ROOSEVELT SPECIMENS

Being Mounted for Display in the Smithsonian Institute.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—All possible speed is being used by the Smithsonian Institution in preparing the specimens obtained by the Roosevelt-African expedition. This is the reply made by officials of the institution to the declaration made several days ago by Colonel Roosevelt that he wished Congress would appropriate sufficient money to enable the institution to prepare the collection for immediate exhibition.

It may require two or three years to complete the work, it is said, by officials of the institution. The work, however, they declare, is being carried on more rapidly and with better results than ever has been the case with any collection approaching this one in magnitude. Nothing is being left undone, it is said, to give the Roosevelt series of East African animals its proper place among the treasures already in the National Museum.

As an illustration of the innumerable details of the work which have made progress appear slow, it was pointed out that one phase of the work, nathely, the classification of the species and the exact determination of their sexual, individual and geographic variations, means months of study on the part of Dr. Edmund Heller, who before it is finished will have to visit other museums in the United States and in Europe to make numerous comparisons.

Only those specimens will be mounted which are not now adequately represented or which are needed to supplement the various series now shown.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 10.—(Spl.)—In a speech here today the President, in an innuendo, intimated that he hoped that Congress would attempt nothing but the enactment of reciprocity legislation at the special session. Among other things he said that the three sessions of this Congress had enacted more real legislation than any other Congress since the war.

THAT GOLD MINE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"Abner Day, you are an old fool! You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

Abner Day, farmer, had heard these words hundreds of times in the fifteen years since he had married the Widow Winters, and his reply had always been the same:

"Waal, some folks are born that way and can't help it."

On a portion of Abner's farm was a range of hills. It was a limestone ridge, but there was a legend that gold had been found there years before—a nugget of gold as big as a teacup. That legend never died. When other news was scarce it was brought to the front, and it was generally believed in. Abner's grandfather had meant to open the hills some day in search of other nuggets. So had his father. So had he. The trouble was to find time. There were plowing and dragging and planting and hoeing and reaping, and he never got a day to himself.

The widow began to poke at him as soon as married, but it did no good. She would go on to tell how many tons of gold were probably hidden away in those hills and how, if dug out, they could have the clock cleaned, a new door to the shed and the cellar stairs repaired.

"I'll get around to it some day, Sarah," he would reply.

"But why not tomorrow?"

"Mebbe I can."

But he didn't. His farm work interfered. As he finished his morning meal the wife would say:

"Now, Abner, that gold mine today. You can dig half a ton of it as well as not, and we need new flatirons and a washboard."

"Yes, I know."

As the day passed and he sat down to supper she would ask:

"Dig any gold today, Abner?"

"Nope. I had other things to see to."

Of course the gold mine legend was gossip for many miles around. Once a month at least some one came along and wanted to dig on shares. They would see the wife first and she would readily agree. All she wanted was that a lawyer should draw up the agreement so that it would hold water. She had been cheated by a lightning rod man once and she didn't propose to be anybody's victim again. She kept a corner of the cellar cleaned out to store the gold in, but it was never used. The stranger would go down into the field and talk with Abner and after he had winded himself he would hear the farmer say:

"These taters has got to be hoed, and you come around some other time."

"But don't you want to be a rich man?"

"It would be kinder nice."

"You could go to Europe."

"Yaas."

"You could build a fine house and have your carriage and servants."

"I see."

"Perhaps you'd be elected governor."

"Shoo."

"And I'll have a lawyer draw up the contract and bring it here tomorrow to be signed. Digging will begin at once. Within a week"—

"Yes, I know, but these taters"—

It was always so, and when Abner scuffed up to the house at sundown it was to find his wife in the sulks or in tears, and she generally ended up with:

"And if you don't go to digging the first thing in the morning I will."

Think of it—fifteen years of poking and not a hole made in the hillside! The ex-widow must have been a patient, determined woman to stand it. But stand it she did. She would conquer or die. One day, after her many disappointments, she fell ill. The doctor pronounced it typhoid fever, and she became a very sick woman. At times when she was out of her head she would babble about that gold mine. At length, to prevent further worry, the M. D. advised Abner to go to digging and ease the mind of the patient.

"But I've got to plow out corn tomorrow," was protested.

"Never mind your corn. You get a couple of men and open those hills or you'll soon be a widower."

"Do you think it'll be safe to have several tons of gold around?"

"Quite so. When I call again I want to see you at work."

In a lucid interval the patient was told that digging was to begin. She was very ill, but she braced up enough to say:

"Tell Abner that if he finds any old plow points or wagon tires mixed up with the gold to throw 'em one side. He's an awfully careless man."

Abner and his hired man dug and dug and dug. They dug here and they dug there, and people came for ten miles around to see them throw out shovels of gold. But there was no gold. There was neither gold nor silver nor copper nor iron. There was limestone, but nothing else—nothing but a petrified hickory ax handle. When this was found the patient had passed the crisis of her fever and was mending. Abner was permitted to go to her bedside and exhibit his find.

"What is it?" she asked.

"A petrified ax handle."

"Didn't you find the petrified ax blade to go with it?"

"Nope."

"But why not?"

"Didn't dig long enough, I guess."

"Abner Day, you are an old fool! You don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

STUMP-BURNING IS CHEAPER.

Pre-Heated Air Process on Washington Campus is Success.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 10.—By experiments made by the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, it was learned that the pre-heated air process of buring stumps is an economical success in clearing logged-off land.

