There are only two exceptions to this new rule. Here is the regulation in regard to the first exception:

"Upon presentation to a recruiting officer of a certificate by his local board to the effect that his class and order number are so low that he is not within the current quota of his local board, any registrant may enlist voluntarily in the navy or in the marine corps."

But no provision is made for voluntary enlistment of men of draft age in the army.

The other exception has to do with medical students, hospital internists, dentists, dental students, veterinarians or veterinary students, who will be permitted under regulations to be drawn up by the surgeon general of the army, to enlist in the enlisted reserve corps of the medical department.

The new rule does not effect voluntary enlistments by men not of draft age.

ANOTHER OREGON CITY CASE

Progress is possible on the farm just as it is in the biggest city in America. Progressive farmers in Clackamas county are the ones who will appreciate The Courier's clubbing offer with the Oregon Farmer.

It does seem powerfully odd to us that, in these days of modern architecture, acoustic science and skillful workmanship such a monument to ignorance as is the Portland auditorium should be built in a big city. A beautiful building it is, to be sure, but its interior echoes like the hollow caverns of cave-man days.

DRAFT QUESTIONNAIRE OUT

Government Asks Men of Conscript Age Many Questions to Ascertain Fitness

Samples of the famous "questionnaire," through which the government proposes to search into the private life of every registered man to determine his fitness for service in the national army, have been sent to Sheriff W. J. Wilson. Individual registrants for the selective army will probably receive copies of the great many questions about December 15 and it is expected to take at least 60 days for the exemption boards to classify registrants when the "questionnaire" is returned.

The "questionnaire," preparatory to the second draft is 16 pages of small-typed printed matter in length and contains every conceivable question that will bring out information concerning the fitness and qualifications of the registered men. The questions begin with the date of the registrant's birth and continue up to the date of the signing of the "questionnaire." The registrant must give a complete and accurate account of his actions during that entire period.

The "questionnaire" includes 87 different occupations under which the registered men of America are supposed to be employed and leaves a blank space for explaining any occupation that may not be included in this list. All registered men for selective service will be placed under one of five classifications. Those under class 1 will be the first called into service. In a general way, this class includes single men without dependent relatives, unskilled farm and industrial laborers, and married men who fail to support their wives and children or are dependent upon their wives for support.

Class 2 includes the men whose families are not mainly dependent upon their labor for support, married men without children whose wives are physically able and competent to support themselves, and both skilled farm and industrial laborers.

Class 3 includes the men who are or infirm parents, with dependent brothers or sisters, those with dependent children not their own, or county or municipal officers.

Class 4 includes the men with children chiefly dependent on their father for support, also employees of the federal government.

Class 5 includes all who will be permanently exempted from army service, federal and state officials, ministers or students of divinity, alien enemies, persons in the naval or military service and persons morally, mentally or physically unfit.

Classifying of all registrants in one of the five divisions is really temporary exemption to those not included in the first classification. That is, according to the instructions in the "questionnaire," a man who is placed in the fourth class is automatically given a temporary exemption until all men in the first three classes have been exhausted.

"Have you a wife, or child, or a infirm or invalid parents or grandparents, or brother under 16, or sister under 18 years of age, or a helpless brother or sister of any age, mainly dependent upon your physical or mental labor for support," is the first question asked under the dependency series.

If married, the registrant must then state the place, date and person by whom the ceremony was performed.

"Give the name, relationship, address and age of each person mainly dependent on your labor for support," is the next question.

Then follow in order these questions:

"Which of such dependents live with you, and how long has each lived with you?"

"If any persons named in your answer do not live with you, state which of them have lived with you at any time during the past 12 months and for how long a period."

"If such dependent is a stepchild, an adopted child, or a foster child, state as to each when such relationship to you began."

"As to each dependent, state when you began to contribute to his or her support."

"State both the approximate total and the average monthly amount of your support of your wife and children during the last 12 months."

"How much have you contributed to the support of each other dependent during said 12 months?"

"As to each dependent, state whether such person is wholly dependent on your labor for support."

"What was your total income from all sources during the last 12 months, whether in cash or in other things of value?"

"How much of this was the fruit of your labor, mental or physical?"

"Give a full statement of all property owned by or held in trust for you, whether income-producing or not; and net income from same during past 12 months."

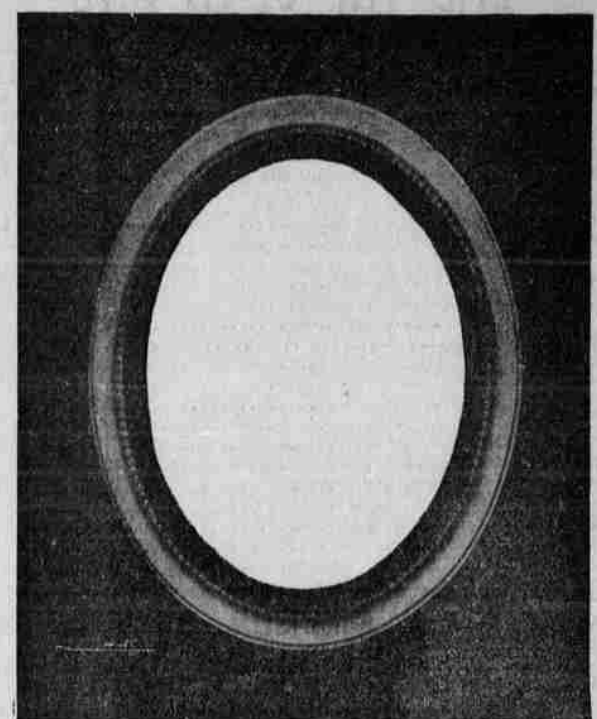

"Do you own the house you live in?"

"Does any of your family or dependents own it?"

"Does any of your dependents own the house he or she lives in?"

"Do you rent your house? If so, state the monthly rent and name and address of landlord."

The registrant must then show what taxes he has paid during the past year, either personal or property, and must give the amount so paid. He must also state if there is any incumbrance on any property he holds, together with the amount of such. He must also state the amount of earnings of each of his dependents during the past 12 months. If others have contributed to the support of the family, the registrant must give their names and the amount so contributed.

The registrant must then state whether or not his wife has ever been employed, and the nature of her training or calling. He must also give the state of her health. He must also answer whether or not he or his wife live with the wife's parents.

All persons so named by registrants as being dependents must sign supporting affidavits before some duly credited official.

The questionnaire, after being properly filled out, is kept as a permanent reference by the exemption board. On the final page the board states in which of the five divisions the registrant is placed.

There is also a place in which the registrant can appeal, first to the district board and then to the president, from the ruling of the local board which places him in a classification which he believes to be improper. Space is also given to show what disposition is made of each of these appeals.

Although it would appear that the registrant is compelled to answer more than a hundred useless questions concerning classifications in which he has no interest, such is not the case, as he is given specific instructions not to answer following questions if his answer to the first questions under each of the 12 e-
