NORTHWEST District As Viewed In Past Two Months Is DECLARED By Visiting Financier To Be Among the Most PROSPEROUS

By Robert E. Smith

President Lumbermen's Trust Company Bank, Portland, Oregon

Mr. Theo. H. Price, editor of "Commerce and Finance", a leading New York financial weekly, was a Portland visitor during the latter part of August. He was touring the country to obtain first-hand information on general financial and business conditions. He transmitted his impressions to his journal, and, as it is interesting to glimpse ourselves as others see us, we quote here what he says:

"In the last ten days I have visited Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and San Francisco. They are the five principal cities of the Pacific Northwest. They serve and are dependent upon a region that is in an economic sense almost self contained, for it produces nearly everything that civilization requires except cotton and silk, and it can get cotton from Arizona and silk from Japan very quickly when either of them is needed. The coal strike has no terrors for the people in this section, for the fuel is chiefly oil and wood, though coal can be had from the Washington mines when needed. And the roads are so good that even if the railways stopped running it is profitable that the many automobiles with which the country is supplied could furnish all the local transportation needed.

Crops Said Good

"Therefore the community is not much concerned about the labor troubles that are vexing the East and Central West. The crops are generally good. They are bringing fair prices. The low rates at which the intercostal and foreign trade is carried by water through the Panama Canal give the farmers and lumbermen of the Pacific slope a tremendous advantage over their Eastern competitors and in the event of a general tie-up of the railroads it might be that many cities on the Atlantic seaboard would be fed with food brought from California, Oregon and Washington.

"The feeling is therefore one of complacent optimism and confidence in the future. Credit is abundant, money is easily obtainable. There is little or no unemployment and the working men with whom I have talked seem satisfied with the wages paid them."

Government Experiments Tried

Surely we of the Pacific slope are to be envied by the residents of the other parts of the country. Further along in his article, Mr. Price says:

"This corner of the United States has been for a long time the political laboratory of the nation, and no one seems very much afraid of the experiments in government that are irom time to time tried out here.

"Among the more farsighted business men there is perhaps some apprehension lest the pending tariff bill may adversely affect the foreign trade of the Pacific coast, which is increasing rapidly, but only those who take a long distance view are as yet much concerned over this aspect of the situation, and it is undeniably true that the high duty on wool which has evoked so much protest elsewhere is generally approved of in this section and especially in Idaho, Montana and Washinton."

Financial Conditions Improve

The Federal Reserve bank for this, the twelfth, district, with headquarters at San Francisco, reports employment conditions, as compared with those of a year ago, completely reversed. In the summer of 1921, unemployment throughout the district was general; today, reports of a shortage of laborers are not uncommon. The cost of living in the district has remained in the main, stable, continuing to range from 14.1 to 24.1 per cent below the peak of June, 1920. Grain crops throughout the district are reported to be good in quality but small in quantity as compared with the yields of recent years. California and Oregon millers report fair domestic but no export demand for flour. Adverse transportation conditions have markedly curtailed the carlot shipment of California fruits, but current developments in the situation indicate a larger pack of canned fruits in 1922 than was anticipated earlier in the season. Concerning dried fruits, a record production is forecast in California. The raisin crop is expected to be 62 per cent larger than the 1921 crop, the output of dried peaches 50 per cent greater than last year and 5 per cent more prunes will be produced. The 1922 prune crop in Oregon is expected to approximate 30,000 tons. The 1921 crop was 14,000 tons. The opening prices on all varieties of dried fruits, excepting raisins, this year, are higher than those of 1921. Practically no carryover stocks are held by producers.

General Improvement Noticed

The livestock situation is satisfactory, and the supply of hay for winter feeding will apparently be ample, although the long dry season brought it below the abnormally large crop of 13,000,000 tons harvested in 1921. The early sale of the season's wool clip at prices profitable to the grower and the favorable market for lambs have greatly stimulated the sheep industry. Lumber production suffered the usual seasonal lull, but figures now available on the cut, orders and shipments of the seven principal soft wood lumbering associations in the United States, four of which are in this district, indicate that during the first half of 1922 the industry has enjoyed a more substantial period of activity than in any previous half year. Compared with one year ago, there is distinct improvement in all branches of the metal mining industry in both production and marketing. According to the reports of the United States Geological Survey, the production of gold in the district has been steadily increasing during the present year.

