MONEYED FOOLS

To live on five dollars a week for an extended time is an economic absurdity. Yet this is only one of the many things that rich men can do to show the poor devil, who has only that much money each week, that the task is easy and presents no cause for complaint. These men are moneyed fools.

The under-dog has never been known to suffer want or torture in any form that some beautifully-garbed and well-fed plutocrat does not come to the front, after submitting himself to the same conditions for a day or so, to say that the under dog doesn't know whereof he speaks. Let that same rich man who succeeded in living for a week or two on five dollars a week lose all and be forced to live on the scanty financial supply that millions of men are forced to put up with. There isn't one man in ten thousand who could stand it. Still they come before us with the statement that the man who has to do it doesn't know anything about it.

Prison reformers, so-called, enter the prisons of the land and return to freedom, after spending a week as a guest of the warden, to say that conditions are perfect, that the men have no right to complain. The New York Globe has hit the mark in connection with the findings of the millionaire who lived on five dollars for a week. The Globe says:

Few things are more exasperating to the man who has to keep body and soul together—and clean—on $6 or $7 a week, than to have some rich men tell him that it is easy to do it on $5 a week. In opposing a minimum wage law the other day an aged millionaire declared he had made the experiment most satisfactorily, and that there was no reason why other people should not do it as a regular practice. He did not, strange to say, pretend that he proposes to end his days in the delights purchasable for $5 a week.

Who ever doubted that a strong, well nourished man could, as an experiment or for a wager, live on such a sum for a limited time? Who ever doubted that many thousands of people do it out of sheer necessity for an unlimited period? But does any person that knows life doubt that they are miserable while doing it?

It does not seem to have occurred to this empiric old millionaire that a man who has most of his life behind him, and a pretty comfortable life at that, is a poor criterion for the tastes of a young, ambitious, and life-hungry person. It does not seem to have occurred to him that a man who has tasted freely of pleasures can be deprived of them for a short space with an equanimity that would hardly appeal to a young and properly eager man or woman who has tasted of them meagerly, if at all.

It is strange to hear such reactionary stupidity today. It is strange to observe a man who has gone through life with such a complete lack of understanding of his fellow-men, such a complete lack of sympathy with their tastes, desires, and aspirations. Fortunately his views are so obsolete in their extremity that to most living people they are ridiculous. Were it not for the dollars he owns he would have no opportunity of expressing them.

A BUSINESS PRESIDENT

President Wilson probably will be best known in history as the author of the higher moral law of nations. His name will be written large in the record of the progress of industrial justice. It was as the friend of those on the lower rungs of the ladder that he came to the White house.

Yet, in giving justice to labor, in bringing about a more equitable distribution of taxation, relieving of their burden those least able to bear it, and widening the field of opportunity for the younger men, he has been successful in bringing to the United States its greatest era of prosperity.

There are 250,000 corporations in the country, in addition to the banking and railroad corporations. None of these corporations has been harassed or hampered in its successful progress. On the contrary, through the federal trade commission, new facilities and new business improvements have been placed at their disposal.

The business men of the country, for many years, have been demanding a tariff commission that would be non-partisan, and whose make-up and character would commend itself to the confidence of the business world.

The United States Chamber of Commerce, representing all the chambers of commerce and trade bodies in the United States, has formally approved of the administration's tariff commission bill, introduced by Representative Rainey, of Illinois.

Recently the report of the Comptroller of the Currency showed that the reserves in the national banks of the country were greater than the reserves in the Bank of England, the Reichsbank of Germany, the Bank of France, the Bank of Russia, the Bank of the Netherlands, the Swiss National bank and the Bank of Japan—greater than all of the reserves of those foreign banks together. These reserves are the wealth of the American people, accumulated in large measure since the advent of the Wilson administration.

The accumulation of gold in the United States has reached the value of $2,000,000,000, a greater amount than ever held previously by any two nations together.

America has reached its highest point of prosperity and efficiency under President Wilson. Industrial justice has been advanced, without hurt or hindrance to business prosperity. Wages have reached the highest point in the history of the world.

Four years more of President Wilson's leadership will mean four years more of steady progress and prosperity.

A COUNTRY CREED

The following is the pretty creed of a country girl, written by Jessie Field. "The Corn Lady." Country girls generally could improve themselves and things about them through the adoption of such ideals:

I am glad I live in the country. I love its beauty and its spirit. I rejoice in the things I can do as a country girl for my home and my neighborhood.

I believe I can share in the beauty around me in the fragrance of the orchards in spring, in the bending wheat at harvest time, in the morning song of birds, and in the glow of the sunset on the far horizon. I want to express this beauty in my own life as naturally and happily as the wild rose blooms by the roadside.

