NEXT YEAR'S GARDEN

North, South, East, West, autumn is best to begin next year's home vegetable garden. Nature is never idle, even when the ground is hard frozen, and our efforts should be directed to aiding natural agencies. The greatest good can be accomplished by improving the soil and preparing it for growing bumper crops of potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes, beans, beets and other vegetables next seasdn, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

At present many of our garden crops are maturing and may be cleaned off the land. In many parts of the north it is now too late to plant anything on this vacant land, except rye, barley or some other crop to improve the soil. Some of the most successful gardeners follow the practice of sowing rye on every foot of garden soil that becomes available. The roots of the rye spread through the soil and pick up every choice bit of plant food they can find. Next spring when the ground is spaded or plowed these same roots form a network of fibrous material which quickly decays and forms new plant food for the garden crops to feed upon. Don't let it get more than two or three inches high next spring before it is turned under. Other crops will give the same results, but rye is one of the most practical.

Frost Breaks Up Soil

Spading or plowing clay soils in the autumn and leaving them lying in a rough state over winter is also a good practice. Heavy soils are broken up by the action of frost but care should be taken that they do not wash away. Sandy and all light soils are liable to wash or blow way during the winter if left loose and exposed and for this reason should be kept covered either by a green crop or by a heavy coating of manure.

Nothing beats good stable manure for improving the soil of a garden. Manure is good to plow under in the autumn and it is good as a top dressing over the soil after plowing. Manure prevents the washing and adds fertility. As soon as the crops are off, plow the ground and give it a heavy coat of manure. The remnants can be turned under in the spring.

Clean up the garden and burn all old vines and rubbish which if left on the ground harbor insects and diseases over winter. While there is always need for adding organic matter to the soil it is usually best to burn all rubbish that may be suspected of being a carrier of disease. This is especially true to melon and tomato vines, although almost any garden crop will have its full share of diseases. Clean up the garden for the sake of appearances, gathering all bean poles, tomato stakes, etc., and storing them somewhere out of sight and, if possible, under shelter. If they are not worth saving make kindling of them and get new ones next season.

May Be Planted Now

A number of crops may be planted in southern gardens at this time, and these will furnish a supply of green vegetables all the winter. Even in the north-central section spinach, kale and winter onions will remain in the ground with slight protection and give an early crop in the spring. In the South kale, spinach, onions, lettuce, and several other crops will thrive during the winter. In the gulf and lower Atlantic Coast region Bermuda onions may be grown by sowing the seed about the first of October and transplanting the seedlings in November. If this seems like too much trouble prepare a piece of ground and sow the seed in drills where they are to grow and thin out some of them for young onions late in the winter.

Such crops as asparagus, rhubarb, and raspberries or any of the small fruits should be gotten in condition to go through the winter. As soon as frost comes the tops of the asparagus should be mowed off and carried away or burned. Rhubarb will need little attention except to see that the field mice are not working at its roots. Raspberries and other small fruits may need a little pruning or tying to stakes, and a mulch of manure about their roots will not only protect them during the winter, but make them strong and vigorous next spring.

There is always a rush to get the garden planted early in the spring and work done during the autumn will not only improve the garden, but make it easier to plant next year.

TURKS AND ALLIES SIGN TEMPORARY NEAR EAST PEACE

Nationalists Get Control Of Thrace Under Agreement; Neutral Zone Evacuation To Be Begun Immediately.

CONSTANTINOPLE TO HAVE JOINT CONTROL

Kemalist Civil Authorities To Be Installed Pending Final Settlement of Latest Terms.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 4.—Signing a military protocol covering the entire near east situation, representatives of the nationalists and the allies awarded Thrace to the Turks and placed Constantinople under the joint control of the allies and the Turkish nationalists.