In California the output of gold from deep and quartz mines has increased 4 per cent during the present year and the output of placer mines and dredges combined has increased 15 per cent. Production of petroleum increases steadily, and this in turn is reflected in the increased sales of electric power to oil producers. That there was an increase both in the physical volume and the value of the exports of the Pacific coast the first half of this year is indicated by the reports received from the four largest ports of this district covering that period of time. The principal commodities exported include petroleum products, dried and canned fruits and fish, wheat flour, wheat, lumber, hides and rice. The principal imports passing through the ports of this district are raw silk, sugar, coffee, copra, wool and crude rubber, and the receipts of each of these commodities were greater in actual volume during the first six months of 1922 than during the same period of 1921. Causes of these increases may be mentioned as improvement in world wide trade conditions, the lower freight rates which now prevail, and the increase in the dollar value of the currencies of many of the countries which are our principal customers. A reduction of approximately 20 per cent in the freight rates between the Pacific coast and Australia, the west coast of South America, Europe and the Orient has been effected, and during the year between June, 1921 and June, 1922, advances in all the leading foreign currencies have occurred, excepting only the Russian ruble, the German mark, the Italian lire and the Japanese yen.

Makes Big Money

The "Manchester Guardian Commercial" prints the following moral tale:

"The following story comes from Germany, and the friend who sends me it assures me it is true, but the end, I gather, is intelligent anticipation. There was a certain young man who went into the oil trade in a small way, with a capital of 10,000 marks, for which he bought six barrels of oil. No sooner had he bought them than the mark went down and the price of oil went up, and he was able to seel them for 30,000 marks, to his great delight. Unfortunately, when he tried to buy some more oil, he could not get more than three barrels for his 30,000 marks; however, he had not long to wait before there came another slump and he sold the three barrels for 100.000 marks. Again he went into the market and found that for his 100,000 he could get only one barrel. He kept this for a rise, but the barrel was leaky and the oil ran out. His luck did not desert him, however; another slump enabled him to sell the empty barrel for a million. He has thus realized the ambition of his boyhood and become a millionaire, but the passion for trade pursues him, and he is now vainly seeking something which can be bought within his means."

Coal Exports Decreased

Approximately 1,000,000 tons of British coal have been imported since the strike began, according to a computation of weekly arrivals. Figures made public by the Department of Commerce show the disastrous effect of the mine strike upon exports of American coal. The value of anthracite exported in July, 1921, was $4,165,000, compared with only $150,000 this year. Exports of bituminous in July of last year amounted to $15,169,000, against $2,011,00 in July, 1922. The gains made by American exporters in foreign markets during the British mine strike have been wiped out completely during the difficulties here. It is an open question whether these markets can be regained in the future, except in nearby ports such as the West Indies.

Interest Agreement Approved

Another step toward giving some return on their investment to thousands of American and foreign holders of Mexican government and railway securities in aggregate amount of $508,830,000 has been taken by the simultaneous publication on September 5 in this country, in Mexico and in Europe of the terms of the agreement eached last June between the Mexican Minister of Finance. Adolfo de la Huerta, and the International Committee of Bankers on Mexico. This agreement was subsequently approved by President Obregon. Since 1914 these investments have yielded no interest to their possessors and where part of the principal should have been retired through amortization, lack of money prevented the accumulation of such sinking funds. The plan signalizes the attainment of a stage in Mexico's financial and economic progress where the administration, desirous of restoring its credit standing in the world markets, is financially equipped to resume the obligation of its debt and to start payments on a gradually ascending scale.

If the agreement is ratified by the Mexican Congress and approved by the bondholders, who will shortly be asked by the committee to deposit their holdings in assent to the plan, the Mexican government will set aside against current interest not less than $15,000,000 during 1923, increasing the amount applied to the debt service each year until in 1928 the amount applied will be $25,000,000. The $15.000,000 will not be sufficient to care for all current interest, but it will enable the distribution of part interest to all security holders in cash and the remainder will be paid in scrip. Interest in arrears is provided for by the general pooling or overdue coupons with special depositories and by a general reduction over a period of forty years, beginning in 1928. Respecting the railway debt, the Mexican government assumes the responsibility for all issues of securities not previously guaranteed and agrees to the carriers' return to private management.

Sidelights from the County Fair

George Meeks, of Canby, who is a breeder of Barred Rocks, won a number of prizes on his birds. Among these was first on "Miss Canby" one of the handsomest birds in the show.

Mrs. George Story, who exhibited 40 show birds, won all prizes in the classes entered. Her birds were dressed in their finest and were attractive features of the poultry barn.

The Carus Pig club was represented with some high class pigs and carried home some substantial prizes.

B. L. Davis, of Multnomah Station, making his first appearance at the Clackamas county fair this year, brought some of his high class Barred Rocks. Among the prizes he carried away was first on "Bill," a handsome Barred Rock cock, who was among the birds posing for his "photo". Mr. Davis is to take his birds to the state fair, and says he is coming back to Clackamas county fair.

David Long, secretary of the Clackamas county fair, has worked untiringly in carrying out the programs of the four days' fair, and is now busily engaged in packing the exhibits for a big booth at the state fair, leaving the fair grounds on Saturday.

