AMERICAN DYESTUFFS.

There seems to be reason for believing that the dyestuff situation, about which so much apprehension was expressed early in the war, has materially improved. At least it is certain that large quantities of certain kinds of dyes are being turned out here. The New York Times has been giving the subject some attention and notes that there is wide divergence of opinion as to the quantity of real-dye dyes made in this country, adding: "Those who are producing them are somewhat loath to take the public into their confidence in the matter." Nevertheless there are known facts which may furnish ground for an opinion. The New York Times continues: "Thus it was shown recently that the largest of the domestic dye concerns is now producing colors at the rate of about 11,000 tons or upward per year. The works in Brooklyn are said to be turning out nearly, if not quite, 4,000 tons. Several other concerns are mentioned as turning out products at the rate of 5,000 tons or more annually. It is admitted that the dyes thus produced are the easiest made and are mostly used for black goods, and even at the present rate of output the demand for various colors may exceed the supply. Moreover, it may be that the dyes furnished by American makers are not as yet fully equal to those formerly imported and representing highly specialized skill."

However, the New York Times says "what becomes of these dyes (made in America) is a problem." It is shown by the custom house reports that large quantities of American dyestuffs are going abroad. April shipments from New York of finished dyestuffs of all kinds to foreign countries aggregated $30,000, which, it is remarked, is "a surprisingly high figure in view of the alleged color scarcity in this country." Following the matter up it appears that, according to J. H. Lant, the chief statistician, who prepared the figures for the New York Times, "in April alone 34 foreign countries drew on the United States for color supplies." Among these countries are England, France, Holland, Italy (the largest purchaser, by the way), Norway, Portugal and Russia; in Europe; all the Central and South American countries, British India, British South Africa, Australia and Jamaica.

It is evident from all this that a great deal of dyestuffs of one kind and another must be turned out in the United States, and that our producers are furnishing supplies to numerous foreign purchasers. If this means that we have reached the point where we are practically independent of the old world the conditions furnish cause for satisfaction. But it should not be forgotten that these are abnormal times. When peace returns the dyestuffs makers of Europe may be counted on as certain to make determined efforts to regain their lost trade. Then will come the real crisis for American dyestuffs producers, and the only way to insure their continued success will be through imposition of protective duties.

BITUMINOUS MACADAM.

Those who come to the aid of the paving contractor and attack Clackamas county's hard surface roads, laid without private profit, are resorting to misrepresentation in order to attack an enterprise which threatens the business of such concerns as the Warren Construction company, the Independent Paving company and others.

A certain Portlander who has stood as a staunch advocate for permanent road work prepared an article the other day which appeared in a Portland paper, declaring that Clackamas county's paving was a failure. He said that the county had spent $25,000 on hard surface for the Milwaukee-

Sellwood road within the last few years. That statement is not true.

The only hard surface ever laid on the Milwaukee-Sellwood road was completed this summer. It is true, bituminous macadam was laid on the road in the fall of 1914 and the spring of 1915 and the bituminous macadam did not stand up under the traffic. The cost of grading the road and laying the bituminous macadam was $12,500—less than half of the amount this Portland man said was spent on the road.

Now comes the Eastern Clackamas News, a selfish and sectional newspaper at Estacada, which says: "The Morning Enterprise takes exception to Mr. Chapman's criticism, but refrains from acknowledging the miserable failure made by the Milwaukee-Sellwood road pavement of a year or so ago. That pavement was also heralded at the time of its completion, as a bargain and one which would last for many years, but alas, it does broke down in a mighty short time."

Bituminous macadam is NOT A HARD SURFACE PAVEMENT. It is all bound macadam, and nothing else. It is just a step higher than water bound macadam. A certain amount of asphalt and oil enter into its construction, but distinctly it is a crushed rock road.

The faults of bituminous macadam should not be charged against asphaltic concrete. The Eastern Clackamas News or that certain prominent Portlander or anyone else who tries to confuse the minds of the people on this matter is a deliberate liar or he doesn't know what he is talking about.

The Eastern Clackamas News, in its issue this week, takes a slap at county-laid paving again and suggests an injunction to tie up the plant, although it does not say upon what grounds the injunction could be secured. Injunctions do not grow on every bush. Also the News wants the people of the Estacada district to sign petitions to show the county court that they want to return to the good old days when macadam and gravel were thought the best for a main traveled road. The Eastern Clackamas News is "asin" hard surface, by cracker, particularly when the hard surface is not right in the Estacada district.

