SPENDING ROAD MONEY

The season for the spring song on good roads is not yet upon the social horizon, but it is time to note that the county court remains steadfast in its purpose to see a net work of hard surface over Clackamas county. From the county court many separate road districts have received such inspiration that they have been prompted to draw from their respective exchequers in the name of permanent road improvements.

To the progressive citizen there is a growing knowledge of the failings of old-fashioned road finishings. At the same time the belief that hard surface is the only solution of today's traffic problems is growing apace. And it is an astonishing fact that the improvement of a road marks a corresponding improvement in the lives of those who live upon it. It has been demonstrated repeatedly that the existence of a good road is an inspiration for a farmer to tone up his own property, perhaps to paint his house and tear down a ramshackle shed.

Good roads bring good schools nearer the farm—therefore, we are bringing up a brighter, more keen minded generation of young people. Their entertainment and their education is brought to them and the long muddy walks to the old school house are as much things of another age as are poor roads. It is a fact that good roads are responsible for most of the improvement in farm conditions and in the results of rural life, not to mention the fact that good roads raise property values in every case, and not to mention the fact that good roads pay for themselves times over by decreasing hauling expense and by bringing markets to the farmer, practically.

It is time, now that we have been shown in an absolute way the benefits derived from good roads, to shut down on expenditures for any other kind of roads. The Clackamas county court is doing the people of this county and state a genuine service when it insists upon heeding the voice of the majority and spends its money for hard surfaced road improvements. Let us have no argument on that score!

CRIME AND ITS COST

We rise to a point of information. Paradise Corners, within the borders of our own county, is constantly in public attention through the misdeeds of some few evil beings, among the many good people, who grace that community with their presence. "Hell" has become a mere echo from ancient history, in view of the greater hordes created upon earth by the Prussian evil and the Prussian devil. Paradise Corners is getting more attention in Clackamas county than hades is. Wouldn't it be for the good of both if we switched names on them?

But what a hell on earth it must be to live with the conscience of Cadiz Pratt, erstwhile farmer of Paradise Corners! It must have inspired Pratt to the very depths of his heart to hear the details of an assault upon his mate repeated to the world in Judge Campbell's court last week. It must really have tingled the manhood in the fellow's soul when he heard Judge Campbell say:

"Of all the animals I know about, man is the only one that will assault his mate, the female." And Pratt must get many pleasant hours of sleep in the penitentiary after lulling himself to rest with memories of his fiendish attack.

Crime doesn't pay, never did pay, and never can pay, so long as justice is written into the laws of mankind. Just when man gets to the summit of his criminal ambition the law steps in and saps him with its judgment. The penitentiary is a handy thing to have about when men appear before our courts for slaying a woman with an iron rod.

executed with a stout rope and a sturdy oak limb was often times effective.

PROPER TREATMENT

In Butte last week 41,000 eggs were dumped into the city incinerator and burned. They were the property of a warehouse firm, so the news dispatches stated, "and had evidently been allowed to spoil in storage."

The same news dispatch stated eggs have been selling at from 60 to 90 cents per dozen in the city. With eggs retailing at the robber prices of 5 and 7 1/2 cents each, it was a crime to have allowed this wholesale quantity of eggs to spoil. In the face of the meat shortage it was treason.

But the prices would never have reached this high mark if the 41,000 had been put on the market in Butte.

There are two drastic measures needed in this country right now. Convicted spies should be hanged and food destroyers and hoarders should be given long prison terms.

One execution of an enemy spy would do more to make this country safe than the army of secret service men will do in the whole duration of the war.

One long federal prison sentence to one food-destroying commission firm will put more fear in the hearts of every commission house in America than all the government detectives can inspire in a life time—Benton County Courier.

Yea, verily! Let us be thankful.

There is little use crying over spilled milk, but darned if we don't just as much dislike to hear the cry before the spilling occurs.

State Treasurer Kay hasn't decided certainly to be a candidate for governor. It is rather unpleasant to be classed as an "also ran."

We have known of more than one "honest Christian gentleman" who read his home-town newspaper for three years and then refused to pay his subscription. The woods are full of 'em.

On behalf of the hundreds of thousands of American soldiers who will enjoy its benefits, The Courier takes the liberty of thanking every citizen who contributed to the Y. M. C. A. war work fund.

The last chance for men of draft age to volunteer. Such enlistments will not be accepted after December 15. Upon the number of volunteers in the meantime will depend the size of Oregon's next draft quota.

The old hitching rack serves few others than the mail carriers and their trusty "steeds," nowadays. Farmers in Clackamas county are well informed on parking regulations for automobiles, however.

A friend of mine says that every man who takes office in Washington either grows or swells, and when I appoint a man to office, I watch him carefully to see whether he is swelling or growing.—President Wilson.

