GILBERT L. HEDGES

If the voters of Clackamas county take the trouble to learn the record of Gilbert L. Hedges, candidate for district attorney, that worthy gentleman will get every vote the county can give him, except, perhaps, those of one William Stone and one George C. Brownell.

Mr. Hedges has a record that stands out among any established by a district attorney in Oregon. It is a record of action—a record of accomplishment and a record of economy such as has not been duplicated either in Clackamas county or in any other.

It is a record that any public official should be proud of, for it is not fringed with the dubious actions that so frequently characterize the district attorney's office, where fear of consequences curtails the duty that the official owes to his constituents.

Mr. Hedges plays no favorites, and he steps back from nothing that is for the benefit of the people whom he represents. If ever a man could face the voters of this county, saying that during his term of office he had transacted every item of business in that office without fear or favor and with only the good of the whole community in view there would be either many wonderful men in public office or there would be a large army of truth distorters.

But Mr. Hedges is the one man among all office holders in this county or any other who can honestly face the voters of his community with that statement. He has vigorously prosecuted the law breaker, tempering the exaction of a full measure of justice with the humanity of a good, clean heart, and he has been a winner before the courts since the day he tried his first case for the county.

He has prosecuted 15 violations of the prohibition law and has secured 14 convictions. That is a record in itself that should re-elect Mr. Hedges. He has prepared more than 700 indictments and complaints during his term in office and no court or individual has ever found one of them faulty in any respect. He has prosecuted several important cases before the state supreme court and for the county has prepared such masterly legal presentations that he has won every single case.

Before the supreme court at this time a case against the millionaire timber barons of the county is pending. Mr. Hedges is responsible for the prosecution of these extensive holders of the county domain and he is fighting them to the last ditch that they may be forced, regardless of their great wealth, to play fair with the county which Mr. Hedges has so capably represented. If law will exact justice from these and others, Mr. Hedges will see to it that the law is applied in its proper way.

For economy the administration of Mr. Hedges is remarkable. He has been constantly engaged at protecting the interests of the taxpayers of the county and has brought many indictments before the courts, yet he has spent a minimum of county money. When the state went dry the county court appropriated $3000 for the enforcement of the prohibition law. This law has been in effect ten months, and although many convictions have resulted from prosecutions by Mr. Hedges there is today in the county treasury the original $3000 in addition to $200 or more coming from fines for liquor law violations.

Consider that, voter! It is remarkable to think of the activity of Mr. Hedges in the way of prosecuting liquor lawbreakers and then to realize that the original fund is still intact, plus $200 or more. And every last penny of the $900 salary of the deputy district attorney has been paid over and above this. The rigid prosecution of lawbreakers and the hiring of a competent deputy to assist in the mass of legal work before the county has not cost the taxpayer a dollar. Could any other candidate in the field achieve such results? Instead of gorging the taxpayers to hire a deputy and to pay for the enforcement of the prohibition law, Mr. Hedges has accomplished wonderful results without spending a cent of the funds of the taxpayers.

During his administration Mr. Hedges has rid the county of those infamous joints where vile spirits were but influences in the ruin of little girls and boys and in tearing from the family firesides mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters. Does Mr. Hedges deserve credit for that noble work? The Courier is convinced that he does and it is convinced that the voters of the county will give him the credit that is his due by re-electing him.

Mr. Hedges has fought falsehood and backbiting throughout the campaign, yet he has fought his political enemies with that same open, clean style, taking not the slightest advantage in any quarter, that has characterized his work as district attorney. It is a work that has been carried on without fear or favor and a work that deserves to be continued. That it will be the Courier feels certain, and relies upon the intelligent voters of Clackamas county to see to it that Gilbert L. Hedges remains in office for another term.

As city attorney of Oregon City, William M. Stone, republican candidate for district attorney, wrote the following opinion in April, 1913, and presented it to the mayor and city council:

"Honorable Mayor and City Council: Gentlemen: The three saloon keepers who lost their licenses in Oregon City to sell intoxicating liquors, can dispose of the same under their government licenses in quantities of not less than one gallon, nor more than four and seven-eighths gallons. This is regulated by the federal statutes, and THE CITY HAS NOTHING TO SAY AS TO THE SALE AND DISPOSAL OF LIQUOR UNDER THESE GOVERNMENT LICENSES, as long as the parties do not sell in quantities less than one gallon. They are entirely within the jurisdiction of the federal court. Respectfully submitted, William M. Stone."