We wondered why Editor Standish changed the name of his paper, the other day from the Estacada Progress to the Eastern Clackamas News. Now we know. The loss of progress is not confined to its name.

THE FUNSTON DISCLOSURE.

The unintended but fortunate disclosure of General Funston's emphatic recommendation that General Pershing's command be withdrawn from Mexico has revealed another important phase of the Mexican situation earnestly sought to suppress. Since April 11, General Pershing's command has been kept in Mexico, in constant danger from attack, not permitted to advance, without reinforcements, to the injury of its health and morale, because—President Wilson could not make up his mind, either to continue the pursuit of Villa or to withdraw.

In the effort to shift responsibility for any military disaster which might occur Mr. Wilson and Secretary Baker have persistently avoided asking the military authorities for their opinion, but they inadvertently asked General Funston for his views in connection with the proposed Mexican conference and the courageous little Kansan, without regard to how unwelcome his words would be to Mr. Wilson, came back with a flat-footed recommendation that the troops be withdrawn from Mexican soil.

The administration tried vainly to suppress the fact that Funston had made this recommendation, but it leaked out and knowing Funston they do not dare deny it. Pershing, it will be remembered was ordered into Mexico to "break up the Villa band of bandits." Mr. Wilson said "to get Villa"—following the raid on Columbus, on March 8. The punitive expedition was brilliantly led and had nearly captured Villa in the Sierra Madre range when, on April 12, the Carranza forces at Parral treacherously attacked the American troops, killing and wounding several. The Wilson administration immediately became panic-stricken, ordered the pursuit abandoned and a "watchful waiting" policy adopted by American troops in enemy country.

In great danger and at great expense, the Pershing line into Mexico has been maintained ever since, although if he was not to go forward he had no reason for being there and should have been ordered back. Pershing was then 300 miles below the border. Finally, he was secretly ordered to withdraw to Nampiquipa, 200 miles below the border. The retreat of the American soldiers emboldened the Carranzistas again to attack them, at Carrizal, on June 21, where two officers and a number of troops were killed. First Chief Carranza's ambassador, informed President Wilson that the Carranza soldiers fired by order of "the first chief."

Again the administration became panic-stricken and Pershing was secretly ordered to retreat to Colonia Dublan, 150 miles below the border. As every military man knows, although few dare say it, Pershing has been kept there for no reason whatever save that Mr. Wilson has been unable to make up his mind and because he has feared popular criticism on the one hand, if he appeared to yield to Carranza's demand that the American troops be withdrawn, and on the other, loss of the belief of some of the uninformed voters, that "he has kept up out of war."

GROWTH OF OFFICIALDOM.

The Pacific Coast Manufacturer calls attention to the fact that the larger part of the mail of newspaper offices and of some business men consists of franked mail from government officials.

Most of this mail, in fact nearly all, consists of publicity matter for that department or that board or commission of official.

On top of this come many of the state departments, boards, commissions and institutions with demands for publicity or boosting.

With the rapid extension of government functions and the rapid growth of officialism, the bulk of the business will soon be official.

Then a minority of the people, who are still producers and taxpayers who are supporting the majority who are tax eaters and non-producers.

In Portland a large building filled with offices is taken to hold the forestry officials along, and every town has a bunch of officials.

There are many hundreds of these forestry officials, and in the countries of Europe they would be in the forests as common laborers.

Here nearly all engaged in the conservation and reclamation departments are soft-handed college graduates, educated at public expense.

Most of this class are paid far more than they could possibly earn in any occupation they could possibly engage in at private life.

MR. DANIEL C. ROPER.

Daniel C. Roper, of South Carolina, first assistant postmaster-general, is to be chief of staff for the democratic national campaign, and he has resigned his office to take up the job. Mr. Roper heretofore had one claim to fame: it was he who discharged the assistant postmaster at Winnetka, Ill, because that subordinate thought the president married too soon after the death of his first wife—and had the temerity to say so. Mr. Roper has had complete charge of the postmasters of the country and among the archives of his office in Washington are—or rather were, for we suppose he has taken them along with him to national headquarters—complete outlines of political conditions in every community where a democratic postmaster has been appointed. He and Mr. Burleson insisted on having this information from every congressman who filed a recommendation for a postmaster's appointment. These data should now prove of large advantage to Mr. Roper in his new work—and it is not to be doubted that he has carried transcripts with him. Of course, the civil service reformers, who once counted Woodrow Wilson as one of themselves, may be shocked by the Roper appointment; but it is altogether consistent. Ambassador Morgenthau was lifted bodily from the diplomatic corps to hold the bag for the Wilson campaign committee. The director of the mint was relieved of that office to take charge of the literary bureau. And now Mr. Roper is summoned. Next!

