

MAY GET FEDERAL ROAD AID MONEY

JUDGE ANDERSON WANTS TO ATTEND MEETING WITH COMMISSION AT SALEM

CLACKAMAS WANTS $25,000

State Highway Commission to Hear
Requests for Division of $206,481

If the work of the September term of the county court can be arranged to permit his absence for the day, County Judge Anderson will attend a meeting of the state highway commission at Salem tomorrow to seek aid for Clackamas county road building under the terms of the recently enacted federal measure which provides for such assistance.

Judge Anderson conferred with members of the commission recently regarding the highway bill and the possibility of getting aid for Clackamas county roads, and was advised of the meeting which is to be held Friday.

According to the statement of the commissioners a total of $206,481 is available for road construction in Oregon, if the counties which desire aid meet the provisions of the federal enactment. The state highway funds have already been pledged and the cost, therefore, must meet the government appropriation, dollar for dollar.

State Engineer Lewis said this week that it was not probable that any work will be done this year in conjunction with the federal government. This is because of the large amount of preliminary work imposed upon the state by the provisions of the road aid act. It will not be possible for the department of agriculture to act upon any specific project until rules and regulations for the administration of the act are finally adopted.

Before considering any project the department is desirous of being informed as to the scheme adopted by the state for future construction and especially with reference to provisions for the maintenance of the roads after they are constructed.

Recently a delegation from Multnomah county visited Engineer Lewis with the idea of securing federal and state aid for the Columbia river highway project. The delegation also suggested that the work done on the Mt. Hood loop could be used to meet the dollar for dollar provision of the act. But the engineer advised the visitors that work done prior to the passage of the law could not be used in obtaining funds from the government.

In addition to Judge Anderson the meeting tomorrow will probably be attended by delegations from Klamath Falls and Sheridan, the latter on the western edge of Yamhill county.

Clackamas county is anxious to get a businesslike grasp on about $25,000 of federal road fund money to assist in building the New Era road, part of which is known as the Fly creek cut-off.

MAYOR ARRESTED

Milwaukie Official Will Answer to Charge of Assault

Charges of assault and battery preferred against Mayor G. C. Pelton of Milwaukie caused the arrest of that official on Wednesday. The complaining witness is Harry Amelee, Milwaukie property owner.

The mayor is supposed to have engaged in a debate with Amelee regarding the recent ruling of the council of that city ordering the sale of property of delinquent assessment payers. Amelee asked Mayor Pelton to account for the fact that the former's property had been included in that ordered sold, and within a few moments a rough-and-tumble fight was being staged.

Amelee swore to a complaint in Justice Kelo's court. He contends that the assessment against his property is illegal.

TRIPLET CALVES

Phillip Steiner Owns Cow Which
Mothers Three Calves

Phillip Steiner of Beaver Creek is the owner of the original jewel cow. In fact, the animal is a rare gem, for, in addition to its well-known propensities as a milk producer, this particular bovine is the proud mother of triplet calves.

You have often times heard of more than one calf, but in most cases one or both of the cow babies have died. Not so with the Steiner cow's babies, however. Three calves were born and three calves live. But Mr. Steiner saw that their ultimate fate must be that of the other twins or triplets if the burden of their keep could not be divided. Therefore the owner presented a calf to each of two neighbors and left one for the mother. The three calves are thriving.

The cow which mothered triplets is a grade Jersey.

ALBANY REMEMBERS
CHARLES E. HUGHES

TREATMENT OF LABORERS RE-
CALLED BY RESIDENTS OF HUB CITY

The recent visit of Charles E. Hughes, republican presidential candidate, to Oregon has revived the memory of his first trip to the state when he was in Albany 25 years ago as a corporation lawyer in the interest of the bondholders of the Oregon-Pacific railroad, now the Corvallis and Eastern. The story of that visit is told by the Albany correspondent to the Portland Journal.

His late trip through the state and his campaign addresses have resurrected in the minds of many of the old-time residents of the city and county the story of the storm that raged around the mission of Mr. Hughes and the conflict that was engendered by it.

