TEMPLETON SAYS COMBINE EXISTS

COUNCILMAN CHARGES RELIGION WITH CREATING ALDERMANIC CLIQUE

HOME MERCHANT DEFENDED

Unimproved Walks to be Blocked by Order of Council. Personalities Bitter

The usual vitriolic personalities entered into the transaction of the city's business at the regular meeting of the city council last evening when Councilman Templeton attacked members of the street committee for increasing the salary of Simon McDonald, park tender, from $2.25 to $2.50 a day and reducing the amount of work he had to do by taking one of the three city parks out of his keeping. Templeton's contention was that the committee had no power to take such an action without the consent of the council and he accused the members of the committee of attempting to "slip something over" by inserting the amount of increase in the monthly report with the idea of having it escape the notice of the council.

"You can slide nothing over on this council as long as I am a member," Templeton said, "for I shall be right after it." And when a remark about the increase was made by Councilman Cox, a member of the committee, Templeton added: "There is too much religion worked into this council with three of the councilmen members of the Methodist church; the same to which McDonald belongs." This followed his accusation that Councilman Van Auker of the committee had attempted to put his son on the city payroll as park tender and had compromised with the employment of his former business associate.

In defense of the statement about a religious element at work in the council, Van Auker said:

"I am not a member of any church, I am sorry to say. To think of having such a man as you (Templeton) get up just because you can express yourself a little better than I can! But, sir, there will come a time when you cannot do that."

As a member of the street committee Roake defended the action of increasing McDonald's wages by saying that the park work had never been done better than it is being done at present. "And," he added, "if the council will not pay the wage increase I will do it myself. I do not believe that such personalities should be brought up by one whose skirts are not clear." And Mr. Roake referred to the improvement of a section of street in front of property owned by Templeton while the street was not improved in front of other property.

"Politics and religion!" cried Mr. Templeton. "It is rotten!"

Councilman Buckles advanced a motion that the report of the committee, including the salary increase, be accepted. An amendment by Councilman Metzner requesting that the third park be given into the charge of McDonald was lost and the original motion carried, so that McDonald will care for two parks at the advanced wage.

A petition signed by E. J. Jones of Oswego and R. P. Grady of the Mountain View district was presented asking that a meeting of the council be called to consider granting Portland parties a jitney franchise for service from Portland through Oswego to Oregon City, to connect with a service to Mountain View from Main street, all to be operated by the same people. The council set July 20 as the date for such a meeting. The petitioners stated that Oswego people, Oregon City business men and residents of the Mountain View district were behind them in asking for the jitney service.

E. B. Lowe offered a strenuous objection to the street assessment on his property and offered to sell the property, which he claimed to be greatly damaged by the improvement of John Quincy Adams street, for $1000 less than he paid for it. The assessment stands, however, and Mr. Lowe has left the alternative of paying it or appealing to the circuit court.

The promiscuous operations of peddlers and solicitors from outside the city was scored by Councilman Cox, who pointed to the operation of laundry wagons, bakery wagons and other out-of-town concerns within the city as an injustice to local enterprise. In this connection Councilman Metzner put a motion for the appointment of a committee to work with the city attorney in drafting an ordinance and setting license fees for such persons as care to infringe upon the trade field of Oregon City businessmen and firms. The committee for this purpose was appointed by Mayor Hackett comprised Councilmen Metzner, Buckles and Cox.

The condition of the intersection of Main and Eleventh streets, which has slowly been sinking in for several months, was pointed out to the council and the matter was referred to the

H. C. SEYMOUR WILL DIRECT CLUB WORK

TWENTY-FOUR DISTRICTS TO TAKE PART IN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL CAMPAIGN

One week from next Tuesday, July 18, H. C. Seymour, state leader of industrial club work for the Oregon Agricultural college, with a corps of helpers will arrive in Oregon City and for three days will co-operate with county school officers to carry on a lively series of industrial club meetings that will reach practically every important school district in the county.

Because of the lack of time and because individual districts would not turn out in sufficient numbers for the meetings, central districts have been selected and the pupils in other nearby districts have been called to meet there. By holding these joint meetings it is hoped to accomplish the same amount of work in a much shorter time than would otherwise be necessary. Under this plan those schools which have shown an interest in the club work, or where interest can be aroused in the plan of the county superintendent's office, will be benefited by the sessions to be held.

