SINGING KAFFIR BOYS UNIQUE NOVELTY

Balmer Brings Boys From Kaffir Land In South Africa to Chautauqua

DON'T think the black boys in this picture represent a group of cannibals, even though they may be dressed quite warlike. These boys are the members of Balmer's Kaffir Boy Choir, which J. H. Balmer has brought to America direct from South Africa. It is probably one of the most unique organizations ever brought to the west and will undoubtedly cause much comment when the boys give their concert at the Chautauqua. Each of the boys possesses a remarkable voice, and although they cannot talk the English language, they sing English songs and sing them so they are understood. Balmer spent many years among the tribes of Kaffirs and Hottentots of South Africa and says they are the most remarkable people of the world. These boys are graceful and manly and are as perfect physically as a human being could be. The Kaffirs are unusually intelligent and are anxious to learn the ways of the white people. The Kaffir choir program is one of unusual interest, and whoever spends that evening at Chautauqua will carry away with him a new conception of Africa and its possibilities.

CANBY TEACHER ELECTED

Franklin Launer is President of County Division at Monmouth

Franklin Launer of Canby, in attendance at the summer school session at the Monmouth Normal school, has been selected by his classmates as president of the Marion and Clackamas county division of the student body and Vesta Marshall of Gervais, just beyond the Clackamas county line, is treasurer.

The plan in general use of electing a president and other officers for the student body has given way to a new system at the Normal summer school. The large student body has divided itself into ten groups representing the ten principal sections of the state, and a president, secretary and treasurer has been elected for each group. The old way was believed to be too cumbersome for the largest student body that has sat in the Normal auditorium since the school was started. The student body organization covers 34 Oregon counties and the several outside states that are represented.

When to Cut Hay

Some interesting rules for cutting hay are given in Farm and Fireside.

"Grain crops, such as wheat, oats, and rye, when used for hay, should be cut while the grain is soft and doughy. At this stage the nutrients are about evenly distributed in stalk, foliage and grain."

"Timothy should be cut when about three fourths of the flowers have fallen; oat grass, meadow fescue, and orchard grass as soon as the bloom appears; redtop and brome grass when in full bloom; vetch when in bloom and before the seeds have much development; red clover and alfalfa clover before many heads have begun to turn brown."

"Alfalfa should be cut when the bloom has appeared to the extent of one fifth or one sixth of the blooming area, or when new shoots at the base of the plants are starting. From these shoots come the succulent crop. If cut too early or too late the next crop is less vigorous and the quality is injured."

Montessori Method With Horse

To train a horse so it will have plenty of spirit and work with less expenditure of energy it should be educated instead of broken, experienced horsemen believe. When a person breaks a horse he breaks its spirit and the animal responds wholly through fear.

The education of the colt should begin when it is a few days old. To teach it to be led is the first step. On many farms draft colts are not handled until they are old enough to work.

One should work around the colt until he has gained its confidence. Then he can get it used to the harness one piece at a time. It is better to not hitch the colt to a load until it is accustomed to the bit and lines and the rest of the harness. The colt should also know the meaning of the ordinary signs such as "Get up!" and "Whoa!" Then it should be hitched to a wagon with an old and gentle horse. Horse sense and patience are the two most important factors in successful horsetraining.

County Youth Injured

Frank Trullinger, who was injured in an explosion on the training ship Boston in Portland harbor Tuesday morning, is a former Clackamas county boy. He is the nephew of C. H. Dauchy of Parkplace and a grandson of Mrs. M. A. Dauchy of Gladstone. His parents are dead. Young Trullinger is serving his second enlistment in the navy.