The new process is the discovery of Clarke Smith, of Mount Vernon. It requires the use of a combustion chamber within the heart of the stump and the creation of suction draught by pre-heating air necessary for combustion.

A trench is first dug from a point four feet away to the base of the stump about 12 inches below the surface of the ground. A charcoal fire is started and a large cast-iron pipe is placed within the trench. This pipe is connected to a 12-foot stack. A three-inch pipe is then placed within the short length and the air is drawn through the smaller pipe to the point of combustion. This becomes red hot and the air is heated before it reaches the burning portions of the stump. The stump is consumed from the outside.

Experiments have been carried on over the university campus. The cost and the results will be tabulated and sent to the Bureau of Plant Industry.

WORK FOR UNIONISTS.

The census of 1910 shows the population of the United States to be 91,972,266. To induce the largest possible number to purchase union label goods is the most important work the unions can do. Even with a small percentage of the population supporting union label goods the union label is a great power for the betterment of the wages and conditions of the workers. How much greater power would it be if this percentage were multiplied! How many people can you influence in this direction? That is the question.

UNIONISTS TRIUMPH.

Break In the Forces Arrayed Against Labor In Los Angeles.

Since May 19, 1910, the unionists of Los Angeles have been struggling for the right to organize, which right has been denied them by well organized employers. On the date mentioned the men of the brewing industry were obliged to leave their places. Shortly afterward the iron trades were drawn into the combat. The issue was the same.

A few days ago the Wieland agency of the Wieland Brewery of San Francisco and the agency of the San Diego Brewing company settled their differences with their former employees.

The agreement reached grants the union shop, an increase of $1 a week in wages for the workmen and the removal from the breweries of the strike breakers.

This is cheering news. We congratulate heartily the trade unionists immediately concerned as well as those who are still engaged in battle. The omen is good. Victory rests with the wage earners as the result of the completion of this long drawn out contest.

This, however, is but a preliminary triumph, and others are sure to come speedily in its wake. By it the backbone of the opposition to trade unionism in the cruelly stricken and oppressed California city is broken, and it is only necessary now for the unionist forces to charge with an unwavering front all along the line. By so doing they will soon sweep their bitter and malignant foes into the public contempt they so richly merit.

PLAY DAY FOR CHILDREN.

Plan to Make Labor Day Greatest Holiday of the Year.

A plan which may result in making Labor day a national play day was suggested by Francis T. Simmons, president of the Lincoln park board, at the dinner given recently by the Playground Association of Chicago to Joseph Lee, president of the Playground Associatin of America.

Mr. Simmons suggested that all park boards and commissions and all charitable and other similar organizations should begin preparation at once to make Labor day the biggest holiday of the year. The suggestion was seconded by Jane Addams, who in her address added the further suggestion that a law be passed to convert every vacant lot into a playground until sold for use as a building site.

Mr. Lee, who spoke of the work of the Playground association, said that Chicago led the country in play spots for children.

"Play is growth; it is the way a child becomes a man," he said. "The sports of today are too unreal. In baseball and football and other games we buy some one else's play. What we need to do is to encourage the 'big Injun' spirit of the boy, but encourage it under supervision."

Trade Union Notes.

Boston Photo-engravers' Union has discontinued all out of work assessments, there being no further need of them.

The Sheet Metal workers' union of Boston has increased its death benefit to $600 and also extended its sick and accident benefit system.

The new price list for lasters of the southeastern Massachusetts district has been agreed upon. It grants better prices than the old schedule.

Speaking before an audience of the metal workers of Toledo, Samuel Gompers declared himself unalterably opposed to the amalgamation of the thirty-eight divisions of their trade.

The Quincy (Mass.) granite cutters' unions have entered into a new five year agreement, effective March 1, by which an increase of about 7½ per cent on the average is secured by the men.

The San Francisco Typographical union is making arrangements for the entertainment of 5,000 delegates during the month of August, when the annual convention of the International Typographical union will be held.

To force John B. Lennon, national treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, out of the National Civic federation a motion was adopted by the Seattle Tailors' union to exclude all members of that organization from the National Civic federation.

The Gary (Ind.) Illinois steel plant recently notified 1,000 men who have been laid off for a considerable time to report for duty. Another 2,000 men will be taken back in the same plant on April 5, when the full quota of 7,000 men will be at work.

The Cleveland city council unanimously indorsed Representative Evans' bill to limit the working day of all females employed in manufacturing, mercantile or other commercial establishments to eight hours and their working week to forty-eight hours.

NO SPECIAL SESSION NEED TO BE CALLED

CLERK OF THE SENATE SAYS ERRORS ARE OF NO GREAT MAGNITUDE.

SALEM, Or., March 13.—(Spl.)—The general opinion among the clerks who may be responsible for the lack of care in keeping the records straight concerning Senate legislation is that there are no errors making a special session necessary. Chief Clerk Corey says no errors of any considerable magnitude have been found, and the minor errors can be attended to without trouble.

There have been some intimations that some one piqued over the Governor's vetoes may have done the work of hiding the needed data to play even. But the possibility of such an act has been denied.

Gov. West is away and it is uncertain just how matters stand until he comes home and after an investigation shall say just how things are.

Town Will Be Cleansed.

WHITE SALMON, Wash., March 13.—Next Saturday has been designated as clean-up day for White Salmon. There will be strict enforcement of this order and all residents will unite in making White Salmon a "spotless town."