Colonel William Hogg, manager of the Oregon-Pacific, had completed the construction of the road, but in doing so the company had issued bonds to the extent of eleven or twelve million dollars. In addition to this, labor, material and fuel claims aggregating $100,000 or more had piled up and were unpaid. The company had gone into the hands of a receiver and in 1891 Mr. Hughes came to Albany as attorney for the bondholders to attend a receiver's sale of the property.

The company owed material and supply men amounts running into the thousands. These, claiming that their accounts were prior to the interest of the bondholders, had pooled their interests, aggregating $100,000, and were demanding that provision be made for their payment. Mr. Hughes took the position that the bondholders came first and that the laborers and material men should follow them.

When the sale took place Mr. Hughes, on behalf of the bondholders, bid the entire property in for $1,000,000, with the understanding that no money was to pass, but that the property was to go to the ownership and control of the bondholders and the amount of the bid was to be credited against any future judgment they might obtain in satisfaction of all outstanding bondholders' claims.

Committees representing the laborers were appointed and conferences were held with Mr. Hughes, but he remained obdurate in his position. He told the committee representing the laborers that if they would withdraw from the pool and leave the material and supply men standing alone they would be given their money within 36 hours, but they refused to do this, contending that it was a matter vitally affecting local people, that the claims were just and that they had agreed to stand together.

The final conference was held in the old Depot hotel while Mr. Hughes was waiting for his train, and a last plea was made on behalf of the laborers, it being shown that under the terms of the sale, they could hope to receive not more than 10 cents on the dollar for their claims.

"I was present at the time," said A. S. Casteel, "and I remember Mr. Hughes and his statements very well. We had been without money for nine months or more and the stores would not give us further credit. We were up against it, and we wanted some provision made for our payment. We had worked hard and thought that we ought to get our money ahead of the bondholders."

"Mr. Hughes said we were making a great mistake in fighting the confirmation of the sale. He said that if we defeated the sale the receivership would continue, the property would finally be sold for $100,000 and we would get practically nothing."

The Oregon-Pacific was afterwards sold to Bonner & Hammond for $100,000 cash. Mr. Bonner sold his interest to A. B. Hammond, who in turn sold the reorganized road, the Corvallis & Eastern, to the Harriman interests, and the laborers and material men received 10 or 15 cents on the dollar for their claims, thus bearing out Mr. Hughes' prediction.

MACHINE BALKS

District Attorney Prevented from Filling Speaking Engagement

The entirely unreasonable action of the mechanical driving power of a certain well known vehicle caused the absence of District Attorney Gilbert L. Hedges from a Labor day meeting which he was to address at Wilhoit Springs. Mr. Hedges, with Mrs. Hedges and daughters, as guests in the S. O. Dillman automobile, made a very auspicious start toward Wilhoit from their homes here on Monday morning.

"Somewhere in Clackamas county," this side of Molalla, the car balked. Mr. Hedges scouted the idea of building a fire under the machine, although he well knew that this was an effective expedient with a balky horse, and the gentlemen of the party had to content themselves by coaxing the machine. Several hours of vain labor were spent in this way and finally the machine arrived at Molalla. There Mr. Hedges and Mr. Dillman worked for several more hours before they found the trouble and started back to Oregon City. In the meantime the district attorney had communicated with Wilhoit and called the meeting off.

REVIEW OF LAWS TO BE SUBMITTED

CRIDGE POINTS OUT FEATURES OF PROPOSED LEGISLA-TIVE MEASURES

SUNDAY LAWS NEED STUDY

Some Measures Submitted Many Times Have Proved Worth
In Action

There is no opposition to the state rural credits measure. There is some waste of time in campaigning for it. The state can borrow all the money it wants for four per cent and if the banks won't loan it the state can issue the bonds in small denominations and operate a state bank of its own, doing business in bonds and loaning the savings of the people offered in exchange for them.

St. Paul and San Francisco have demonstrated this.

There is practically no opposition to the limitation of the tax levies to not to exceed six per cent of the levy of the year previous.

Taxes can be slowly reduced in this way, and as slowly increased. It will occupy the attention of some good people, however, and keep taxpayers busy chasing themselves around to see where they will be at, which will be just about where they are now at the end of ten years, when the time comes to pay taxes.