FRITZ BOYSEN, NOTORIOUS AND INFAMOUS PROPRIETOR OF THE HOTEL BELLE AT MILWAUKIE, WHEN THAT JOINT WAS A DEN OF VICE UNDER BOYSEN'S PERSONAL CHARGE, HELD A GOVERNMENT LIQUOR LICENSE. JULIUS WILBUR, WHOSE LAWLESSNESS IN THE MATTER OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC HAS MADE THE FRIAR'S CLUB INQUITOUS FOR YEARS AND RESULTED IN THE BIG RAID OF SEVERAL WEEKS AGO, HELD A GOVERNMENT LIQUOR LICENSE.

HOW ABOUT IT, VOTER? THINK IT OVER!

J. E. JACK

The Democratic party in Clackamas county is peculiarly fortunate this year in having selected through the direct primary only candidates of the highest type of citizenship and of the first rank among experienced men. The party has not put forward a candidate for each of the offices to be filled on November 7, realizing first its position as the minority party and desiring to put before the voters the best possible type of men rather than attempt to bring some sort of a candidate out for every office.

J. E. Jack is one man whom the party has selected as its candidate for the legislature who can present himself for the favorable ballot of the voters upon a record of long and capable service. Mr. Jack has been in the assessor's office for eight years, and prior to that time he served the county faithfully in other branches of its business. Not only was he a successful business man in private life, but he has carried a great amount of county work in a capable and conscientious manner that entitles him to election. There are three seats in the legislature to be filled, and from the fact the Clackamas county is about one-third democratic it is no more than just to believe that one of these seats will be filled by Mr. Jack. The voter casting his ballot for this candidate may assure himself that in the legislature Mr. Jack will exercise the same conscientious care in handling the business of the state as he has in handling the business of the county.

As a suggestion: Voters desiring to elect Mr. Jack should vote only for the one legislative candidate. If votes are given to two other candidates together with Mr. Jack a majority vote for the others will naturally result, because those who do not vote for him will be adding votes also to the others on the list.

C. W. RISLEY.

As a candidate for the county commissioner, C. W. Risley of Milwaukie is too well known to Courier readers to require long eulogy. Mr. Risley has spent a lifetime in this county and, by careful business ability he has created a substantial private business that pays into the county treasury a considerable sum each year in taxes.

There are many things that could be said in praise of Mr. Risley and there are many ways in which his fitness for the office he seeks could be pointed out, but his past performance as matters of common knowledge, voters know of his capable activities as road master in his home district—they know that in and about Milwaukie can be found roads among the best in the county, and in most cases produced at a much less cost than elsewhere. Why, then, without further presenting the case of Mr. Risley, who stands upon a firm platform of ability, will a voter hesitate in casting his ballot for such an official? It remains unquestioned that Mr. Risley would acquire himself as county commissioner in the same successful manner to all concerned as he has done in the transaction of his own business affairs.

G. F. JOHNSON.

With the experience of fifteen years in the work of tax assessment, divided in three counties and widely separated portions of the state, G. F. Johnson is a candidate for election as assessor of Clackamas county.

The hale old pioneer stock that brought Mr. Johnson into the world has told in his own traits and character. He has been a most capable and conscientious county employ here for eight years and he has probably saved to the county a good portion of his salary in eliminating the hire of draftsmen to do the work of that nature demanded by the assessment work. He is one of those basely honest gentlemen who bring credit upon themselves and their constituents when they are called upon to serve in public office. Mr. Johnson's work as county assessor, if he is elected next week, will reflect credit not only upon the man himself, but upon the county which places him in office. We recommend Mr. Johnson to the favorable consideration of all the voters only because we are firmly and honestly convinced that he not only deserves the honor, but because no more capable person could be placed in charge of the assessment work.

ED. FORTUNE

Last, but far from least in the democratic roll of office seekers upon whom the voters will ballot next Tuesday, is Ed. Fortune, candidate for constable of this judicial district. Mr. Fortune is well and popularly known throughout the county, where he has taken active part in a wide range of activities. As a business manager of one of the most important parts of the annual county fair Mr. Fortune has made a record for himself that has resulted in his being selected for similar duties at the state fair.

Mr. Fortune is one of those little men so full of vim and vigor that his stature is more than made up for by an abundance of fortitude and the good old fashioned tenacity of will and purpose.

PROGRESSIVE LEADERSHIP

In announcing an eight-hour day for the employees of a shipbuilding concern at Portland, the president of the concern, who disclaims allegiance to any political party, credits Mr. Wilson with having furnished the inspiration for the voluntary action of the corporation. This change, he says, "was brought about by President Wilson's action in the railroad case." That the eight-hour movement in general industry has received a decided and perceptible impetus from Mr. Wilson's endorsement of the principles involved has been evident during the last few weeks. There have recently been other notable cases, as in the clothing trades of Chicago, of the unsolicited concession of the eight-hour day by employers. Henry Ford, who has been an enthusiastic believer in the workday of shorter hours on account of the excellent results observed in his automobile factories, declares that if Mr. Wilson never does another thing for the workers "he will always have the honor of having begun a movement that may revolutionize working conditions" for the better.