With Mr. Seymour will come Miss Helen Cowgill and Leonard J. Allen of the Oregon Agricultural college extension staff, and will lecture at the several meetings to be held. In addition to the O. A. C. workers, N. C. Morris of the state department of education and Judge G. B. Dimick of Oregon City will address the meeting.

The following schedule has been prepared by Superintendent Calavan:

July 18, 10 a. m., at Gladstone—Gladstone, Jennings Lodge, Jones mill, Clackamas and Parkdale.

July 18, 2 p. m., at Milwaukie—Milwaukie, Oak Grove, Ardenwald and Harmony.

July 18, 8 p. m., at Beaver Creek—Beaver Creek, Harmony and Carus.

July 19, 10 a. m., at Willamette—Willamette, Canemah and West Linn.

July 19, 2 p. m., at Mt. Pleasant—Mt. Pleasant, Twilight and Clairmont.

July 20, 10 a. m., at Macksburg—Macksburg, Needy, Dryland and Lone Elder.

MT. HOOD ROADWAY DONATED BY JOSEPH

CLACKAMAS COUNTY REFUSED BARLOW TRAIL WHICH NOW GOES TO NATION

While the Oregon congressional delegation is urging Forester Graves to give preference if possible to the construction of the proposed scenic loop road around Mount Hood, in applying the fund that has been voted by congress for the building of national park highways, George W. Joseph announces that the Barlow toll road will be turned over to the government to become a unit of the proposed highway.

The old Barlow toll road was purchased and improved by the late E. Henry Wenne and was willed to Mr. Joseph. It is roughly estimated at a value of $100,000. Mr. Joseph's promise to turn the road over to the government is contingent upon the construction of the Mount Hood loop in the immediate future.

The offer is embodied in the following telegram dispatched to Forester Graves recently:

"Have conferred today with joint committee of Portland Chamber of Commerce and local forest service relative to opening Barlow toll road to public. In accordance with instruction of Mr. Wenne, who willed road to me, I will turn Barlow road over to your department at close of this season's travel or at any time thereafter, free of all charge, provided provision is made for maintenance of same."

"Wish in every way to assist proposed construction of Mount Hood loop road. Clackamas county will not accept road and state has no funds available. Capital stock of my company can be placed in escrow to guarantee performance by me. The late Mr. Wenne, out of his own money, expended over $40,000 cash in construction and maintenance of this road."

"Object of this offer is to make immediate construction possible by government of 26-mile loop road under Shadleford bill. You will remember meeting me on Alaskan trip, at which street committee and city engineer with power to act.

Some time ago repair orders were placed on certain property on Center streets between First and South First streets, ordering the repair of sidewalks. According to Councilman Metzner this order has not been complied with by the property owners and when the matter came up for discussion last evening Councilman Roake fathered a motion ordering a street superintendent to blockade the passage and post danger signs closing the walks. The motion was carried in a hope to hurry the much needed improvement.

CHAUTAUQUA WILL OPEN ON FRIDAY

TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL ASSEMBLY WILL BE GLADSTONE RECORD BREAKER

TENT CITY IS INHABITED

Great Program for Chautauqua Is Outlined. Beautiful Park in Readiness

The Willamette Valley chautauqua opens Friday. More than that, it opens most auspiciously with every indication of the greatest year of all at the pioneer Gladstone assembly. When the sun peeped down among the fir trees at chautauqua grounds Tuesday, it warmed up Chautauqua enthusiasm in a very wonderful manner and set the stage for the largest attendance in all the 23 years of local chautauqua life. Certainly a responsive chord was struck somewhere, for all day Tuesday enthusiastic chautauquans so forgot the Fourth, as to celebrate by simply pitching their camps at chautauqua. The official census of the white city will be around the 1000 mark, if the droves continue to swarm in today and Thursday, as they did on the glorious Fourth.

Nature surely smiled on Gladstone park. The beautiful 75-acre tract, with its forest of giant firs, its velvety carpet of moss, blue grass and clover, and its hundreds of shady nooks and cozy corners, is at its best right now and a more ideal outing could be found nowhere than 13 days in this famous old beauty spot of Oregon. Add to what nature has done all modern conveniences for campers, and outdoor life in its ideal sense is realized.