The document was signed aboard ship off Mudania. Pending definite arrangements for the peace the Allies are to remain at Constantinople, but vivil authorities will be installed by the Turks, resulting in a dual administration of the city. The neutral zone is to be evacuated by the nationalist forces and the Turks are to retire from Chanak.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 4. —Turkish nationalists have accepted in principle the allied note regarding the Near Eastern settlement, it was announced here this afternoon.

A communique issued by General Harington, the British commander in chief, regarding the Mudania conference, which he is attending, says the conference is proceeding satisfactorily and that Ismet Pasha, the Nationalist representative, has reissued orders to the Nationalist troops to avoid all contact with the British.

The French official communique says:

"The preliminary meeting of the allied generals was held at Mudania yesterday morning and ended with the draft of the protocol. Thanks to the conciliatory disposition manifested by both sides, there was no difficulty in reaching an agreement as to the majority of the clauses as a basis for the peace conference.

"The meeting ended at 8 p. m., and was resumed this morning at 10. During the interval the allied generals exchanged views in order to examine the nonfundamental objections of the Turkish delegate. The arrival of the Greek military mission, including Colonels Platiras and Sarriyannis, is expected this morning."

Indian Reservation Head Removed; No Charges Are Bared

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—"For the good of the service," according to officials of the department of the interior and the office of Indian affairs, Walter G. West has been removed as superintendent of the Klamath Indian reservation and F. A. Baker of Klamath Falls appointed in his place. Beyond saying that the removal of West followed and was the result of a thorough investigation of charges against him, and that the charges involved nothing of a financial character, the officials decline to discuss the reasons for removal.

They declare that heretofore West has had an enviable record in the Indian service, but that in the one instance which was the subject of the charges he evidently was guilty of a moral transgression that rendered his continuation in the service impossible. The department represents that the considerations in appointing Baker as superintendent were the fact that he is a veteran of the Philippine insurrection, a former employe of the department of high efficiency and still has a civil service status, although he has not recently been in government employ.

BANKER URGES ACTION UPON EUROPEAN DEBTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—America has come to the parting of the ways, and must decide now whether to "cooperate in the counsels of the mother country and the old world," or "stand aside and add to our national stock of gold," Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., declared in an address to the American Bankers' association convention here today.

The United States, he declared, is entering a new business cycle with "clearink skies and fair weather." The nation has gained great power, he said, and "with it goes weighty responsibility." During the World war, this responsibility was discharged "a thousand fold," but since the armistice there is doubt about it.

"Now we have, it would seem, come to the parting of the ways," he said. "Shall we meet the responsibility that has come to us with power, or shall we fail?"

Lamont's speech was heard by a huge gathering of delegates representing the nation's banking machinery, assembled for the first session of the convention at which they plan to formulate policies on which action America shall take in regard to forgiving Europe's debts, taking a hand in the European financial tangle and other grave problems.

INDIAN CONFESSES SLAYING; JUDGE GRANTS FREEDOM

All Precedents On Record are Broken By Judge Wilson In Decision from Bench Of Wasco Circuit Court.

COMPANIONS OF MAN ACQUITTED BY JURY

Presence of Pressure Behind Plea, is Basis for Action Says Jurist's Statement.

THE DALLES, Ore., Oct. 3.—All precedent in the history of the Wasco county circuit court was broken when Judge Wilson this morning freed Columbia Dick, an Indian, the confessed slayer of a fellow tribesman, Jim Starr, Altogether three Indians were involved in the killing, according to the testimon of witnesses at a preliminary hearing. George Billie and William George were tried on a charge of manslaughter and acquited by Wasco county juries. Columbia Jack pleaded guilty to the charge, and was to have been sentenced upon the completion of the trials of his associates.

"It would be a travesty on justice for me to send this man to the penitentiary with others at large who are more responsible than he for the crime that was committed," Judge Wilson declared.

"While he may have been at the scene of the murder and may have had something to do with it, I would never feel at ease if I sent this man to prison. While I recognize that this man has entered a plea of guilty," the judge continued, "it has been very evident to the court that there was pressure behind his plea."