The Sunday laws certainly need overhauling. They are not enforced because public sentiment is against them. The measure to repeal them will probably pass.

What has become of the dearly beloved who traveled from church to church collecting donations for a hoop tight Sunday law? It is missing in the state pamphlet, somehow.

The prohibitionists and the brewers are in it on the liquor question. Take your choice. It is quite possible that the average Oregon citizen will decide to stay right where we are for a spell until what prohibition we have had a chance to be tried out a while longer. It does not seem to promote the blind pig as much as it was expected to, and the baby has a pair of socks once in a while, bought with money that used to go for booze.

The enthusiasm over the anti-vaccination bill seems to be closely confined to a small group. The writer will vote for it on general principles. It is not going to arouse any great storm of popular attention. The medical trust don't like it, and the average man and woman don't know but what vaccination is a good thing. We can stand it either way.

As for the Pendleton Normal (proposed) by all means let Pendleton, the city that wants one, and Weston, the city that had one and lost it, fight it out. We can stand it whichever says "Nuff."

The legislature has submitted three measures that there is no opposition to, and will probably pass. They are (1) The bill to allow the governor to veto single items in appropriation measures. Can be used by a bad or weak governor to club bad measures through. Can be used by a competent and strong governor to club good measures through.

(2) Measure to exempt ships from taxation (in part). Nothing to it. So far as it goes it is single tax; but it doesn't go far enough to excite any alarm. Ships will easily float to where they are not taxed, and they are not taxed in California. All our new Columbia river and Willamette built ships will register in California ports if we do not exempt them from taxation. They will not pay taxes, anyhow, unless their owners feel very patriotic and charitable towards Oregon.

The only measure to attract any hot debate is the Peoples' Land and Loan measure. Number 306 on the ballot. It is proposed by the State Federation of Labor and the Portland Central Labor Council. It is endorsed by the American Federation of Labor and some very able men. It is opposed by many sincere people.

The labor people have a way of proposing measures with teeth and claws. Remember the liability law? It overturned judicial precedents and decisions that would fill a book as big as the Yeon building.

Remember the long fight for equal suffrage? Submitted eight times. It only carried ONCE.

It is not submitted any more.

ALFRED D. CRIDGE

14 Indictments

W. W. Smith, special agent for the state, returned on Wednesday from the Rogue river valley, where he has been taking by wholesale fishermen who have been breaking the state game and fish laws. Fourteen indictments for law breaking among fishermen were secured by Mr. Smith. In addition to the fishermen taken into the camp of the law, Mr. Smith aided in apprehending violators of the prohibition laws.

NATIONAL GUARD TO BE MUSTERED OUT

SUDDEN ORDERS CAUSE RE-TURN OF OREGON SOLDIER
BOYS TO CLACKAMAS

A message received at Camp Withycombe this morning from the war department orders the mustering out of all state troops as soon as possible after their arrival at home stations. This order, according to Captain George H. Schumacher, camp quartermaster, can not be obeyed until all "paper" work in connection with the mustering out ceremony has been completed and this can not be completed before October 1. About that time the date for mustering out will be set by Colonel Clelland McLoughlin, commanding the Oregon troops, but it is held certain that the men will remain at Clackamas until that date. This definite order came amid a flood of rumors to the effect that the entire regiment and units of the regiment had been ordered back to the border.

Officers and enlisted men alike are "up in the air" at Camp Withycombe, Clackamas station, since their arrival this week from service on the border between California and Mexico.

"What do the people of Oregon City and this county believe the war department will do with us?" This is the question asked by most of the men. They are at total loss to understand why they are sent to the home station at this time, and they cannot account for the great fund of rumors that have already been circulated. They don't know the why or wherefore of any part of the business before them.

The men and officers do know, however, that they are at home. They are glad to be here; they enjoy the reception extended by friends and relatives; they enjoy the mist that falls upon them as they work like beavers at the business of creating a tent city at Clackamas—in short, Oregon is a pretty fine place to be if you cannot be at Imperial Beach.

Some of the officers and men are of the opinion that they were sent home to protect luckless citizens from the factions which might have been engaged in the threatened railroad strike.