Splendid, indeed, are the attractions scheduled for this year. The program is crammed full of good things from 8:00 A. M. until 10:00 P. M. Morning classes in Shakespeare study, music, athletics, kindergarten, and Bible study are followed by the 11:00 o'clock Forum hour each day, but in addition to all these things the following auditorium attractions in the afternoon and evening respectively, will be given:

July 7—Ionian Serenaders and S. Platt Jones, humorist.

July 8—Gullatto Trio, Dr. Elliott A. Boyle and Victor Murdock, lecturer.

July 9—Sacred concert, Lyric Opera Co.; lecture—sermon, "The Vision of Glorious," Dr. Ernest J. Sias. Sacred concert, chautauqua chorus.

July 10—Royal Hungarian orchestra; Mrs. Harriet Gunn-Roberson, lecturer; Samuel Lancaster, illustrated lecture on Columbia highway.

July 11—Frederick Vining Fisher, lecturer; Elizabeth deBarrie Gill, harpist.

July 12—Kekuku Hawaiians; Miss Nola Crites, lecture; "An Evening in Hawaii," Frederick J. Halton, lecturer.

July 13—Comus Players; Walter A. King, lecturer.

July 14—International Opera Co.; Judge R. M. Wanamaker, lecturer.

July 15—Skibinsky—Welch Co.; Charles Zueblin, lecturer; Lou Beauchamp, lecturer.

July 16—New York City Marine band; Dr. Robert Sutcliff, lecture—sermon; Chautauqua chorus.

July 17—Francis Labadie, impersonations; the Rinen Sisters, entertainers; Antarctic Expedition movies, Dr. W. A. Hunsberger, lecturer.

July 18—Sequoia Male Quartette; Wood Briggs, lecturer; Sylvester A. Long, lecturer.

July 19—Robert Parker Miles, lecturer; the Kaffir Boys' choir; annual display chautauqua fireworks.

Among the well known speakers to appear at the various "forum" hours are noted Rufus Holman, Samuel Lancaster, S. Benson, John B. Yeon, Henry McGin, Eleanor Sanford-Large and others.

And baseball, too, don't forget this feature, for Clackamas county is vitally interested in the baseball schedule. The following is the schedule, which will be umpired by William Burnside of Portland:

July 7—Redmen vs. Canby.

July 8—Estacada vs. Clear Creek.

July 10—Wilsonville vs. Canby.

July 11—Clear Creek vs. Redmen.

July 12—Estacada vs. Wilsonville.

July 13—Canby vs. Estacada.

July 15—Wilsonville vs. Clear Creek.

July 17—Estacada vs. Canby.

July 18—Redmen vs. Wilsonville.

The two teams having the highest percentage will play on Sunday, July 9, and Sunday, July 16th. The teams are all well balanced and some great exhibitions are promised.

Oregon consumes 217 cubic feet of wood per capita annually, compared with 100 cubic feet per capita for the whole United States. This high per capita in Oregon is due to the fact that 82 percent of the consumption is for fuel purposes.

SUMMER INSTITUTE TO START JULY 31

MANY NOTED EDUCATORS WILL DIRECT WORK AT ANNUAL SCHOOL FOR TEACHERS

County school officers are surrounded with work this week in preparation for the fourth annual teachers' training school to be opened late this month at the Barclay school and for the series of industrial club meetings to be held about the county, beginning on July 18.

The fourth annual teachers' training school, July 31 to August 18, as outlined at this time is to be the most profitable and efficient institute ever held in this county and no effort is being spared by Superintendent Calavan or Supervisor Vedder to make it of interest to the large number of teachers who will assemble here for the course of training. The school is to be held at the Barclay school building and its program will be crowded full of instructive lessons for the teachers.

A state law requires that all teachers who have not been at their profession for at least 27 months, eight of which must have been served in this state, or who have not attended a six weeks summer course at one of the state schools, must be present at the annual institute. The teachers will enjoy one of the most profitable sessions possible, according to Superintendent Calavan, who, with Mr. Vedder, has secured a number of prominent educators to carry on the work of the institute. Teachers are requested to bring their text books with them.

The course as outlined for the annual institute has no course for high school teachers, but Mr. Calavan has secured eight prominent school and college workers to address high school teachers who will attend. Elementary teachers who are exempt from attendance upon the institute are requested, for their own good as well as that of their schools, to be present during at least three days of the summer school so that they can take advantage of the professional certificate. The only fee for teachers required to attend is a registration fee of $1.

