the nation's largest industrial concerns, paying the highest wages, it is significant. As a REAL test of sentiment it will back the Literary Digest's pool of booze sentiment off the boards. And by the way, few will care to question Ford's sagacity for business and industrial conditions when last year his industrial generalship netted him $75,000,000.

RESPECT FOR LAW

TO poke fun at law is a vicious practice and altogether too common. Divorce laws, for example, are paraded about in much the same manner as a monkey and clown on a circus callopo, and the result is a civic and moral disgrace.

The same thing is true of the prohibition law. The boast that the law may be broken with impunity and that booze may be had for the price by almost anyone, almost anywhere, is current and is one way, whether made purposely or thru misinformation, to weaken the law and render more difficult its enforcement, and while the sincere, however biased in opinion, should be credited for independent thinking and expression, the flouter of the law should be made to feel its authority. If a law is bad, it will soon be repealed through its enforcement. What is most needed, in social and economic life, is not to make light of, but to cultivate, the demand for and respect for wholesome laws, interpreted and enforced for the public good.

Doing It For Others.

By Lydia Lion Roberts.
From the time the children went to kindergarten they began to make all sorts of things and bring them proudly home to Mother. And each time I would say, "Now make another one just like that here at home and give it to someone who will enjoy it." Often the second article was made in a different color, or the child was encouraged to think out various improvements. If we did not have exactly the same materials in the house as were used at the school, we would hunt until we found something almost as good, or that carried out the same idea in a different way. When I mentioned this plan to one of the teachers she approved of it and told me she wished all the mothers would do the same, for the child really understood then just how the work was done, and in the second trial corrected mistakes of the first.

The oldest boy had to stay in the house because of a cold, yet the time passed quickly to him for he was busily working on five new pinwheels that he had just learned to make. Every little while a child's face would be pressed against the window pane and a voice would call eagerly, "Is mine done yet?" The boy was very pleased and proud to think the children outdoors were waiting so anxiously for his work. Thus practice makes perfect and little fingers and hearts learn to work for the pleasure of others.

BANNER THOUGHTS IN POETRY

I Want To Be Fair.

By Grace E. Hall

I want to be fair in my judgment of men,
Whatever their conduct may be,
For some other parents and home were to them
What my childhood sphere was to me;
And all of their ancestors, differently reared,
Left tendencies none may disclaim.
Then how dare I judge what has now reappeared?
Or venture my unknowing blame?
If I had known life in some other man's way,
It is plain I would not be as now.
For we grow in the elements, day after day,
Essentially ours, somehow;
So I try to remember in judging all men
The manifold forces of time,
And the ancestral trails now united in them.
So widely removed from my own,
I want to be fair for my own sake as well,
To see facts of life as they are,
For if I can reason and basic truth tell
I shall save myself many a scar;
For the bigot and critic has never been known
To meet with such kindness from men,
As that one who has always some real justice shown
In passing his judgment on them.

Y. W. C. A. WELCOMES WOMEN TO HOME IN ENGLAND

With the acute housing situation in England a handful of American women living in London have been up and doing. If you can't afford a delightful, roomy house and garden of your own, there is no reason in the world for being cramped up in undesirable quarters, they say. Apply business principles, and take a long breath—and there you are! And having given this advice, these salaried American women went out boldly and acted upon it.

Miss Mary Dingman, Miss Elizabeth Clark and two others attached to the World's Committee Y. W. C. A. headquarters in London, recently leased Duff House, a charming old red brick manor house in St. John's Wood. Having installed a hostess, housekeeper and two Danish maid-servants, they offer hospitality to women visiting London. Occasional paying guests make possible the delightful living arrangements.

Sunday teas are held in the spacious gardens and office cases banished within its picturesque high walls. Duff House is within ten minutes of London's business district. In its guest book are already names of prominence from many parts of the globe. Miss Clarke, who headed the Migration Service of the World's Y. W. C. A., is now in New York.

Eighty Per Cent of Auto Industry Uses Willard Batteries.

"Two hundred car and truck manufacturers now use Willard Threaded Rubber Batteries as regular factory equipment" is the announcement made by Mr. Hilgers of the Willard battery station. According to him, this represents eighty percent of the car and truck makers.

Ever since T. A. Willard patented the Threaded Rubber Insulator, October 16, 1917, this form of insulation has been used by an increasing number of automobile builders. It is made of rubber—the best form of electrical insulation known—pieced by 196,000 tiny threads. The rubber keeps the plates insulated from one another, while the threads allow the battery solution to flow freely.

The interest rate in Russia is now

12 per cent a month or 72 per cent a year. The Soviet government pays 36 per cent a year on foreign funds. These facts have a bearing on the propaganda of money for Russia.

The full amount of the national debt is approximately $23,000,000,000. The annual fixed charges against the United States Treasury on account of the public debt are $1,300,000,000 and not $41,300,000,000 as has been stated.