Another version of the cause for the order that brought the men back is that the Oregon troops were suddenly issued that they were surprising in command of Colonel Clelland McLoughlin on Tuesday and Wednesday. The last troop train passed through Oregon City on Wednesday afternoon.

The camp at Clackamas station was soon a scene of great commotion and every effort was directed toward the establishment of the camp that was deserted with the movement of troops under presidential order late in June.

The men of the regiment are loud in their opinions of the delights of army life as they have tasted it under ideal conditions along the southern California border. To a man they are the pictures of health; the change has been the greatest influence for physical development that they have enjoyed in years and they are, every one of them, anxious to get back. Of course, the interest aroused with their arrival at home again will tide them over for a time, but the members of the Third Oregon, all federal soldiers now, have not tired of the soldier's life.

However, this same interest is not generally manifested in the membership of Company G of Oregon City. The men have much complaint to make about certain treatment they received at Palm City and Camp Paradise and some few of them say they will refuse to return to the border if the same conditions are to prevail.

Lakewood Gets Water

The Lakewood district, south of Milwaukie, will be supplied with fresh water from the Milwaukie mains, as a result of the granting by the county court of a permit to residents who would lay pipes to the district. The applicants formed the Lakewood Mutual Water Users' association.

By connecting with the Milwaukie mains the Lakewood and Milwaukie Heights neighborhoods will be supplied with the same water as goes into the pipes of Portland homes.

Transient Arrested

P. B. Kellogg was arrested on Wednesday by Constable Frost and Deputy Sheriff Harrington on a charge of indecent exposure and was released the same evening under $100 bail furnished by O. P. Kellogg and Mrs. M. J. Moreland, in whose house the man had rented a room.

"What would you have done, Mr. Kellogg?" is the query that confronts the republican candidate wherever he goes. The query takes many forms, becomes specific as well as general, but is never answered. The hundred per cent candidate is also the hundred per cent dodger.

FIVE COUNCILMEN
CONSIDER PERMIT

P. R. L. & P. CO., WILL PUT HIGH
POWER WIRES OVER MAIN STREET OF CITY

BUDGET AT THE NEXT MEETING

Main Street Grade is to be Established Again in Spite of Property Owners

The consideration of an application for a jitney franchise from Oregon City to Clackamas to connect with the trains of the Portland and Oregon City railroad, or the Carver line, presented by attorneys for Stephen Carver, president of the road, was probably the most important business of the meeting of the city council on Wednesday evening. Mayor Hackett, Councilmen Templeton, Van Aulen, Andrews and Albright were absent from the meeting and Councilman Cox, president of the council, presided.

No action was taken on the Carver request as the members feared such a franchise, in the form in which it was requested, would interfere with the permit recently granted to Harry M. Shaw for a Mountain View jitney. Mr. Carver would pay four quarterly installments for the right that he requests, the total payment amounting to $24 annually. The councilmen seem to realize that such a connection would be a valuable one for Oregon City from a business standpoint and will probably grant the permit after it is so revised that there will be no possibility of conflict. Mr. Carver would operate both freight and passenger automobiles.

The P. R. L. & P. Co., through its attorneys, E. C. Latourette presented a draft of an ordinance permitting the company to maintain high tension electric wires above ground over Main street and leading to the Hawley mill addition under construction. Present city laws forbid such construction of high power wires above ground on Main street, but a vote passed the request with the provision that the wires must be 40 feet above ground. The wires will be permanent and will supply the new mill addition.

City Engineer Miller presented to the meeting a report which recommended a change of the grade of Main street between Seventeenth and Eighteenth be raised. The change would necessitate a raise of ten inches in the grade, which would still be some 14 inches below the tracks of the street car company. Greenpoint property owners objected to the engineer's report because of the fact that such a change would place the grade several inches above their property surface. The council, notwithstanding, ordered an ordinance drafted changing the grade in accordance with the report of the engineer. The street car company will have to lower its tracks considerably.

Property owners in the Greenpoint district presented a petition asking that other property owners be required to construct sidewalks in the district. Some of the walks are in very poor repair and on other property there are no walks.

Another request for side walk improvement came from residents in the neighborhood of upper Fifth street. This request was put in the hands of the street committee.