I believe I can have a part in the courageous spirit of the country. This spirit has entered into the brook in our pasture. The stones placed in its way call forth its strength and add to its strength a song. It dwells in the tender plants as they burst the seed-cases that imprison them and push through the dark earth to the light. It sounds in the nesting notes of the meadowlark. With this courageous spirit I, too, can face the hard things of life with gladness.

I believe there is much I can do in my country home. Through studying the best way to do my everyday work I can find joy in common tasks done well. Through loving comradeship I can help bring into my home the happiness and peace that are always so near us in God's out-of-doors world. Through such a home I can help make real life to all who pass that way their highest ideal country life.

I believe my love and loyalty for my country home should reach out in service to that larger home that we call our neighborhood. I would join with the people who live there in true friendliness. I would wholeheartedly give my best to further all that is being done for a better community. I would have all that I think and say and do help to unite country people near and far in the great Kingdom of Love for Neighbors which the Master came to establish—the Master who knew and cared for country ways and country folks.

STREET SPRINKLING

Someone in the street cleaning department of the municipal government has a foolish notion. In place of watering the streets of the city, with the sprinklers that have been provided, during the daytime, preferably in the morning, the department applies water after night, when it cannot possibly be of benefit to anyone.

Regardless of the heat of any day or the amount of dust that is blowing through the streets the watering operation is delayed usually until after dark and at all times until the stores are closed and the streets practically deserted.

Some of the city fathers would do well to bring the matter before the city council to see if the maximum benefit could not be obtained from the water applied to the streets. It is a fact that frequently just after sprinkling the streets the flushing hose is brought into use and thereby two applications of water put on where only the last is necessary.

The streets should be sprinkled and the dust settled during the morning when the stores are open and when the streets are dusty. The result of this would be, of course, less dust on the stocks in the stores of the city whose owners are paying well for the water used after night and greater comfort to all concerned. The flushing of the streets is ample moisture for the dark hours of the night and all the sprinkling that can be done after night is of no benefit to anyone.

Water applied during the daytime of the United States pay the children for such numbers of dead flies as they present. The purpose is good, namely the sanitation of the city and the health of the public, but the method is an objectionable specimen of zeal outrunning discretion.

The living fly carries germs of disease and may thus become a means of death. The fly dead contains the same germs. The preserving of the decaying carrier by the children exposes them to the same risk of disease and death. Decomposition actually increases the danger from the fly.

Accumulation of dead flies would be a dangerous practice even for those who take precautions against infection. But children are careless. They handle dead flies and then without washing their hands are likely to handle their food. This introduces the germs into their bodies and is almost certain to make them sick.

A dead fly is even filthier than the fly alive. The only safe and sensible way of dealing with his diseased corpse is to burn it immediately. Mothers who regard their children's health should not let them have anything to do with flycatching campaigns.

Obituaries

Mrs. Marie Yock

Mrs. Marie Yock, aged 89 years, of Upper Garfield, passed away on Saturday from the infirmities of advancing age. Mrs. Yock leaves many friends in the Upper Garfield neighborhood, although she has been a resident there only a short time. Funeral services were held on Monday daughters, Mrs. Fred Kinney, Mrs. James McGuire, Mrs. Elza Hadley and Miss Amy Hager of Newberg and Mrs. John McCracken of Portland, her only sister. Mrs. Hager was prominent in fraternal circles and was a member of the Woman's Relief Corps of the G. A. R.

As between Roosevelt and Ford, the sensible republican voter will choose Wilson.

News item from St. Louis convention: At this juncture General Prosperity seconded Woodrow Wilson's renomination with a rousing speech.

The republican idea of a presidential primary appears to be thereby to obtain a list of candidates whom the "Old Guard" is to blackball.

There are 12,000,000 farmers in the United States. Their farms are mortgaged for about $2,000,000,000. They are paying an average interest rate of 8½ per cent, or $255,000,000 a year for the use of this tremendous sum of capital. The pending rural credits bill, now sure of passage, makes 6 per cent the maximum interest rate, saving to the farmers $75,000,000 a year.

American leadership in world finance and commerce, an American merchant marine, an American system of rural credits, an American wage standard 20 per cent above the highest republican level, and American peace and prosperity which makes this republic the envy of nations—is democracy's practical program of Americanism as against the G. O. P. talk unsupported by deeds.

would be not only the proper thing, but it would cool the atmosphere at least temporarily, settle the dust when the dust should be settled and keep the dust from show windows, displays and stocks inside the stores.