The juvenile department, which was in charge of Brenton Vedder, county school superintendent, Mrs. Romney Snedeker Purcell, deserved much credit for the arrangement and exhibition, and the domestic science in charge of Mrs. A. H. Knight, was never finer, as was also the textile department, which was in charge of Mrs. J. L. Waldron. Mrs. Bertha Hurst having charge of the floral display, had the largest exhibition this year

Gust Jaeger, also a familiar figure at the Clackamas county fair, won six first prizes and four second prizes on his Cotswold sheep.

Harry L. Phillips, who recently arrived in Clackamas conty from Banne Terre, Missouri, made his debut as an exhibitor at the Clackamas county fair this year, showing some of his famous Columbian Plymouth Rock birds. He was one of the prominent chicken fanciers of Missouri, and has shown in the various eastern fairs, including New York state fair, where he won honors. He won all awards in this class in the poultry department. Among the birds upon which he won first place was "Miss Willamette." Two of the birds owned by Phillips are now in an egg laying contest at the Washington State College. One of these produced 176 eggs in ten months.

The Rosemont Community Club's booth that atracted unusual attention not only for its artistic arrangement but also for its fine collection of farm exhibits and delicacies, is to help out Clackamas county in the display at the Oregon State Fair. There is no doubt but that the exhibits from that booth will help the old county to get one of the big prizes. The members of the organization are deserving of the credit they received from all who visited the fair ground during the four days of the fair. They proudly carried hom the handsome silver cup. By the winning of this cup, this makes three cups held on the West side of the river, donated by the banking institutions of Oregon City, the Bank of Oregon City, First National Bank and Bank of Commerce. Gust Jaeger won a cup some time ago, on horses. George De Bok, of Willamette, won a cup for his farm exhibit several years ago. The Rosemont Club now retains the third cup. Rosemont is coming back again next year for another prize.

To show that Clackamas county can produce good eggs, was when Mrs. T. B. Davenport, of West Linn, member of Rosemont Community Club, entered her pantry at an early hour in the morning at dark, and selected a dozen eggs and placed them on the egg table in the poultry department, and secured second place.

The Clackamas county fair would not seem like a county fair unless we saw A. D. Gribble, breeder of full-blooded Jerseys there, and this year he was on hand with a herd of fine Jerseys. Among these, and a winner of a prize, was a seven-month's old calf of Cassie's Nellie. "Mable's Minnie," and her mother, "Port's Mable II" were in the Gribble stalls, and among his fine cattle. "Port's Mable III" had seven calves before she was six years old, and is making a record as a milker. Mr. Gribble had five head in his herd, and will take several to the state fair.

Neils Christensen, of Oregon City, Rt. 4, for the first time entered some of his fine Holstein cattle that were among the attractions of the stock barn. Christensen came to the fair this year with a good sized herd and left with flying colors, for he came in for some of the big prizes in the Holstein class. There was great competition between Mr. DeBok and Mr. Christensen, and it was "some" task for the judges to decide. Mr. Christensen is to bring his herd to the Canby fair next year. He had nine head in his herd exhibited that was headed by a handsome animal, "Steve Lady Matador Inca."

One of the most artistically decorated booths in the big pavilion was that of the Canby community, when some of the daintiest delicacies were exhibited under glass cases, while there were the farm produce and grain as well as fresh fruits and melons that Canby is far famous for. Credit goes to Carl Joehnke, for soliciting among the people of that section for the big exhibit, and the booth was presided over by Mrs. Carl Joehnke and Mrs. A. Kammier, Mr. Kammier also assisted in arranging the booth.

H. M. Robbins, who is well known throughout Clackamas county as a breeder of Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, and whose farm is located on Oregon City, Route 3, carried off some of the big prizes with his birds in the Rhode Island class. Among the prize winners were "Robbins' Red", a handsome Rhode Island Red cock, who proudly strutted about the poultry barns when allowed his freedom for a short period, and especially when he posed for his picture. Mr. Robbins has 800 full-blooded birds at his farm, and will be among the Rhode Island exhibitors at the state fair.

The Oregon City Shoe store was well represented at the county fair, when its booth contained shoes for the daintiest feet to the substantial shoes for men and women. Logger shoes were in various styles. The ties, pumps and slippers pleased the women visitors, while the men looked for the heavy shoes. L. J. Lageson, proprietor and owner, assisted by his son, Leonard, had charge of the booth. Mr. Lageson is already planning to come next year with a larger stock.

Not only can Ensley Gribble raise Berkshire swine but sheep as well. His livestock helped to add to the interest of the county fair visitors. Mr. Gribble had ten head of Berkshires, winning eight first and two seconds, and will take "Goldie Royal" and her litter to the state fair as well as other Berkshires. Mr. Gribble received first prize on the sow and litter, and also first place on sow. On his Shropshires he won first on get-of-sire, second on aged ram and second on yearling ram. Some of his Shropshire sheep will be taken to Salem. He has 110 at his farm.