However, the settlement of the railroad strike by congress may be criticized by the more conservative-minded, nothing could be surer than President Wilson's future rank as one of the great progressives of his time by reason of his powerful stroke in support of the eight-hour movement in industry. The effects will be lasting and incalculable. That the wage earners in innumerable occupations will the sooner be advantaged by shorter hours, with something more to live for aside from toil, because of the plain-spoken and untrifled declaration of the president that the eight-hour day has "the sanction of society," must be apparent to all who labor for wages.

In identifying the democratic party with this movement, Mr. Wilson performed a genuine feat of constructive, progressive leadership. The cause of 100 per cent progressivism has been signally promoted in this country by the democratic president.

Republicans like Mr. Hughes, Mr. Taft, Mr. Root, Nicholas Murray Butler, Mr. Lodge, Mr. Dewey, Mr. Weeks—there is no end of these conservative republican leaders—are unmistakably giving their party a tory cast by their attitude.

These men misinterpret naturally enough the action of congress on the Adamson law because they are so thickly crusted with conservatism, but are they, following Mr. Hughes' leadership, to dominate all republican thinking and all republican sympathies on the question?

The liberal, the progressive attitude, is that of Mr. Ford, the great manufacturer and employer of an army of workmen; and the liberal and progressive leadership is that of Mr. Wilson, who is today the only great progressive left in American politics.—Springfield Republican.

FARMER REAPS GAIN BY EIGHT-HOUR LAW

Prevented Tying Up of His Products Valued at $6,000,000,000.

PRESIDENT IS BEST FRIEND.

By FRANK G. ODELL.

Editor Nebraska Farm Magazine.
The New York Sun quotes James Wilson, of Iowa, former Secretary of Agriculture, as saying that the farmers were hit hardest by the Adamson eight-hour law, which stopped the threatened general railroad strike. According to The Sun, Mr. Wilson said: "The farmer has no eight-hour day. Should that number of hours become general in all occupations, including the farm, the prices of food would rise still higher than those current."

The logic of the venerable ex-Secretary is bad. The farmer is not worrying about the high price of food. He raises his own food. He grows food for sale. That's his business. If, as the ex-Secretary says, the eight-hour day will increase the cost of food, the farmer has everything to gain. And "Uncle Jim" has overlooked the fact that the farmers of the United States had not less than $6,000,000,000 worth of products practically ready to send to market when the strike crisis was imminent at the first of September. The threatened strike would have paralyzed the farmer's market and stopped the wage of the worker in every industry.

Incumbent losses, running into hundreds of millions, were averted when the strike was prevented. Woodrow Wilson did it.

"Tanna Jim" was Secretary of Agriculture through four Republican administrations—sixteen years. These were sixteen years of monopolistic control of the farmers' market. During this period, these great combinations, which have stood between the producer and the consumer, reached the zenith of their power. Greed and extortion ran riot. The high cost of living became a cry of universal complaint, for which the farmer was made the goat.

During this period the farmers of the country complained continually of capitalist extortion. They held conventions throughout the great grain and live stock belt to vote their protest. They sent deputations of able men to Washington. They sent their appeals for justice to the Secretary of Agriculture, and waited at the door of the White House during the administrations of McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. They asked for bread and received stones of indifference. They demanded justice and received platitudes about "prosperity," "contentment," and "making two blades of grass grow where one grew before."

Then came another Wilson—Woodrow Wilson. Things began to change. David F. Houston was made Secretary of Agriculture. For the first time in the history of the Government the business problems of the farmer received the attention of his Government. The Office of Markets and the Bureau of Rural Organization were created to help him break the stranglehold of entrenched monopoly. The epoch-making Rural Credits Law was passed by Woodrow Wilson at a Democratic congress. The power of the usurer and extortioner was broken when that act was signed.

The farmer has a good memory. He does not forget his life-long battle with entrenched privilege—organized and grown purse-proud during forty years of Republican indifference and misrule. He will not forget that it was WOODROW WILSON, the People's President, who saved his market from ruin on Sept. 2, 1916. The special pleading of Republican defectors of special privilege and monopoly will find the farmers ready on Nov. 7.

LOVIN' YOU

Jes' to love, that's enough.
Sort of lazy-like an' dream,
Wonderin' if ways is rough
For you—or if happy seem!
Wishin' I could plant a rose
Bloomin' pretty in your way,
Softenin' the breeze that blows
Where your wanderin' footsteps stray.

Jes' to kneel at night alone
Lookin' up there at the stars,
Like a captive walled in stone
Peekin' through the prison bars—
Do the angels listen now
When you don't know what to say?
And the thought of you—somehow
Blurs up Heaven—anyway.