A man has just paid the Southern Pacific company $2.40 as railroad fare for a little son he hid under a car seat six years ago, thus securing free passage. A bible lesson, "owe no man anything," turned the trick on human conscience.

The Courier will gladly add its mite to the statewide plea that asks Dr. W. J. Kerr, president of the Agricultural college, to remain in Oregon. The doctor's flattering offer from the Kansas Agricultural college may find this state unmindful of impending loss and the setback we would suffer would be vastly more expensive than a duplication of the financial advantage of the Kansas offer.

"Next time you hear some fellow ranting about the huge profits the farmer is coining, remind him that there are several hundred acres of idle land in this state and some of it would be tickled to death to yield its treasures to him."—News Reporter.

The same chap will sing another song when he comes to pay his taxes, buy a new farm implement or a side of 45-cent bacon from the pork he sold for 20 cents.

Although we dislike to offer even a suggestion to such a learned community as Eugene, we wonder if that seat of knowledge thinks it is proving its own patriotism by hounding Allen Eaton for the mistake he made. Mr. Eaton has heretofore been a good citizen. His foot slipped and now Eugene wants to push him bodily into a premature grave. Give the man a chance to redeem himself, just for the sake of his future, else Eugene's barbarity is a greater crime than Allen Eaton's one unpatriotic step. This thing of writing a fellow-citizen's blunders upon imperishable walls is not a civilized custom.

KAISER REPLIES TO OLD

NICK'S OFFER TO QUIT

In reply to Lucifer H. Satan's letter published in The Courier of November 8, in which the devil offered to quit his throne in hell in favor of Kaiser "Bill," the following letter has been submitted, coming from Kaiser Wilhelm:

Hell, Nov. 1, 1917.

Imp. Lucifer Hotspur Satan:
My Dear Lucifer—or shall I call you Lucy for short? Your note of recent date came to our imperial hand. Your offer to abdicate the throne of Hades in my favor would be interesting were it wholly serious; but conditions are implied that make it inadvisable that I accept. I do not think much of Gehenna anyhow. It is a second-class state at best and I would not care to live there permanently.

As a matter of fact I have made a splendid start toward a hell of my own—we call it Bottomless Prussia. It has all the modern improvements, such as running hot water, red fire, cyanide gas, calcium lights, wide open plumbing and vacuum cleaner. At the present time we are getting practically all the business and when it comes to a matter of competition is in my opinion that we would have you pushed off the map. To be perfectly frank with you we have considered the advisability of taking over your plant about the time it is ripe for bankruptcy. You are not making expenses, while we are turning them away. Everybody says that I am a much bigger devil than you ever dared to be and there's not a day goes by without my picture being in the papers.

You may have once thought you were a hell of a fellow, but you have nothing on me. Your place is a back number, and when the time comes we will move in and take possession—if we think it worth while. It is not usual for Prussians to give warning or apology. We usually do things and then leave it to history to explain, but I am telling you this because of our old-time friendship, and also because I realize that you can do nothing to forestall or prevent our actions. Abdicating in my favor? Why you poor old stiff, you have nothing to abdicate. You couldn't float a bond issue on your plant in a million years. In the commercial market it would be called junk. You have a bunch of ancient floorwalkers like Judas, Nero, Ananias, Caligula, Richard III and Capt. Kidd that are really driving business away from the place. Talk about the Huns! Why, I wouldn't let Attila bring my shaving water.

If you had a few scoundrels like Von Tirpitz or Von Hindenburg you might talk on some basis of equality. They are the boys who bring home the bacon and they are filling our hell with talent of their own creation and development. But while they are finished performers, of course, I am still the boss of the whole works. It is my genius and inspiration that has made our new hell possible. Hell without me would be merely a word. I have made it a terrific reality. You may as well understand first as last that you cannot run a hell without some of our Prussian efficiency. In a competitive race with us you would probably bring up as a second rate, cold-storage plant.

By reason of our former friendship, however, I am willing to recognize your moth-eaten throne as one with which diplomatic relations may be maintained. I am sending Count von Bernstorff as my ambassador, with authority to make treaties compatible with our mutual interests. Under certain circumstances it might be possible to negotiate a union between our crown prince and your Messalina. They might make a good team. He may also take on Lucretia Borgia and make it a double-header. How would it do for me to hook up with one of your Catherine's—this Medici person, for instance? Of course, this would only be for the campaign and subject to cancellation at my will. Count von Bernstorff is permitted to talk of these, as well as other matters, and has himself hinted to me the advisability of an exchange of transfers. This, however, would be with the idea of the gradual absorption of your hell by my own. I am to be perfectly frank with you. You must realize, my dear Lucifer, that you are getting old. You are not up to our modern methods and when you wander around with your spiked tail, people only smile in a good natured way and murmur: "Who the devil is he?" or "I wonder what mischief Satan is up to now?"

