HAWLEY THRILLS WITH PATRIOTISM

"PUT THE OLD FLAG AWAY AND GET ONE WITH A YELLOW STREAK"

TELLS OF WAR INVENTIONS

Live Wires Spread Fine Dinner in Honor of Congressman's Homecoming

"When this country has citizens who will not fight for America, right or wrong, it is time to fold up the old flag, put it in a glass case as a relic and get a national banner with a yellow streak in it."

That Congress is working harmoniously and with a realization of the great seriousness of the world war to America, was the statement of Congressman Hawley. He directed his address toward a review of the history of the participation of the United States from the commencement of war until President Wilson declared that a state of war existed as to this nation.

Mr. Hawley's talk was a thoroughly advised narrative that held the Live Wires spellbound in interest for more than an hour.

The United States government has many surprises in store for the Kaiser, Mr. Hawley said, and to prove this he told of several new inventions which the war department has before it. Some of these, the nature of which Mr. Hawley disclosed confidentially to the meeting, are wonderful destroyers, involving in their invention the greatest minds of the nation.

He told of the new flying machine which will travel at a speed as low as one mile an hour, and can go as fast as 150 miles an hour. This and other new inventions will help the United States to achieve her mission in the conflict, the congressman said.

Americans of all ages must prepare for their share in the war, he declared, and all able-bodied men will be asked to fight before the end of the conflict comes. Next spring, he stated, will see the United States actively in the fray and her full influence in combat cannot be known until that time.

Patriotic sentiment at the meeting took the form of loud cheering and applause and at the conclusion of Mr. Hawley's talk the Live Wires cheered and applauded for a full five minutes.

So shamed will America be if her citizens do not take their just burdens in the war, that their children, when studying the history of the future, will find the pages covering 1917 pasted together to keep from their attention the crime of their country, said Mr. Hawley.

Mr. Hawley told of the causes of the war as they are seen through the eyes of the government unit of which he is a member at Washington, and he told many things the United States is doing to help her allies in Europe. He called attention to the fact that the American nation has not quite awakened to the seriousness of it all. When our boys get into the trenches and the popping bullets of the enemy write for America a casualty list such as comes into Canada each day people in this country will know they are in a state of war and will bend the energies they seem to hold back at present to make the United States emerge victorious at the end of the strife.

The congressman did not attempt to guess when the war would end, but warned his audience to prepare for the worst in the way of wartime service. Saying that, next spring would see the nation's forces in full action overseas he looked forward to the day when the age of men in service will have to be extended to include everyone between the ages of 18 and 50.

The Live Wires spread a fine dinner in honor of the congressman. Beans grown on the Live Wire farm were prepared as the principal article of food. Prior to Mr. Hawley's talk the Wires were addressed by Dr. Hugh Mount, who had just returned from a big medical convention at Chicago. Dr. Mount told in an interesting manner of the activities of the medical profession in the war and of the work of the Red Cross.

A heated discussion of labor problems and an attempt to put over a resolution asking for the arbitration of local troubles took up considerable time at the meeting. Manager B. T. McBain, of the Crown-Willamette mills, spoke against any attempt at arbitration. E. E. Brodie, Senator W. A. Dimick and Ed Carter talked in favor of the resolution, and O. D. Eby, Commercial club president, attempted to qualify

FARMERS OF COUNTY ORGANIZE A COUNCIL

WILL COOPERATE FOR IMPROVEMENT OF FARMS, FARMERS AND CROPS

At last it has come to the farmers' turn to organize and a long step in that direction was taken last week when what will be known as the County Council was started on its way by a meeting at the court house.

Not for a strike, but for the benefit of farms and farmers was the organization conceived. It will cooperate in every possible manner with agencies that look to the improvement of farms, farmers, and farm crops and animals, and will devote much of its attention to cooperative work with the county agent. It will especially act as a board of advisers for the county agent in his work throughout the county. Improvements suggested by the county agent or others will go before this board and it will study the requirements of each community with a view to getting the maximum result from any effort.