DEMOCRATIC VIEW OF NATURALIZED AMERICANS.

Wonder what kind of a slap Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels was trying to give the American soldier of foreign birth or descent when he published the following incisionous comparison in a recent issue of his paper, the Raleigh, North Carolina, News and Observer:

"The Herald knows that when southerners enlist in the volunteer regiments one does not have to be acquainted with German, Russian, Slav and southern European languages in order to know how to spell and pronounce their names."

Why this exultation over the fact that there are few people of foreign birth or ancestry in the south? Here in the west we are proud of them. We have found them intelligent, enterprising, honest and patriotic. We have no more trouble spelling and pronouncing their names than they have in spelling and pronouncing ours. They pay their bills as well, on the average, as native-born Americans. They send their children to school regularly, observe the laws of the country, and take part in local community enterprises.

We meet them in our stores and churches, we labor beside them in the fields and factories, we associate with them in colleges, and we expect to be buried among them in the cemetery. If spelling and pronouncing their names requires some special effort, it has no other effect than making us better acquainted. It certainly does not cause us to regret their presence in the volunteer regiments of the nation of which we are citizens by birth and they by choice.

CONGRESS SPENDS $2,350,000,000.

From out the mass of confusing terms and conflicting charges, it is now possible to give the correct figures showing the amount of public money which the session of congress just drawing to a close has spent. It is $2,347,127,699, or in more intelligible terms 2,347 million dollars. This is the total to date of the money which this session has "appropriated" plus that which it has authorized to be expended, but the bills for which will not come in until after the close of the next fiscal year. The total appropriations amount to $1,710,482,722. To this figure must be added "authorizations" for which appropriations are not made, but for which congress has obligated itself to make appropriations of $638,642,977. The total "appropriations" of the last republican congress (two sessions) amounted to $2,044,000,000. The appropriations of this congress (two sessions) will total at least $2,400,000,000. The increase in the appropriations due to preparedness is $350,000,000, which leaves an increase of $200,000,000 of actual appropriations over last session, to be accounted for entirely by what Senator Smoot has termed "unequalled extravagance combined with inefficiency unsurpassed." The democratic platform contains two pertinent statements. One reads:

"We denounce the profligate waste of money wrong from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of republican congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government and a reduction in the number of useless offices, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people."

The other reads: "Our pledges are made to be kept while in office as well as to be relied upon during the campaign."

The democratic managers have been sending distress messages to Washington, begging their leaders in congress to try to make some better fiscal showing. The above figures and quotations show the reason why.

PAVING AND ITS MERITS.

Before Oregon City or Clackamas county laid an inch of that type of hard surface which now covers Main street and several stretches of county road, the city authorities made a close examination of the merits of the surface. Local authorities received letters from the city engineer and other officials of a certain southern California town which had been using this type of paving for over 20 years and the city engineer of Oregon City went to Victoria, B. C., to examine paving laid several years before. Every query brought out the fact that this style of paving was of the best quality, that it was able to withstand hard traffic for many years and gave satisfaction wherever laid.

Victoria, edgewise in a business slump which has tied up business throughout western Canada, has no need for more paving just now. At any rate, when those who laid Main street, Oregon City, were in Victoria they laid 15 miles of streets. We don't know why that California town is not laying more paving. Both Victoria and the city in California are highly pleased with the hard surface. They are willing to send out letters recommending it to all who inquire.

THE WARNERS ENTERTAIN.

Mr. and Mrs. George Heib, Mrs. A. Heib and daughters, the Misses Heib, Mrs. H. J. Danneman and daughter, Miss Hester, of Portland, Miss Merle Keck, of this city, C. Gruelin, of Portland, Mrs. L. E. Golding, Mrs. Sidney Peters and daughters, Evelyn and Dorothy, of New Orleans, were guests at The Lillies, the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Warner, at Mount Pleasant on Sunday. Dinner was enjoyed on the lawn, and the long table was prettily decorated with cut flowers.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

Clackamas Paving Defended.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 25.—(Editor of The Enterprise)—It is indeed a pleasure to learn that the taxpayers of Clackamas county are satisfied with the hard surface pavement being put down on your highways this year. Of course you will be criticized by friends of other types of pavements. The word "friends" in the previous sentence should really have been "promoters." They will poke all sorts of fun at you. I noticed an article in a Portland paper a few days ago signed by Amos Benson in which he said that your pavement was not worth twenty cents a square yard, or rather that it would be expensive at twenty cents. In this article he said that your pavement would not last a year.