The teachers for the summer course are F. B. Guthrie, principal of the Estacada school, agriculture; Mrs. M. L. Fulkerson, institute worker of Salem, primary work; Miss Lena Uland, principal of the Ardenwald school, geography, history and arithmetic; Brenton Vedder, school supervisor; civics and penmanship, and T. J. Gary, principal of the Brookline school, Portland, reading and language. This staff constitutes one of the most efficient that has been secured for any institute and the possibility of training under them is expected to appeal strongly to the younger teachers who are required to attend the school.

Special lecturers for the sessions, and a feature of the plans that should especially interest high school teachers, are: J. H. Ackerman, president of the Monmouth Normal school; J. A. Churchill, state president of public instruction; J. W. Kerr, president of the Oregon Agricultural college; W. T. Foster, president of Reed college, or a substitute from that institution; Dr. H. D. Shelton or a substitute from the University of Oregon; Rev. W. T. Milliken, rector of the Baptist church of Oregon City and holder of at least two college degrees; F. J. Tooe, superintendent of Oregon City schools and H. C. Seymour, state leader of industrial club work for the O. A. C. and former superintendent of Polk county schools.

PATRIOTISM RIFE ON JULY FOURTH

OLD TIME CELEBRATIONS HELD IN MANY COUNTY COMMUNITIES

THE EAGLE BOLDLY SCREAMS

Gladstone Park Holds Great Crowd of Lodgers. Scots Play at Canemah

The most largely attended celebrations on the Fourth within Clackamas county were those held at Gladstone park by the members of the Moose lodge of Portland and Oregon City and the convales of the Calendonian club and Clan McCleay at Canemah park. Both festive meetings were attended by hundreds of people, with the gathering at Gladstone park probably drawing a greater number of people than any other celebration in this part of the state during the day.

The lodges of Oregon City and Portland combined efforts to make the annual commemoration of the Fourth noteworthy and from the success of their program there is slight doubt that they accomplished their purpose. Fireworks at Gladstone were in evidence, but were secondary to a complete program of athletic events and dancing. Even the greased pig was brought into service as an amusement feature and the pursuit of the animal was the chief occupation of scores of youths during the afternoon. Dancing was a prominent feature of the program and a great many young folk from this city were attracted to the festive platform. Several thousand people spent the day at Gladstone.

At Canemah park, where the Scottish clansmen and lowlanders gathered to commemorate the independence of their adopted country, the nativity of the pleasure seekers was most in evidence. Killed Scots paraded the park throughout the day and in their costumes competed in a number of interesting and amusing events, even to the haggie contest. Dancing was also indulged in at Canemah.

An ideal day dawned for the Fourth and the elements put on their brightest garb through the day. This helped the Woodmen of the World to enjoy a great outing and picnic at Bull Run park where the usual order of events was carried out by the merry-makers.

Other celebrations were held about the county and to one or another practically every person in the county was attracted. At Clarkes a real old-time Fourth delighted large crowds and at Cedarvale park, Sandy and Estacada, the eagle screamed in mighty tones. On each program was a prominent speaker, whose patriotic address was the pivot points for the gaiety of the day.

"The American flag is the symbol of those undying and cardinal principles which it behooves every citizen to honor and defend," said C. A. Johns of Portland, who was orator of the day at the Molalla celebration. His remarks were along the same patriotic lines as those uttered by all of a dozen speakers.

At Maple Lane an enthusiastic gathering heard a splendid patriotic program and the Beaver Creek band furnished patriotic music throughout the day. Many other communities about the county had splendid celebrations for the Fourth.

LETTER FROM THE FRONT

Corps is Pleasantly Quarters in Sight of Ocean

A letter from Kent Wilson to his father, Sheriff W. J. Wilson, tells of the arrival at San Diego on Sunday of the hospital corps, O. N. G., of which the young man is a member. The corps was ordered into camp with the second battalion, Third Infantry, O. N. G., at San Diego and the tents were pitched on a high and slightly plateau.