A committee composed of Councilmen Ronke, Moore and Templeton was appointed to investigate the claims of E. B. Lowe and Mrs. Kate Newton, who would have a reassessment of their property. These objections have been before the council for many months, and the committee will undertake to ascertain the wisdom of a compromise with the parties.

Ordinances appropriating $150 for the expenses of the local firemen who attended the convention at Corvallis this week, making more certain the penalty for drunkenness, and standing vehicles in front of fire houses and hydrants passed the second reading.

The next meeting of the council will probably be given over to the work of drafting the expense budget for 1917. This meeting will be held soon after Mayor Hackett returns from his vacation. City Attorney Schuebel called the attention of the council to the necessity of holding such a meeting.

ANOTHER DIVORCE

Olive Suratt Complains of Disposition of Roy Suratt

Alleging that her husband is cursed with a vicious and insanely jealous disposition and that at various times he had administered violent beatings to her, Olive Suratt filed suit for divorce this morning. They were married at Tacoma on January 1, 1910.

In Denver, Colo., in 1913, Suratt hit his wife in the eye and lips with his fist and in August, 1915, he gave her money to go to her mother and told her to "get out." She asks for the restoration of her maiden name, Olive Rogers.

CORVALLIS FIREMEN ROYALLY ENTERTAIN

OREGON CITY TAKES SECOND
MONEY IN MOST OF EVENTS OF CONVENTION

With much praise for the spirit of the residents of Corvallis and the fire department of that city, the members of the Oregon City fire department returned on Tuesday evening from the annual convention of the Willamette Valley Firemen's association held in Corvallis on Monday and Tuesday.

The local boys brought home their share of the prize money, although the superior athletic ability of the Corvallis men prevented Oregon City's department from taking first place in any event. About $100 is the sum of the prize money won by the boys here and they took second place in practically all of the events of the two-day program which required fire fighting skill or athletic ability.

Corvallis citizens and firemen entertained the volunteer fire fighters of Oregon City, Hood River, Albany, Lebanon and McMinnville and entertained in royal style. A big banquet and fine dance were features of the entertainment program. The twenty or more members of the Oregon City department who attended the convention took part in most of the social and business events.

A series of tests and demonstrations covering all manner of fire fighting activity was held during the two days. Races and sports were indulged in. Oregon City lost out in the feature contest of the program—the New York test, through the blowing out of a broken coupling on a hose line. The local firemen won this event handily in the rapid time of one minute and seventeen seconds, as compared with the time made by Corvallis of one minute and twenty-four seconds. The coupling on the Oregon City hose blew off, however, and the prize was awarded to Corvallis.

Lectures, illustrated and otherwise, demonstration of modern apparatus and such things were attended by the members of the local department. Howard Mass was mascot of the local delegation and was honored by selection as "chief of the department," in the absence of the real official. The Oregon City delegation took part in the big street parade which drew a crowd of spectators estimated at close to 10,000 persons.

MURDER CASE ON

Washington County, Scene of Tragedy,
Tries Thompson

The trial of Bennett Thompson, charged with the murder of Mrs. Helen C. Jennings and Fred Ristman near Tualatin, May 15, began in earnest at Hillsboro today with the state submitting its evidence. Most of the state's witnesses had been notified to appear at the morning session.

The jury spent Wednesday viewing the old Gore farm where Mrs. Jennings lived, the place where Ristman's body was found and the immediate locality, traveling 63 miles by automobile.

The juryman saw the house and bed in which Mrs. Jennings was found with her head crushed in; the spot where Ristman's automobile had been left behind the house; the path to the Southern Pacific railroad track, along which was found the bloody outside shirt, the inner tubes, light and license tag stolen from the automobile; the spot on the Newberg road where Ristman's hat, automobile robe, an election card and a cuff of the shirt, all covered with blood were found; the road leading from the Jennings' home to the spot where Ristman's body was found; the tiny hollow in which Ristman's body was dumped and fragments of his matted hair still clinging to the grass; the spot where the blacksmith's hammer, believed to have been used to kill Ristman, was discovered, and the roads leading from these places to the old Gore farm.