The organization of the County Council was handled by Paul V. Marris, state leader of county agents, his assistant, W. L. Kaddery, and R. J. Werner, Clackamas county agricultural agent. The membership of the council includes some of the county's most progressive farmers and stock men.

Among the first things that will receive attention of the council is the matter of providing lime for the farmers. Then such subjects as mole and gopher control will come up, there will be feeding demonstration work, crop demonstrations, silo construction, livestock improvement and disease control and eradication; standardization of products and control of all forms of farm and livestock pests.

The following officers and members of the County council, which will ask for general cooperation from all progressive farmers, enrolled at the organization meeting:

President H. G. Starkweather, Milwaukie; vice-president, C. E. Spence, Beaver Creek; secretary, treasurer, M. C. Glover, Eagle Creek; members, Frank Ewing, Estacada; Mr. Cook, Hazelia; Otis Dory, Molalla; T. P. Wilson, Logan; C. L. Thomas, Stafford; E. C. Dye, Park Place; E. P. Coulton, Damascus, and Judge Dimick, Oregon City.

SPEAKERS WILL REQUEST AID IN RAISING $4,000

"Do you realize we are at war?" is the question asked by A. C. Howland, chairman of the Y. M. C. A. war work committee for Clackamas county in calling a public meeting to be held at the Commercial club on Saturday afternoon. The meeting is called for 2 o'clock and will be addressed by C. C. Rarick of Portland, a noted orator. Mr. Howland points to the importance of the work the Y. M. C. A. is called upon to do for the American soldiers and asks for a maximum attendance at the meeting. This county is to furnish $4,000 to the $35,000,000 fund asked for from the nation by the Y. M. C. A.

"Next in importance to the flotation of the two issues of the Liberty loan of 1917, is the campaign to be waged during the coming week by the local Y. M. C. A. war work committee, for the purpose of raising a fund of $4,000 as Clackamas county's quota of $35,000,000, with which to continue the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the national army cantonments and along the battle fronts overseas," said A. C. Howland, county chairman, yesterday.

INFAMOUS J. WILBUR IS AGAIN IN TOWNS OF LAW

Julius Wilbur, notorious violator of the laws of man and decency, and one-time proprietor of the Friars' Club at Milwaukie, is in the toils of the police again for violating the prohibition law. Wilbur was arrested late last week by Portland officers who raided the Claremont tavern on the Linnton road.

Wilbur, who is the proprietor of the road house, was charged with violating the prohibition law, and 11 persons who were at the tavern were arrested and held as witnesses against Wilbur. Two five-gallon kegs and several bottles of whiskey were also seized as evidence.

Wilbur has a long record for bootlegging since the state voted dry and has several cases now pending in the courts, one of which is to be taken to the supreme court of the United States on appeal. He received a jail sentence when arrested as the proprietor of the Friars' club and the case is still in litigation. He has not yet served his sentence.

the organization as a friend of both elements. The resolution was defeated by a vote of 11 to 14. The Wires will extend an invitation to Dr. W. T. Foster, of Reed college, to talk about his European travels during the war.

MILLS RESUME AT HALF CAPACITIES

STRIKEBREAKERS EMPLOYED AT CROWN-WILLAMETTE. HAWLEY MEN RETURN

CROWDS HEAR LABOR'S SIDE

McBain Says Slanderers Will Not Get Jobs Again. Workers Would Arbitrate

Machines which are said to have a capacity of 75 per cent of the Crown-Willamette Paper company's total output were put into operation this week with strike breakers from Portland, Lebanon and Oregon City doing the work. The strike breakers will work in three shifts and the plant will operate 24 hours a day.

The Hawley Pulp & Paper company Tuesday morning started one machine with a 50-ton capacity daily in the new mill on Main street and with the one machine will turn out approximately one-half the usual production. The first order turned out was that of the Crown-Willamette company upon which union men had refused to work. The Hawley company did not import men for their work, but the machines are entirely in the hands of former employees, men who walked out when the unions ordered them not to work on an order sent over from the Crown-Willamette mills, which were the first to strike.