Jes' to hear a little song
Softly hummin' in the air,
Loungin' lovin' all day long,
Music goin' everywhere.
Sweet as honey in a hive,
Life is like a dream come true—
Good enough to be alive
Lovin' in the world with you.

TEACHERS WILL VISIT.
Portland Delegation Will Be Guest of Mrs. Eva Emery Dye
Portland's public school teachers will hold an excursion to the woolen and paper mills of Oregon City next Saturday, under the auspices of the

District Attorney GILBERT L. HEDGES

Candidate for Second Term as

District Attorney for Clackamas County

Voters, I ask your support solely upon my record of accomplishments
I am proud of my record!

Here It Is:

I have tried damage cases against Clackamas County amounting to $31,434.10 AND WON EVERY SINGLE CASE FOR YOU TAXPAYERS!

I have tried fifteen liquor cases and secured fourteen convictions, a record probably unequalled by any district attorney in the State of Oregon.

I have tried five important county and state cases in the Supreme Court of Oregon and have won EVERY CASE!

I have prepared over 700 criminal complaints and indictments, and no court, high or low, has ever declared a single one of them faulty or defective.

Last December at the budget meeting $3000 was appropriated to enforce the dry law. Six months' record to July 1st, as shown by the county clerk's semi-annual statement, shows that after paying all expenses of enforcing the law, including deputy's salary, the fund was absolutely intact and the county was $194.53 ahead. Since that date $50.00 in additional fines has been added to the fund.

I have assisted hundreds of boys and girls in the juvenile department.

The district attorneys of the State of Oregon have chosen me as their vice-president and have honored me with membership on the committee on revision of criminal laws of Oregon.

MOLALLA HOUSE ROBBED

Frank Dicken Suffers Loss While Family is at Neighbor's

The home of Frank Dicken, a Molalla merchant, was entered and robbed on Saturday night, and Sheriff Wilson, with deputies and bloodhounds, spent most of Monday in an unsuccessful search of the countryside for the man or men who stole silverware, jewelry and about $40 in cash. Mr. and Mrs. Dicken were spending the evening with neighbors when the robbery occurred.

On Tuesday part of the stolen silverware was found on the south side of the Molalla band hall, where the thief had discarded it, perhaps because of its weight.

PUPILS IN PLAY

John Mason Will Coach High School Cast in "Farm Folks"

"Farm Folks" is the play which will be produced in the near future by the Oregon City high school pupils for the benefit of the Hesperian, the school publication. John Mason, of the high school faculty, has selected a cast and will have charge of rehearsals for the production. A student body meeting called to discuss matters in connection with the Hesperian was held at the school Monday and members of the staff as well as teachers addressed the assembly.

Reception at Canby.
Seventy-five guests were present at a reception given Friday night in the parlors of the Methodist church at Canby for the Rev. Boyd Moore and the ten teachers of the Canby schools. The receiving line included the Rev. and Mrs. Joslyn, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bair, Mrs. M. J. Lee and Mrs. H. A. Berkman. A musical program was the feature of the evening's entertainment and short addresses were made by Adeline B. Weyeth, Professors Harvey Tobie, H. H. Eccles, Fred Roth and the Rev. Mr. Moore. Light refreshments were served to the guests by Mrs. H. Brown and Mrs. M. P. Sailor.

W. W. Everhart of Molalla Republican Nominee for County Assessor

I consider the office of Assessor one of the most important offices of the county.

If elected to this office it will be my aim to conduct the same in a fair and impartial manner.

I am a farmer, living on a small farm, and have had experience in land values in different sections of the county. My purpose is to employ help to take care of all the work pertaining to the assessor's office, such as drafting, etc., and to do my duty as I see it in a courteous way without fear or favor.

Only Successful Remedy for Creating Gall Stones

Fruitola and Traxo Brought Relief After Doctor Said Nothing But Operation Would Help

In the opinion of Mr. W. C. Dillehay, 513 Morton St., Nashville, Tenn., Fruitola and Traxo is the only successful remedy for gall stone trouble. In a letter to the Pinus Laboratories Mr. Dillehay says: "After a leading Nashville physician had failed to relieve my wife, and we were told an operation was necessary, I heard of Fruitola and Traxo and we decided to at least give it a trial. I gave her this medicine as directed and after four doses she was relieved of nearly a quart of gall stones, conclusive evidence that an operation was by no means necessary."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus Laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in Oregon City, Portland, Canby and Hubbard at the Huntley Bros. Co.'s drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant and disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, discharging the accumulated waste to the sufferer's intense relief. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alternative that is most effective to rebuild the weakened, rundown system.

A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Illinois.
