Postoffice Name Changed

Hoff postoffice will hereafter be known as Beaver Creek. There has been a movement on foot several years to have the name changed to correspond with the name of the railway station. The office was established in 1916 and was given the name of the first postmaster, J. R. Hoff. The office serves a thickly settled territory, including one rural route with 150 boxes.

Lighting Bridge Heavy Item

The cost of lighting the new bridge connecting Oregon City and West Linn will be $80 per month. It is yet a question whether this expense will be borne by the state highway commission, Clackamas county or the municipalities of Oregon City and West Linn. Neither the county nor the municipalities have included items for this expense in their respective budgets.

With one hold-up already staged on the bridge, the necessity of keeping the structure lighted is apparent.

New Year Resolutions.

The light and airy manner
He had some weeks ago
Has passed from him completely.
His heart is filled with woe,
For that day is approaching
He great dreads to see,
When Friend Wife will remind him
Of promises that he
Has made--those resolutions
That will be hard to keep,
Requiring such an effort,
'Twould make an angel weep.