The mill managers believe they have crippled the strike, in one case by importing strike breakers and in the other by the return of a sufficient number of strikers to make operation possible. The striking unions, however, have a different view of the affair and at a meeting Monday the Pulp and Sulphite Makers' union voted to appropriate $1000 for the continuation of the strike and the Paper Makers' union voted $500 for the same purpose.

Manager B. T. McBain continues to hold in his attitude against the unions. He stated at a meeting of the Live Wires Thursday night that the men who had abused him and the Crown-Willamette Paper company would not be given back their positions under any circumstances, but all other men who are out and desire to return to work will be reinstated if they discard their union affiliation. Mr. McBain said that George Schneider, vice president of the Paper Makers' union, was personally to blame for much of the trouble here. Schneider, Mr. McBain charged, made the threat when he was discharged from a Canadian paper mill, that he would live to "get" the Crown-Willamette company. This strike is one of his ways of "getting" the company, Mr. McBain says.

Mr. McBain points to what he and the company have done for the laboring men in the past 10 years at the local mills alone. He says that wages in the local mill today are from 15 to 30 per cent better than the scale demanded by the union national organization, and says that he can do more for the men in his employ than all the Schneiders and Hartwigs in the country. The Hartwig referred to is a special organizer who has been working here. Mr. McBain says that he will refuse under any and all conditions to meet with the men as representatives of unions, or as an organization of any kind, if the men choose to return to work he will talk with them individually or give them back their places without question. He insists that so long as Organizer Hartwig and Mr. Schneider have anything to do with the men, he will not even talk with them.

At the Live Wire meeting, where Mr. McBain talked, Senator Walter A. Dimick and Ed Carter maintained that it was the right of laborers to organize just as much as it was the right of employers.

A crowd estimated at 1500 packed into Busch's hall on Saturday evening to hear strikers present their side of the labor troubles that have closed down the two paper mills here, and a number of laboring men presented the workers' case against their employers. The Crown-Willamette company came in for the chief part of the criticism. George Dunmire pointed out the cause of the trouble and gave labor's reasons for holding out for its demands. Ed Mayer appealed to Oregon City business men to take the strike situation in hand.

Ed S. Launer, prominent in local labor circles, talked at length upon various phases of the trouble. When he labeled B. T. McBain, resident manager of the Crown-Willamette company, as "kaiser across the Willamette," applause from the audience lasted several minutes. Mr. Launer branded the telegrams from President Johnson, of the company, as a series of falsehoods, and called attention to what the official said about the cost of living being checked. He predicted that the mill

FOOD CARDS SIGNED BY LOYAL PATRIOTS

OLD HIGHLAND COMES INTO FAME. PLEDGE ANSWERS SENT TO WASHINGTON

Seven school districts in Clackamas county, to the households of which food administration cards were delivered by school children recently, have returned reports to County School Superintendent J. E. Calavan of 100 per cent signed. Meaning, of course, that every home in these districts will obey carefully the rules of food conservation during the period of the war. Old Highland was the first district of the seven to report 100 per cent return from the conservation campaign that has been carried to every section of the county.

Since Old Highland did herself proud in conservation six other districts have reported maximum returns. They are Eagle Creek, Firwood, Corral Creek, Claremont, Douglass Ridge and Mount Hope. Several districts have reported favorable returns approximating a total of 100 per cent. Among these are Wilsonville, 97; Clarkes, 96; Maple Lane, 95; Boring, 96; Teazel Creek, 97; Tracy, 96; Willamette, 97; Spring Brook, 98; West Linn, 95; North Logan, 96, and Gladstone, 95. The reports in are from only about one-half the districts of the county and some of those given here, as well as others reported, are as yet incomplete.

Superintendent Calavan believes that when all have reported the county will show approximately 90 per cent of the cards signed. For the lowest per cent of signatures Without takes the prize with just half of the total cards distributed returned signed. It is probable that this district and others have more cards to send in. Among the few low ones are New Era, 50; Marmot, 50; Dryland, 53; Eby, 56; Advance, 60; Mullino, 62; Needy, 60; Rock Creek, 61; Glad Tidings, 63; Brown, 65; Leland, 62 and Monte Cristo, 66.