Please ask him how many times the bitulithic pavement on the Linton road has been rebuilt since it was put down a year ago. If he does not tell you ask the residents who live along that road. They will tell you that many men have been at work on the bitulithic end of that road almost every day since it was completed.

The Warren Brothers have placed so many top coats on the down town bitulithic pavements in Portland that there is no bitulithic left to resist travel. It is regular sheet asphalt now. There is no mineral aggregate in the top. You must remember that the City of Portland is paying two and one-half cents a square yard per annum to keep these pavements in repair. Pavements that cost two and one-half cents per square yard to repair ought to look good, don't you think? Did you ever see a repair crew at work on a down town street in Portland? If you drive an automobile you have dodged bitulithic repair plants. On some of the plants you can read this legend: "Warren Brothers Construction company."

They are repairing bitulithic pavements here that would not be worth twenty cents a square yard (quoting Mr. Benson) if they did not keep everlastingly putting a new top coat on at the cost of two and one-half cents a square yard a year. They have plastered so many square coats on top that you have to get a search warrant to find the old bitulithic about an inch down.

Don't you dare tell your readers that the base under your pavement is nothing more or less than a gravel bitulithic pavement. This ought to have inherent stability. The bitulithic crowd told us a few years ago when they wanted to pave Fremont street in Portland that gravel-bitulithic had inherent stability. This Fremont pavement cost about $1.45 a square yard, not including the grading. Of course if you had 25 cents a square yard royalty charged up against your pavement base you might have inherent stability. It would probably take, however, about 20 per cent additional for promotion before the pavement would dare to hold up for the Clackamas county taxpayers. The elder Mr. Benson over his own signature has told us that the Warren Brothers have a very large office force in Portland to support. In Clackamas county you have done away with a great deal of this overhead, and you have no large crowd of attorneys, shysters, letter writers or promoters to support. It seems that here in Oregon you cannot have a successful pavement at a fair price.

On the top of your gravel bitulithic base you are putting a two inch wearing surface of the same kind of asphalt that the Warren Brothers use mixed with the same kind of rock, the same kind of sand and an added portion of silica. This two inch top is costing you 27½ cents a square yard. The same kind of a top in Multnomah county costs $1.15 a square yard. Your whole pavement, including the grading, costs less than this two inch top in Multnomah county. Your pavement complete including grading costs less than one dollar while the Multnomah county pavement costs more than $1.50 and not including the grading. For comparison sake you make a mistake in figuring in the grading costs. Just get down to pavements. Mr. Spence ought to know about this.

Mr. Covert, Mr. Benson's attorney, for a time made me believe that all out bitulithic pavements were costing was $1.18 a square yard. I was not surprised, however, when I learned for a fact that they cost $1.55 and more per square yard. On top of that we are paying about $800 per mile interest charges on those pavements.

I understand that you are running your own paving plant. You know just exactly how much that pavement costs. You will also know just how much that it will cost for the next ten years to keep this pavement in repair. It is safe to predict that it will not cost you two and one-half cents per square yard per year, and you ought to have a good pavement at the end of ten years. You will have maintenance charges; don't forget that. The total cost on your pavement will not be anything like $1.55 a square yard figuring in the ten year maintenance if you look after your pavement the way you should.

You will find many of the newspapers in the state ranting the Clackamas county pavements. You will find a bitulithic advertisement in each of these publications. In some of them you will find two advertisements in each issue. Of course this is over doing a good thing. These two-issues publications will keep a running attack on your pavement and they will word it so that the one-issue papers will carry the article and give credit. In a few instances you will find that papers which do not really carry an advertisement for bitulithic always republish these attacks. I suppose in this instance that different arrangements are made. It will be interesting for the Clackamas county readers to follow this thing up a little. It will prove very interesting.

J. BROWNE COOPER.

WINSFORD HOUSE, LONDON, July 21.—(Editor of The Enterprise).—The mail "from home" (home being the United States) including a copy of your paper sent by my mother. I had not seen a copy for years. Sensations indescribable came over me when I read the names of old time children going into the army, owing to the trouble in Mexico.

I had always thought of dear old Oregon as being the most peaceful and secluded spot on earth. I have been doing war work for two years and I always felt that if I pegged out I would go to Oregon City and rest in peace and quiet. How little we know what is before us. My memory brings back the time when I was a most valued compositor on The Enterprise. I won't tell you how many years ago, it would make me seem too old.

