

BEAN GROWERS CAN SELL THEIR OWN CROPS BEST

Many bean growers of the Willamette valley and western Oregon are contracting the sale of their 1917 bean crop on a commission basis. This has come to the attention of Dr. Hector McPherson, head of rural economics at the Agricultural college, who says that the practice is entirely one-sided and unbusiness-like.

"This one-sided contract," said he, after a tour of some of the bean districts of the valley, "guarantees the growers nothing and still they have to pay for it. That is, there is no guarantee that the bean crop will be sold for any more than the grower could get for it—or even as much—and a considerable percentage of the market price will go to the selling agencies."

Although the acreage has been greatly increased in this and other states there is no indication that the price will be forced down. The demand is enormous and continues to grow. For this reason the growers had best keep the marketing in their own hands and get all the profit there is to be made.

"Going prices at the time of marketing can be learned by farmers and dealers by watching the big bean organizations of Michigan, California and Colorado. The Michigan growers really lead, since they produce a large percentage of the bean crop of this country and the prices they agree on will be followed by the organizations in the other states."

Increased acreage is indicated in letters to Dr. McPherson from commercial clubs throughout western Oregon. The Roseburg club reports 100 tons. Riding through the valley one sees from an acre to 5 acres on nearly every farm.

About the State

Resume of the News of the Week from All Parts of Oregon

The postoffice at Carlton was entered some time Saturday night and stamps amounting to not over $5 were taken. The burglar evidently took his time, as several parcelpost packages were examined, but nothing was taken so far as can be ascertained.

The same party made a later attempt to burglarize the hardware store of Gravley Bros., across the street from the postoffice. Night Watchman Harry Martin heard the breaking of the glass and saw the rays of the burglar's flashlight inside the store. The watchman went to the telephone office a block distant and called up the day marshal and others, but before they arrived the burglar had left without disturbing anything.

Henry J. Felling, vice-president of the Lumbermen's National bank, died at his home, 596 East Fifteenth street North, Portland, Sunday afternoon, as the result of a paralytic stroke suffered Saturday morning. He was 45 years of age last April.

Because he objected to lending the school sewing machines to the Red Cross ladies and at a school board meeting suggested that the ladies of the Red Cross might be better employed working in the orchards than sewing for the soldiers, several Medford citizens have started a recall against Attorney W. E. Phipps, member of the Medford school board.

The affair has caused intense feeling, arrayed the members of the school board against Mr. Phipps and has led to at least two fist fights between disputatious partisans.

In a public letter Mr. Phipps denied he had criticized the Red Cross or ridiculed their efforts, but maintained he opposed the loaning of the sewing machines because it was against the law.

Following an appeal from J. G. Kilpack, financial secretary of the home, Hood River growers will this week donate liberally of their fruit, in order that the children of the Portland Boys' and Girls' Society Home may have their fill of strawberries and cream. The fruit will be assembled at a local bank and expressed at once to the home.

"Because of the high cost of fruits," said Mr. Kilpack, "the fare of the children has been of rather coarse foods for the past few months, and they will keenly appreciate the treat."

About the middle of July the children of the Portland home will be brought here on their annual picnic on the West Side ranch of Leslie Butler.

The Eugene Woolen Mills have received an order for 25,000 yards of olive-drab cloth, according to an announcement made Wednesday by E. Koppe, manager. The cloth is to be supplied in quantities of 3000 yards a month.

Parker & Banfield, of Portland, have been awarded the contract to build a $60,000 mausoleum in Pendleton cemetery and will begin work immediately. It will have 233 crypts, all of which have been sold.

This contracting firm also built the mausoleum at Portland, which was completed about a year ago.

Award of a contract for the construction of an army cantonment at Battle Creek, Mich., to Porter Bros., contractors of Portland, was announced upon receipt of information from Washington. The contract includes the entire construction and equipment of the cantonment, it was said, and will approximate $3,000,000. About 26,000,000 feet of lumber will be required, it is expected.