At Crescent one man is said to have refused to sign the card because he "did as he pleased." One matron said she did not have enough to eat as it was, and had no need for signing conservation pledges. Many residents are said to make the fact that they have already economized to the limit the excuse for not signing the cards. In the Fir Grove district 13 out of 14 cards were signed. The one who failed to sign is said to be against everything American. The answers given when cards are presented for signature will be noted as carefully as possible, and it is said to be possible in several cases that the refusal of home keepers will not mark the end of the matter.

AGED WANDERER TRAVELS SUNDOWN TRAIL TO GRAVE

Without telling a word about the life that had bereft him of home and friend to wander alone and in privation until he came to the climax of his long and seemingly sorrowful life beneath a roadside bridge, a victim of a dreaded plague, F. W. Baber died at the Oregon City hospital on Tuesday.

The aged and infirm old man was found in want of nourishment and shelter last Saturday evening, in a half dead condition beneath a bridge on the highway near New Era. With all the feeble energy he could muster he told Sheriff Wilson that he had been under the bridge during two cold days and nights without food or warmth. He was taken to the Oregon City hospital, but all that medical science could do for him was futile in checking the advanced stage of pneumonia from which he died Tuesday.

Baber tried to tell his story, but the hand of death had gripped him too securely. He did say that he had walked from California—and there his story ended so far as human ears will ever hear it. Without the pomp and ceremony of a modern funeral the aged man was lowered into his grave in the potter's field yesterday by R. L. Holman, and the thumping of the clods on a plain fir casket paid for by the county played the immortal melody of death's triumph, erasing all the sadness of a lifetime and closing once and forever, the history of the existence of F. W. Baber, friendless and homeless wanderer.

COUNCIL'S PLANS AUGUR HOSTILITY

CROWD GATHERS TO SEE FRENCH RELIEVED BUT IT IS DISAPPOINTED

BUDGET MEETING TOMORROW

Templeton May Reveal Large Waste of City Funds. Two Budgets to be Considered.

With the advent of delightful fall weather things in Oregon City's council halls seem to predict a merry pre-holiday season, with exposure of money dealings as a promised feature of the program. The old time ginger, at any rate, is to be instilled into the transaction of the city's business and some lively times are predicted.

Not the least of these will be the annual budget meeting to be held tomorrow evening, when the regular city budget will battle for public favor with one prepared and to be presented by Councilman Henry M. Templeton of the first ward.

At a meeting on Wednesday evening the council transacted routine business for the month and laid the foundation for some of the future meetings that threaten to startle the community clear out of its recent peaceful habits. The council was hemmed in and choked by the tobacco smoke of nearly a hundred persons at the meeting last night—a crowd gathered to see and hear Chief of Police Lee French turn bodily from his mooring as head of the protective force of the city and cast headlong into the cold, cruel night. A rumor, gaining headway like a Chicago fire, got started about town late in the afternoon that Councilmen Fred Metzner and J. J. Tobin were going to "get French's goat" because of his alleged sympathy with strikers. Those who spread the rumor were the only ones who knew anything about it, or about French's sympathies and the council enjoyed a perfectly peaceful evening without mentioning that carpool officer's name. Recall petitions had been prepared by Mr. French's friends against councilmen who might vote to discharge the officer.

But the aldermen turned up on the program for future meetings when Mr. Templeton called upon the city recorder, through a motion seconded by Mr. Metzner, to prepare an itemized statement of all money paid to Livy Stipp while he was city recorder and city attorney, and a similar statement covering the official life of Chris. Schuebel as city attorney.

"Some months ago," Councilman Templeton said, "Livy Stipp said that the street committee had spent vast sums of money for temporary street improvements and that this money had been absolutely wasted. Strong words, gentlemen! With the statement I have asked for I will endeavor to show to the council and the public that the street committee did not waste its funds, and I believe I can show you just where the 'absolute waste' of municipal funds occurred.

