Marjorie F. Hawley, divorced wife of Willard F. Hawley, Jr., vice-president of the Hawley Pulp and Paper company of Oregon City, was married in California to Max Luellwitz on April 10.

Although the ceremony, which was performed in Mercedes, Cal., took place more than a month ago, no word of the marriage was received here until last night.

Mrs. Hawley is understood at present to be residing at her home in Portland. Luellwitz resides with his father, Gus Luellwitz at 494 E. 8th street, Portland.

The marriage ceremony took place four months and 20 days after Mrs. Hawley was divorced from her husband in the Portland courts. The divorce was secured by Willard Hawley on November 16, 1921. Though the marriage would not be legal under the Oregon statutes providing for a six month period between divorce and remarriage, it is understood to be legal under the California laws.

Mrs. Hawley was one of the principals in a sensational divorce suit which was tried in Oregon City in February 1920. The case was carried to the supreme court and resulted in an unusual ruling, leaving the Hawleys married. A second suit was then instituted by Willard Hawley, and he was granted a decree.