Sprinkling at night is an absolute waste of water. It is a double waste on those nights when the flushing hose follows closely after the sprinkling carts. The practice should be corrected immediately and the sprinkling done at the proper time. There is seldom too much traffic in the morning or even in the early afternoon to hinder the progress of the sprinkling carts over the streets and the little inconvenience that the traffic will present will be more than offset by the benefit from the daylight dust settling.

FIGHTING FLIES

The annual campaign against the fly pest has been started in Clackamas county by Dr. Orel A. Welsh, county health officer. In taking up the work early in the summer season Dr. Welsh has started a commendable precedent, for it is at this season of the year that the only real effective work against the pest can be done. The fly is deadly poison and no matter how the community is rid of it, it remains a fact that the sooner the task is accomplished the greater will be the health and cleanliness of the community.

Ben Eby

Ben Eby died at his home at Goshen in Lane county on Monday after suffering for several years. Death was hastened by an attack of inflammatory rheumatism which affected the heart. Mr. Eby was a brother of O. D. Eby, Oregon City attorney, who was at the bedside of his father, who is ill at Cottage Grove. Mr. Eby was forty years of age and leaves, in addition to his brother and father, a widow.

Mrs. Harriet P. Hager

Mrs. Harriet P. Hager, an early-day school teacher in Oregon City, died on Wednesday evening of last week at the family home at Newberg, after an illness that had troubled her for several months. Mrs. Hager was 78 years old at the time of her death.

In addition to Mrs. Pratt and Miss Barclay those who survive are four tus of Harvard University, answers those senators who fear the radicalism of Louis D. Brandeis with the statement that the rejection of Brandeis "would be a grave misfortune for the whole profession, the courts, all American business and the country." The chief obstacle to the confirmation of Brandeis was his known ability and value to the country.

Lloyd's report for May finds 1,500,000 of vessel tonnage now under construction in American shipyards. This is greater even than British shipyards show, and is six times the total tonnage building in American yards under republican administration in 1912. All that was necessary was to cut the apron strings of the old high tariff school, and let the American shipbuilding industry take its natural free stride to a position of independence.

Strange things happen in politics, but we submit there never was such a spectacle as at present when the two candidates most seriously considered in connection with the republican presidential nomination are, respectively, a man who is charged with having wrecked the party four years ago and who even now does not admit that he is a republican, and a man who has never expressed an opinion upon the most vital questions now before the country.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

for 1916 is estimated at $228,000,000,000. This is not only $40,000,000,000 greater than the republican maximum reached in 1912, but it exceeds the combined wealth of Great Britain, Germany and France. The "New Freedom" of democratic law and administration therefore expresses itself not only in fair play and better conditions to the average man, but in the greater productive power of the nation as a whole.

New Idea at U. of O.

A new facility to improve training of teachers for Oregon high school staffs will be established at the state university in September. The state universities of California, Missouri and Wisconsin, and the University of Chicago and Columbia University, New York, are among those who already have it.

The facility is a university high school. The one in Eugene will begin with the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, and the higher grades will be added as needed until six years of work are included. No tuition fees will be charged, and pupils from any part of Eugene will be eligible. The school of education will direct the work. Pedagogical experts will carry the bulk of the actual teaching so that student teachers may observe the methods; the latter will get opportunity to put the principles into practice. The plan is expected greatly to add to the qualifications of the many students which the university sends yearly into high school work.

Parade in Morning

The big military, fraternal and civic parade of the Rose Festival, probably the most important pageant of the series, is to be held on Friday morning, June 9, at 10:30 o'clock. This is contrary to the usual custom and is not known to many of those who had planned to attend from Clackamas county. The Oregon City Fallarians will march in this event with other clubs from Portland and the upper valley cities.

This year the Rose Festival management has omitted the electric parade which has been a famous feature of the celebration. In its place the Ualtee, an interesting carnival feature, has been arranged. The Ualtee is planned after such world-famous events as the New Orleans Mardi Gras and the Mummers' parade of Philadelphia.

Bleything Wants Divorce

Wallace M. Bleything, according to the divorce complaint, he filed last week against his wife, Maude E. Bleything, has had to submit to many humiliations and much cruelty since he was married at Lents on November 30, 1912. The complaint charges plaintiff with insane jealousy and great cruelty and alleges that Mrs. Bleything threatened at different times to take her husband's life with poison and with a knife. The couple lives at Milwaukee and there is a minor daughter, aged 2½ years, whose custody the father seeks. Lida M. O'Bryan, a woman attorney, appears for Mr. Bleything.

Band to Give Concerts

Open-air concerts will be given during the summer months by Beache's Boy's band of this city at the library park and on Main street. New uniforms are wanted by the boys, who have been faithful performers in community events here lately and subscriptions for the purchase of uniforms are being taken.