The second battalion, of which G company, Oregon City, is a unit and to which the hospital corps is attached at present, is encamped on this plateau looking out over the ocean. According to Kent Wilson the balmy breezes from the Pacific are the most serviceable sleep producer yet discovered and he reports that the men of the several commands are enjoying themselves greatly while awaiting the call to actual service.

Holt joins Army

George Holt, sixteen-year-old boy, held here early in the week on a charge of horse stealing after he had been brought back from The Dalles by Constable Frost, was released from the charges against him when he enlisted in the regular army for a five-year term.

The youth was taken to Camp Withycombe on Wednesday to undergo a physical examination. He was charged with stealing a horse belonging to Floyd Ferguson of Scotts Mills.

The organization of the Company G Relief association by a number of prominent Oregon City people has been perfected with a view to assisting the dependents of national guardsmen at the front until such time as they are relieved from service. The new association is to work in conjunction with other organizations in the city and county and several members of the Commercial club have allied themselves with the new effort to raise funds.

Mrs. William R. Logus, wife of First Lieutenant W. R. Logus of Company G, is assistant secretary of the association and is receiving funds at the publicity office of the Commercial club. Letters have been sent broadcast asking that contributions be made so that the organization can be of assistance to the wives and children of guardsmen during their service.

The following call for funds started the campaign of the new organization early in the week:

"Company G Relief association, appeals for co-operation in looking after the families of men who have responded to the call of their country, leaving their usual occupations and foregoing their regular salaries. We must have pledges of 25 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents, $1, $2, $3, $5 and $10 a month. Fill out the blank below and send or bring pledges personally, between 9 A. M. and 5 P. M. any day, to Mrs. W. R. Logus, assistant secretary of association, publicity department, Commercial club, Oregon City."

"In compliance with this request, I, the undersigned, do hereby agree to pay Company G Relief association, on or before the first day of each month hereafter, the sum of $..... Said monthly payment to be continued to, and until, said Company G Relief association shall declare said subscription unnecessary."

SIXTEEN ENLIST IN NEW MILITIA UNIT

OFFICERS WORK ON ORGANIZATION. KELLY SHOWS SPIRIT OF SOME YOUTHS

Sixteen young men have signed enlistment blanks as recruits for the volunteer company of infantry being organized in Oregon City as a part of the proposed fourth regiment, Oregon National guard, by Captain G. W. Martin and Lieutenants H. E. Williams and H. L. Kelly. The outlook is encouraging for the organization of an experienced company of men here and recruiting offices have been opened for the reception of any who care to prepare themselves for the call that is expected by most of those versed in military affairs. For the most part the men who have already volunteered are those who have had experience either in regular national guard commands or as volunteers in the Spanish-American war. All three commissioned officers of the local command are veterans of the Spanish-American conflict.

Lieutenant H. L. Kelly, who is taking a very active part in recruiting the new company scores young men who claim patriotic feelings for not allying themselves with the volunteer company more readily.

"A few months ago the Commercial club and business men in general exerted every effort to get recruits for G company of the Third regiment," said Mr. Kelly, "and these young men said at that time that they could be counted upon in case of a call to arms, but that they did not care to join just to drill in armory. The call came and G company left home as one of the smallest companies in the regiment. With the organization of the volunteer company our patriotic young men still modestly hang back."

"Some of these slackers were asked their reasons for not enlisting," continued Lieutenant Kelly. "One of them said: 'Mother raised me to be a pool player and as I understand they do not carry pool tables along with an army there would be nothing for me to do.'"

"Another said: 'The folks have always looked out for me; helped me to get work and tided me over the rough places. They would miss me greatly if I wasn't about for them to care for.'"

"Why should I join?" asked one young man. "Look at so and so in the bank there. He is long with money and property, yet he doesn't think enough of 'My Country 'tis of Thee,' to enlist—then, why should I who have nothing?"

"Some of the boys we talk with," Lieutenant Kelly said, "seem to radiate the character of a shirker and their very appearance says: 'My people raised me to be a shirker and never taught me to mind. Where would I get off if I joined the army? I can get away with the shirk stuff and still drill until the call comes, but all details will be ready for a prompt mustering-in ceremony."

Milwaukie Residents Petition to Oust Councilmen

Captain F. C. Harlow and Herman Leeding, members of the Milwaukie council, face a recall election if they do not resign at the next meeting of the council, July 11. Petitions for their recall have been prepared and will be submitted to the council. It is planned to circulate the petitions and hold the recall election early in August. It was intended to include H. N. Hopkins in the recall, but he resigned at the last meeting of the council, Leo Shindler being elected in his place.