Two other Portland contracting firms have been awarded large contracts. Grant Smith & Co. will construct an engine terminal at Bowdoin, Mont., for approximately $300,000, while A. Guthrie company will carry through a contract at Northtown, Minn., to build an engine terminal and an additional unit of the yard layout, at a cost of about $250,000.

Early sales almost completely cleaned up the stock of wool in the section around Bend so that no regular sale took place here Monday. About 500,000 pounds of wool will be shipped from Bend this year, most of it going to Portland for storage.

Heavy snows during the past winter are melting so slowly that plans for actual construction work on the McKenzie highway from the western boundary of the Cascade Forest Reserve to the summit of the mountains will in all probability have to be abandoned this year, according to an announcement made by Clyde R. Seitz, supervisor of the Cascade National Forest, who recently returned from a trip into the mountains.

Great rejoicing in Newport followed the news that Senator McNary would attempt to have the river and harbor bill amended so as to appropriate $100,000 to start the work on the new jetty project for Yaquina bay.

Acting upon the favorable report of the United States engineers, the ports of Newport and Toledo have arranged to pay one-half the cost of the $900,000 project by the issuance of bonds, and this action of Senator McNary rekindles a hope that a disheartening wait of another year for action by the government will not have to be undergone.

Fire of mysterious origin wholly destroyed the steel boat factory of Wynkoop Brothers at 209 Bancroft street, Portland, at 9 o'clock Monday night. The plant was engaged in making lifeboats for the steel ships now being built at the Northwest Steel Works, and this fact may cause an investigation by the federal authorities.

Strange New Naval Weapon

One of America's greatest electrical engineers, whose reputation extends throughout the world, has developed what he terms an aeromarine torpedo. It is intended as a weapon for destroying hostile war vessels. The July Popular Mechanics magazine describes the device. Essentially it consists of a torpedo freely suspended by cables beneath a skiff, or pontoon.

The latter is connected, by means of a long piano wire, with a flying boat, which tows it through the water at high speed until it strikes its target. The wire, which serves as a towline, passes through an eye in the handle of a lever and is wound about a drum installed in the skiff. While the flying boat is skimming across the water, the towline assumes a low angle. This depresses the lever, which in turn locks the drum against movement so that needless unreeling does not occur. When the pilot craft ascends into the air, however, the drum revolves as the wire is drawn out. This motion is transmitted to a propeller, and the forward propulsion of the skiff thus aided.

In attacking a vessel, an airman would leave the water and attempt to cross the enemy's path, dragging the torpedo carrier after him. The towline, of course, would fall across the radio aerial, or across the deck, of a vessel. The continued pull upon it by the air craft would bring the torpedo, it is assumed, against the vessel with considerable force.

CLACKAMAS AGAIN OPEN

Supt. Mitchell Orders River Mill Fish-way Ungrated

On Monday, June 18th, the grating was again taken out of the fish ladder at the River Mill dam by order of Supt. Hugh C. Mitchell of the Bureau of Fisheries; thereby again opening the Clackamas river to its headwaters for the migration of fish.

In a letter from Supt. Mitchell received last week, he says in part, "The grate will be removed June 18th and never be installed again." The grate referred to is the grating which closes the River Mill fish ladder.

Even with the River Mill ladder opened, it is not likely many fish can ascend the river, for the ladder is not a practical one, owing to its location with reference to the main channel and currents and unless the owners of the dam are willing to expend more money on it, it will remain substantially useless.

The fish ladder at Cazaderois supposed to be open now and in working condition, so theoretically at least a fish may now ascend the Clackamas river to its headwaters, but whether said fish is really able to do it is another question.—Eastern Clackamas News.

BRIDE'S GRANDPARENTS AND PARENTS UNITED BY McCOMB

LeRoy Eaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Eaton, of Canemah, and Miss Vera Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garland J. Howell, 14th and Jackson streets, Oregon City, were married at the home of the bride by Rev. J. R. McComb, retired Baptist minister, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon. Rev. McComb officiated at the marriage of the bride's grandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Aldredge, and at the wedding of her father and mother. After a honeymoon trip to Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. Eaton will reside in Portland, where the groom is employed by the Northwestern Steel company.