In addition to transacting the routine business for the month the council, through a motion by Councilman Templeton, laid a bill for court costs of approximately $175

PENITENTIARY CONVICTS LEAD IN POLICE CHASE

Tuesday morning every officer in Oregon City with police powers was employed in the chase of six convicts who escaped from a state penitentiary wood camp on the previous night and who headed through Clackamas county in an automobile toward Portland. The machine broke down on the New Era hill about 6 o'clock in the morning and its occupants took to the woods. Two negroes and an Indian who were among those to escape are said to have occupied the car.

The abandoned car was brought to Oregon City and the search for the convicts continued. Agents from the penitentiary joined the local force later in the morning and after a futile search lasting through most of the day, expressed the belief that the men were in hiding in the woods near New Era. Bloodhounds from Salem were employed in the chase and tracked three of the men who were thought to have taken a different route in making their escape. No trace of the men has yet been found.

Sues Lumber Company Charging that the Tappendoff Lumber company, wrongfully withheld from his possession 60 acres of land in section 18, township 3 south, of range 1 west, P. C. Kuecht, in a complaint filed in Judge J. U. Campbell's court here Tuesday, seeks damages of $250 and possession of the land.

WOULD RECLAIM BIG BURNED-OVER TRACT

PLAN TO SEED WASTE LAND FOR LIVESTOCK PASTURE BY FARMERS

A project that may prove immensely valuable to Clackamas county has been proposed by R. J. Werner, county agricultural agent, who would reclaim by seeding to pasture 2500 acres of burned-over lands in government reserves. Plans for the reclamation were started when Mr. Werner made a personal survey of the forested areas of the county and listed the acreage possible to acquire. Because of government reforestation plans it is not possible to take over hundreds of other acres of burned-over lands, but the county agent says he may find some tracts to add to the 2500 acres already listed.

This land, along the Cascade mountain streams, is suitable for pasture if money, time and seed can be had to induce a growth of grass upon it. It would provide at the cost of the seed and the federal permit, pasture for large herds if livestock and would add greatly, it is pointed out, to increase the farm resources of the county.

Mr. Werner hopes to have the state's relation serve and the federal government finance the project and provide the seed. Mr. Werner has found the acreage and has learned from the government that it can be released on permit as it is not suitable for reforestation work.

The plan of the county agent is to seed the land to a good grass mixture for livestock.

Mr. Werner will visit some of the land early next week and will advise upon the proper grass mixture. Then will come the effort to have the seeding work financed properly for the sake of county livestock owners. Forest Ranger Wallace, with headquarters at Estacada, is said to be doing similar work, and is accomplishing much good.

FALL FROM AUTOMOBILE KILLS AGED CHINAMAN

A Chinaman whose name is given here as Hang Gow Louis, died Friday within half an hour after he fell from the running board of an automobile on the road in Lower Logan. The Celestial was one of a group of Chinese working in potato patches about Logan and he was being taken with some of his mates to the T. E. Anderson farm by the owner. Upon turning a bend in the road the man lost his grip and when he fell struck his head upon the road. He was rushed back to his bunkhouse and died within half an hour. The Chinaman was the only one of the group who could speak English, but Acting Coroner John N. Sievers learned that he had been in the United States since childhood, and was about 70 years old. The little money and personal effects were taken by his friends and one of the Chinamen is supposed to be a relative.

LOCAL "HELLO" GIRLS WILL NOT JOIN STRIKE

A score of men and girls, striking linemen and operators of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company, were in Oregon City Monday, putting their case before local operators. They went back to Portland chagrined and without winning a single local girl to their cause.

The strike of the linemen has affected the local office to a slight extent, but service is not interrupted in any way, in spite of the fact that all linemen joined in the strike. Manager P. J. Houlton of the local said Tuesday, when the Portland strikers had failed on their mission here, that the strike would not get a single sympathizer in the local operating force.

The girls have taken a rather scornful attitude concerning the men who, they say, are depending upon the strike of women operators to win their own demands from the company.