"Sir Colantha Genevieve," Holstein bull owned by George DeBok, of Willamette, that won first place in his class at the county fair, is to be shown in the Holstein department at the Oregon State Fair. He is four years old, and weighs over 2300 pounds. He is at the head of the DeBok herd. Other Holsteins will be taken to the fair by Mr. DeBok, who is to show some of his famous Duroc-Jersey swine.

Judge Grant B. Dimick may well be proud of his livestock and poultry that were exhibited at the county fair. Among the birds he exhibited were Barred Rocks, and his Duroc swine and Cotswolds and Hampshires also attracted unusual attention. These were in the Dimick pens. Judge also won in the pavilion, for he exhibited melons and other produce.

Arden E. Harms, of Clackamas county, whose address is Aurora, Rt. 1, entered eight head of Shropshires, taking two first and three second prizes. He is to show his sheep at the state fair.

A new face was seen in the sheep barn this year, this being F. A. Doerfler, an enterprising sheep breeder of Silverton. Mr. Doerfler exhibited 3 head of full-blooded sheep, winning five first prizes and a number of second. Mr. Doerfler has 80 head at his farm, and is to have his farm well represented at the Oregon State fair, for he left for Salem Friday evening. Mr. Doerfler when leaving the fair grounds said "I will be back again next year, boys."

H. J. Bigger, of Oregon City, brought back many awards on Friday evening, for he won many prizes on his flowers, vegetables and is now getting ready to go to the state fair.

There was a general scramble for beautiful flowers when the floral booths were removed on Friday evening, and many visitors left with arms full. Carl Starker and H. J. Bigger presented many with their remaining flowers, while other exhibitors donated blossoms.

"Lady Mildred" Bareed Rock hen owned by Mrs. H. C. Kleinsmith, of Clarkes, whose official record is 279 eggs at the Puyallup laying contest, was awarded first place in the show at Canby. She was one of the finest birds in the show.

F. A. Doerfler's No. 596 Shropshire yearling winning first place in its class, will be taken to the state fair. The animal's mother, sister and sire were all Oregon State fair champions so No. "596" has a future in the show ring.

James Smith, who never fails to appear at the county fair with prize winning sheep and his big smile, carried off a number of prizes, this year. Among these were first prize winners. He is specializing on Shropshires.

Herbert Robbins, breeder of R. I. Reds, came in for his share of prizes on his birds. He received second on cock, third on hen, 1st, 2nd and 3rd on pullets, 1st on young pen. He had 17 birds in the show, and still had 800 at his home at Robbins Station.

C. R. Quinn, who had charge of the poultry department, and Ensley Gribble, the livestock department deserve much credit in the manner they kept their departments. The cattle and birds were given the best of attention and the departments kept in a cleanly manner.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church of Canby are to be congratulated upon the manner in which their lunch counter was operated. Home-made delicacies were served the fair visitors at a nominal sum, and no doubt when returning next year will have even a larger patronage. On Thursday about $100 was taken in, which will go towards the Aid Society fund.

The Clarkes Poultry Club composed of six members, all of whom are under 16 years of age, made seven exhibits in the poultry department of the juvenile department. These exhibitors were Leonard Marshall, second division, entering Barred Rocks and bronze turkeys in division 3, winning first place on his turkeys; Ellerd Larkins, division 2, entering Rhode Island Red, and winning second place; Reva Larkins, division 2, Rhode Island White, third prize; Jack Weigle,

NEW BONUS MOVEMENT STARTED BY VETERANS

Die Hards Planning to Submit Bill at Short Session of Congress Declares Leader.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Within twenty-four hours after the senate sustained President Harding's soldier bonus bill veto, die hard adjusted compensation supporters in and out of congress reacted yesterday in a manner clearly indicative of an intention to attempt enactment of the same, or a very similar bill in the sixty-eighth congress. Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee, sponsor of the defeated four option measure announced he would introduce another bonus bill, which would "be reported from committee." Asked when he would submit the measure and what form it would take, he answered:

"I can tell you that about December 6, after the short session of this congress convenes and after I have had an opportunity to discuss the situation with committee members and with Republicans of the senate finance committee."

The session opens December 4. Fordney will retire after this congress.

Stefansson Party Forced to Remain In North For Year

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 21.—It is believed here that the party sent to Wrangell Island by Vilhjalmur Stefanson last year and which was expected to come out this fall, will now have to remain in the ice for another season. A message from Captain Joseph Benard of the power schooner Teddy Bear, who tried to reach the party, states that he was unable to do so because of the bad ice conditions.