Captain Harlow and Mr. Leeding have been active in the erection of the new Bull Run water plant, and undertook to oust City Marshal Sam Riley and merge his office with that of superintendent of the water works and streets, but they encountered bitter opposition of the marshal's friends. Besides they have not been in harmony with Mayor G. C. Pelton's policy.

It is understood that Mr. Leeding has prepared his resignation but it is not known what Mr. Harlow will do. Mr. Leeding said yesterday that he was tired of the bitter wrangling and factional spirit displayed, but wanted simply to remain in the council until the municipal water plant had been completed and paid for and that has been practically accomplished now. Mr. Leeding incurred the enmity of the friends of the new schoolhouse by opposing the $20,000 bond issue, holding that it would throw too much of a burden on the taxpayers, with the water and improvement bonds in addition.

Cridge Says Australia Finds Plan to be Most Successful Wherever Adopted

Suppose that down the middle of Main street in Oregon City ran an imaginary line, and that on one side whoever built, beautified, improved, used, would be fined continuously and every year from $20 to $45 on every $1000 of value represented in labor, structures, trees, drains fences, etc.

Let us then suppose that on the other side of the street whoever improved and built on their land was not fined, but rewarded, by paying less than the empty lot owner along side.

What would happen?

No use in such idle theories, you may say, gentle reader. Such conditions are impossible.

That is where you have another think coming, G. R., and several more after that.

It happened in many instances all around Sydney, Australia. It happened right along. One of the suburbs of Sydney is Camperdown. The two cities joined and the line was a business street. On the Sydney side building was a misdemeanor.

On the Camperdown side it was a virtue to build and improve your holding. No fines were levied for doing so.

For four years not a building went up on the Sydney side, but scores went up on the Camperdown side. Something had to be done.

The British spirit of conservatism always knows what to do in such cases.

The legislature (parliament) forced Camperdown into Sydney—and stopped building on both sides of the street.

But there are over forty other suburbs of Sydney and they refused to punish men for building and painting and digging and beautifying the land. They refused to be gobbled, either, and bluffed the next parliament into letting them alone.

In the end, however, Camperdown gozzled Sydney, in a way. For now the little "convict village," as one wise man in Hillsboro described it to me two years ago, has fallen into the rule that land values, estimated every three years, shall bear the public burden of taxation, and that building and improving land is not to be considered a crime or misdemeanor any longer.

Sydney is larger than Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Oregon City all put together.

It is the largest city in the southern half of the world.

After years of practical demonstration of the matter it has—so far as its own local revenue was concerned—deliberately gone Single Tax!

Do you, or don't you, G. R., think 800,000 people had time enough to know what they were about?

How much time do the people of Oregon require before they can figure out what the effect surely is of fining people for doing what you want them to do?

And of rewarding for doing what you don't want them to do?

Do you, or don't you, believe that holding land idle and out of use, and asking figures for getting out of the way of those who would use it, would shame an alligator, is a virtue to be encouraged?

How would you go about doing away with the evils of land monopoly?

Do you know any body of men in Oregon proposing any measure to do away with it?

Have you read the People's Land and Loan Measure?

If not, why not?

ALFRED D. CRIDGE.

About seven hundred million feet of timber was cut on the national forests in 1915.

It is estimated that there is 348 billion feet of privately owned timber in Oregon west of the Cascade range, and 270 billion feet in Washington. The national forests contain 162 billion feet, making for the west side of the two states a total stand of timber estimated a 780 billion board feet.

The following are the sixteen who have already signed enlistment papers and others are ready to do so: Miles F. Barrett, H. P. Cloyes, A. Pullen, C. W. Brigham, F. O. Boden, J. D. Olson, Kenneth Hendricks, H. A. Swafford, E. C. Brownlee, Robert S. Green, N. L. Michels, Arthur Dailey, George Story, S. Finucane, J. N. Gardner and Dewey Hammond.

By enlisting these men are not guardsmen, but are merely signifying their willingness to answer another call to arms if it comes as a result of the Mexican trouble. There will be no land three squares a day, but I'd sure last quick with an officer motherin' me."