GUY ARTHUR POWERS IS SENT TO STATE HOSPITAL

Guy Arthur Powers, 45 years old and single, was committed to the state hospital Monday by County Judge Anderson after an examination by Dr. M. C. Strickland. Powers, whose home was at Concord station, is said to have developed a homicidal mania as a result of business troubles. A few days ago he had serious trouble with neighbors at Concord station, but it was thought to be merely a neighborhood quarrel until the man became dangerous. Monday he insisted upon giving his few belongings to inmates of the county jail, and upon making a contract with Sheriff Wilson for repairs to the jail, where he was confined to await attendants from Salem. He wrote lengthy instructions for the disposition of imaginary property.

GRUESOME TASKS IN ALASKAN WILD

ESKIMOS, POISONED, BURIED BY SOLDIER AND NEWS-PAPER MAN IN NORTH

STEAMER GROUND ON BAR

Brown's Boat Tied up for 12 Hours and the Mosquitos Come Down in Swarms

(M. J. Brown)

If you pick up this paper just before dinner, skip this article until later on and read the society and city news. Your meal will taste better. However, the "Incidents" are a part of what one gets in Alaska and you must have them, even if they are a bit gruesome.

Our three and a half days had already lengthened to four and a half and we were yet far from St. Michael. The passengers were fearful that we would not catch the ocean steamer to Nome, but the steamer officers cheered them with assurances: "Sure we will make it. The Umatilla will wait. We will get there in good time—IF."

The "if" was "if" we did not get hung up on the bar at the mouth of the river, where the Yukon empties into the North Sound.

After leaving Marshall the country changes. From high banks, mountains and a timber-covered country we came into level, treeless plains, the mud flats of the lower Yukon, and the great river began to grow smaller.

Every few miles large streams would branch off from the main river and find their way to the Bering Sea, and the wonder to me was if there would be water enough in any of them to let our flotilla out into the open sea.

It was night when we reached the bar. The tide had just gone out and the one speculation was "would we make it?"

We could see the buoys on either side of the narrow channel, four of them, about a quarter of a mile apart. If we could pass them, then we had the open sea, 65 miles to St. Michael.

The captain said the last trip down the wheel threw up a lot of mud, but they just made it, and he thought they would miss this time.

The Indians were on the front barge, with their sounding poles. They would call out the depth to a man on top of the barge and he would sing it out to the pilot. "Seven and a half," he called out at the first buoy, and that was dead safe, as the steamer and its family of barges were flat-bottomed and empty.

"Seven, six and a half, six, five and a half," he kept singing out, as we passed two more of the markers. "We won't make it," said a miner to the passengers who were crowded in the front of the boat, still and anxious.

There was one more buoy to pass and there was the rub. "Five, four and a half, four, tree and a half, three," called out the sounders, and the boat just moved. Then "two and a half," and the steamer stopped. The stern wheel kept churning away, throwing up mud, but the boat did not move. Then the engines were reversed and the boat tried to back. It would not respond.

"Stuck, wait for the tide," that was the verdict, and the wait would be 12 hours.

Then we went inside to tough it out.

And the mosquitoes went with us. When the boat stopped they swarmed down on us. Every door and window was tightly closed, yet they got in, thousands of them, and all over the saloon you could hear the constant "swat."

It was nearly midnight and a few of us were having a lunch when a soldier came down and joined us. He was the wireless operator at Kotlik, a little way down the river. There was no town there, absolutely nothing but the wireless station, and this young fellow lived alone there—absolutely alone.

St. Michael had wired him to locate our boat and find out if it had made the bar. Like all the rest in the "con" game, he assured the passengers there would be no doubt but what the Umatilla would wait until noon next day, and we would catch it all right.

The soldier was a fine young fellow, and he was simply dying to talk. He joined us at lunch and stated that it was boats getting stuck on the bar that kept him from forgetting the English language, and he later confessed to me that he greatly rejoiced when a boat stranded, for he could come aboard, eat somebody's else cooking, get some magazines and talk to his kind.

I was much interested in the young fellow and the life he lead and we had quite a long talk, when he said he must go back, and he urged