THAT DULL ACHING

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this statement:

J. F. Montgomery, West Linn, says: "I had been troubled for some time by kidney and bladder annoyances and a dull ache in my back across my kidneys. I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I bought at Huntley's drug store, and the pains soon left me. The kidney and bladder troubles were relieved, too." (Statement given April 4, 1913.)

On April 17, 1916, Mr. Montgomery said: "I am still strong for Doan's Kidney Pills and whenever I can I recommend them to my friends. They never fail to do me good when I have occasion to take a kidney medicine."

CHIEF'S PATIENCE EXHAUSTED

Says Merchants Will be Arrested If Refuse is Not Removed

Fire Chief Lavier's patience is exhausted, he says, and he has issued his last warning to merchants of Oregon City who permit refuse to gather in the alleys at the rear of their stores, thus, according to the chief, raising the fire risk and increasing the hazard. There is a city ordinance against the practice and Chief Lavier declares that the merchants will be arrested if they do not clean up around their premises.

ANNUAL LOSS OF EGGS IS ENORMOUS, SAYS C. C. LAMB

Many millions of dollars are lost annually in the United States from bad methods of producing and handling eggs. A few years ago this loss amounted to 50 million dollars or 17 per cent of the total egg production; and the loss is even greater at present. This enormous waste could largely be prevented, says C. C. Lamb, specialist in poultry husbandry at O. A. C.

It is said that special care of eggs during the hot summer months is exceedingly important, for heat is the worst enemy of eggs. Buyers are more careful at this time of the year than at any other time, and the bad product will be thrown out, resulting in a loss to the producer. Hence, farmers who present for sale only good quality eggs can demand more per dozen than is paid for the inferior product.

In the cooler sections of the country the loss due to hot weather is not so great. However, the broody hen will spoil the eggs quickly if not kept away from the nest. In preventing loss from this cause the broody hen is confined in a slat crate in a cool place and fed well.

The production of infertile eggs is an efficient means of preventing loss during the warm season. Hens will lay as well without the male birds, and therefore it is best to keep the rooster away from the flock after the breeding season. Nearly all the eggs laid two weeks after the males are removed will be infertile.

To prevent loss from dirty and moldy eggs and from breakage, the poultry house is supplied with litter and the nest with clean straw. The eggs are gathered twice a day, carefully packed and kept in a clean, dry and cool place.

Charges Drunkenness

Lillian Irwin, charging John Irwin with failure to provide and that he is a drunkard, has started a suit here for divorce. They were married in Seattle, Wash., October 28, 1909, and have no children.

THREE DIVORCED BY JUDGE CAMPBELL LAST SATURDAY

Three divorces were granted, a referee appointed to hear a fourth case and a fifth suit was started in the district court here Saturday.

Mrs. Elma Seidel, who married Emil Seidel in Sioux Falls, S. D., August 22, 1898, claims her husband abused her and she asks the custody of Harry, the only child who is 18 years of age.

Ada Everton was granted a decree from J. W. Everton, and her maiden name, Ada Sexton, by Judge J. U. Campbell. Bessie G. Thompson was divorced from Lloyd F. Thompson and given the custody of three minor children. Thompson was ordered to pay $22 a month. Louise Hesselstein was granted the custody of their only child, Geraldine, and William Hesselstein was ordered to pay $25 a month for the girl's education and $35 a month until $5040 has been paid for her support.

The case of Lessie Kanacos versus Louis Kanacos will be heard by R. B. Runyon, referee, who was appointed by Judge Campbell.

Different—But Satisfactory

Indigestion causes worry, nervousness, sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, bloating, gas, constipation and constant distress. W. A. McRae, Raleigh, Ga., writes: "Foley Cathartic Tablets cleanse my system thoroughly and do not gripe or hurt at all. I recommend them to others and all find them entirely satisfactory and wonderfully different and more pleasant than anything ever seen." They cleanse the bowels, sweeten the stomach, invigorate the liver.—Jones Drug Co.