You are all right for running a kindergarten, but as the boss of a real blood-red, rip-snorting, concert pitch hell, you are mostly rabbit. You are altogether too easy. Why, I understand you even shy at cooking children in their own grease. You ought to have seen the way I cleaned them up in Belgium. Women first? Well I guess yes. Any old way. We turned it into a patch of Bottomless Prussia overnight. That ancient party who ran wicks through Christians and used them to light up his grounds, was a poor fish at thinking up things. We could show him a few things that would make him green with envy. He never poisoned a whole regiment with gas bombs and he never sank and blew up a shipload of women and children with a torpedo from a submarine.

You mean well, Lucifer, but you are a slow performer. Take a week off and come over to a real hell. We will show you the time of your life and you can see what you are up against. You can discover why your proposition to abdicate in my favor doesn't materially interest me. However, I am a real sport and I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll play you a game of pitch to see whether you abdicate or I throw you out. In either event you are welcome to a permanent home with me and I'll show you a hell of a time. There's no use in old friends quarreling; is there, Lucy?

Fraternally yours,
WILHELM IMP.
His Mark.

HE PAID HIS SUB

The Courier has $35 of the money that S. A. Douglas of Molalla has earned from tilling the favored soil of Clackamas county in the past 35 years. In spite of all which, or as a result of it, Mr. Douglas has slipped his 36th dollar over The Courier counter last week to insure a continuance of all the good things the paper has brought and is bringing into his household. More than any other tribute The Courier receives, it appreciates the faith its large number of lifelong readers has in it. There are still on our lists a number of persons who subscribed for The Courier before the first edition was off the press and have helped us every year since then to make this a more readable, a more serviceable paper.

In the 35 years that Mr. Douglas has been a Courier reader he has not only paid $35 into the treasury, but he has had 1084 issues of the paper and his $35 helped to pay for a minimum of 300,000 working hours of time spent in producing the paper. Just for the sake of figuring, if Mr. Douglas had saved his papers and cut them into column length strips he could have made a paper chain reaching from Portland to Canby. When one goes into figures The Courier, in 35 years, appears to have done things on a great big scale, and it is highly pleasing to know that such good citizens as Mr. Douglas have had such an important part in the paper's history.

O. & C. LANDS NOT TO BE OPENED BEFORE SPRING

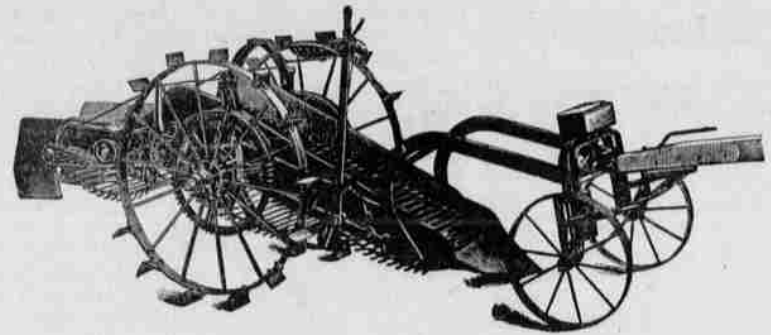

According to a letter received by Congressman Hawley from Clay Tallman, commissioner of the general land office, the Oregon & California grant lands will not be opened to settlement until in the spring. Unavoidable delays in the final payment of taxes make it impossible now to give sufficient notice of the opening of the lands this fall, he declares.

"It seems to me that this would be a very unpropitious time to bring about the opening of the lands under the homestead laws, which require the applicant to testify that he has examined the lands and speaks concerning them of his own knowledge," says Commissioner Tallman's letter, in part. My thought has been that such procedure would be unfair and detrimental to the best success of the opening.

Congressman Hawley had hoped that some of the lands would be opened this fall, and had written the commissioner to this effect. Congressman Hawley had departed for Washington when the letter came, and it will be forwarded to him.

JOHN OVALL RETURNS

Outlook Colony Receives M. E. Pastor With Public Reception

The Rev. John Ovall, who for several years has traveled in Clackamas county organizing and building churches among the Swedish people, has received a most hearty welcome from the several churches upon his return to the charge.

In Oregon City the Americans and Scandinavians together gave him a very hearty reception, and later the Swedish people alone gave another reception. Another was given at Salem. At all these speeches of welcome were made and liberal gifts of money were presented. At Outlook colony, the people did not want to be behind the other charges and gave him a surprise reception at the church, which was attractively arranged for the occasion. Speeches of welcome were made and a golden cross was presented, together with a purse of money. After the reception refreshments were served. This is a new church which was built and dedicated last year free of debt.