ONE MILE DONE

County Paving on East 82 Street Will Be Finished Soon

The county paving project on East Eighty-second street will be completed and in use in less than three weeks, according to an estimate made yesterday by Roadmaster T. A. Roots, who has had charge of the work.

The first mile of this project has already been completed, the last labor being applied last night. There is another mile of road still to be surfaced with the Worswick mixture. The surface on this project is six inches thick, the heaviest yet applied by the county.

The cost of this road has not been estimated by the roadmaster or the county judge as the work is not sufficiently advanced to learn costs for materials and labor.

Boy's Band to Play

The Oakland Boy's band, which has created a very favorable impression throughout Oregon since it has been touring this state, will render a concert at the Library park in this city tonight, Thursday.

The band is composed of boys ranging in age from 9 to 22 years and is said to be an organization of very talented musicians, in spite of the youth of the members.

SCHOOLS OPENING
HERE THIS WEEK

MANY IMPROVEMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE IN BUILDINGS
ABOUT THE COUNTY

HIGH SCHOOL FACULTY NEW

Superintendent Calavan Praises New
Teachers in County School System

The proverbial rod and rule is being limbered up in the good old fashion throughout Clackamas county this week and dozens of chubby little youngsters are being groomed for the ordeal of their first day in school. The county superintendent's office with Superintendent J. E. Calavan and Brenton Vedder, supervisor, in the midst of the toil, is one of the busiest places in the county seat just now, and the office of City School Superintendent F. J. Tooze is humming with activity preparatory to the opening of the schools.

One of the first institutions in the county to open its doors and to enroll pupils was the Milwaukie school, which opened on Tuesday with a greatly increased enrollment. The Oregon City schools will open September 18 and among those to open next Monday are Oswego, West Linn Clackamas, Mt. Pleasant, Sandy, Estacada, Colton and Canby. All of these communities maintain high school classes, except Mt. Pleasant and Clackamas. On Monday, the eighteenth, schools at Willamette, Molalla and Oregon City will open. These districts also have high school classes.

In Oregon City and elsewhere in the county extensive improvements have been made to school buildings and property during the vacation season. At Oregon City and Milwaukie perhaps the greatest amount of money has been spent. In the county seat much new equipment has been added, new laboratories have been equipped and general improvements made. At Milwaukie the new eight-room grade school is nearly completed and will be ready for occupancy within a few weeks. In the meantime all classes are being held in the old building, which is greatly overcrowded by the increased enrollment. The new structure is a model and will be one of the finest to be found in the entire state.

The newly created district 126, Echodell, will have completed its school building in ample time to permit of its use this year. This is a one room building and is thoroughly modern as is the new building at Hazelia, district 37.

The Parkplace school is installing a modern heating system and cannot open until the work is completed. At Gladstone a new heating system will in all probability soon be installed. A room for manual training workshops has been erected at the Bolton school in West Linn and Oswego and Willamette will build play sheds.

Most of the remaining schools in the county will open on the eighteenth although there are several which cannot open before early October because of short terms, or improvements which will not have been completed until then.

According to estimates made yesterday by Superintendent Calavan there will be 20 teachers more in the schools this year than there were last year. This is evidence of the growth of the school population and the decrease in the size of the classes. There is a great tendency to make classes as small as possible so that pupils may get the maximum benefit from their training.

The increase in enrollment of pupils will approximate 10 per cent, according to the superintendent. The largest increase will be in the high school classes because of the workings of the new tuition of those pupils attending high schools elsewhere than in their own districts when such districts do not maintain standard high schools.

Superintendent F. J. Tooze of the Oregon City schools estimates the increase in enrollment here at least at 10 per cent and thinks that it may probably go even higher than that figure. There are additional teachers here and the faculty staffs are composed, especially in the high school, of new teachers. The city school board has been very careful in its selection of teachers this year and the corps is undoubtedly on a par, from a standpoint of efficiency, with the retiring staff.

"The majority of the new teachers in the schools of the county," Superintendent Calavan stated, "have been very well selected. Their records have been established and they will be a very capable and creditable addition to the teaching forces of the county school department. With the very efficient teachers who remain in the county from previous years, this county is equipped almost perfectly."

Superintendent Calavan highly praises the tuition fund law which will be in force this year. He believes it will be responsible for a very great