Thurston Johnson was also a compositor and the late Edward Fields was the printer's devil. I used to sit on a high stool and get the mail out on Friday; it was then a weekly paper, and we had never heard of Mergenthaler. We used to be very proud of our work.

John Eddy and others of the Oregonian staff used to come up to visit us and swagger about a bit over being Oregonian men, but let me tell you right now we thought our paper just as good as the Oregonian. I know I am glad to have the present copy of the dear old Enterprise than I would be to get a dozen Oregonians. My husband is an Englishman and of course the war affects us greatly. My son is a lieutenant in the Prince of Wales' regiment.

I have been doing what I could to help the wounded and to provide socks for the soldiers. There is plenty for every one to do. I do not feel comfortable in anything but a nurse's costume and am restless without my knitting.

You may take it from me, the allies are going to win, and if I only help a little bit I shall not have lived in vain. The wounded men coming in by the train load, are the cheeriest lot. You simply marvel at their courage and bravery. I was afraid when we lost Lord Kitchener the men would become discouraged. It has only made them more determined than ever.

I hope the Mexican trouble will be settled without any more bloodshed. I would like to make an appeal to all of my country women, through your paper, for them all to learn to knit. A great and most glorious country, like the United States, will always be an object of envy to lesser countries, and war may be imminent at any time.

It is wonderful how many socks a hundred thousand men can wear out in three months.

If my own country goes to war I shall come home and help her all I can. If she doesn't I shall stay on in England and France till the end of the European trouble.

TAXPAYER FINDS TWO HEALTHY WARREN ADS IN THE OREGON VOTER

WRITER SUGGESTS COUNTY DONATE SO MAGAZINE WOULD STOP IMITATING MULE.

OREGON CITY, Aug. 26.—(Editor of The Enterprise).—I have been reading the comments on Clackamas county's hard surface roads in the Oregon Voter and find that Brother Chapman, the publisher of that magazine, is strongly opposed to the methods pursued by Clackamas county in building hard surfaced roads in the manner and with the material which the county has adopted, and I was somewhat puzzled to understand the attitude of Mr. Chapman until I received this morning a copy of the Oregon Voter, and I find that on page 11 there appears a good healthy advertisement on bitulithic pavement which is a patented hard surface pavement copyrighted by Warren Brothers company, Journal building, Portland, Ore., and then, to my surprise I find on page 31, another healthy advertisement by this same company, recommending their patented bitulithic pavement, and therefore I came to the conclusion that, when one company sells a patented pavement carrying two advertisements in one magazine, that it is in a financial standpoint none of the Clackamas county citizens should find fault with Mr. Chapman for trying to put a black eye on the methods pursued by Clackamas county.

In all probability if Clackamas county could see its way clear to carry two advertisements, the same as the Warren Brothers company does, the Oregon Voter would cease publishing the tactics of the mule and no kicking from now on would be heard.

TAXPAYER

SANDY MERCHANT THOUGHT TO HAVE TAKEN OWN LIFE.

ing the car over the bluff road," his wife declares he remarked a week ago Sunday evening. The bluff road skirts along the top of a bluff 300 feet above the Sandy river.

The sheriff, coroner and deputy district attorney Monday night met one Sandy citizen, whose name is withheld, who overheard Glockner remark that the "man who committed suicide is not a coward."

Ike Dawson, the Sandy barber, who seems to have replaced Glockner in the affections of Mrs. Zabriskie, told practically the same story which Mrs. Zabriskie gave the officials last night in Portland. He said Mrs. Zabriskie told him of the letter which she received from Glockner the morning of the suicide. The general trend of the message, as he says Mrs. Zabriskie outlined the note to him, was that if Glockner could not have her, he did not want to live.

Motive Also Lacking.

The only possible motive for murder—trouble over Glockner's affections for Mrs. Zabriskie—fell down Monday. Ike Dawson, Glockner's rival for the attention of Mrs. Zabriskie, and Glockner were found to be good friends. Moreover, Mrs. Zabriskie denies affections for either man, although she was much concerned when Glockner was near death in the Portland hospital.

A letter, found torn into little pieces, in Mrs. Zabriskie's room in Portland, was patched together. It follows: "Portland, August 26, 1916. Dear Friend: I went out this afternoon and also this morning to see Fred and he is almost the same. It seems to me that he is getting weaker, the nurse says not, but I don't see how it can be otherwise. If I go out there and see him again and I feel the way I do now, I don't know but what I would be more pleasant to be where he is or will be. It is sure getting me bugs for sure."

"If you care to write to me I am at 373 Taylor street. I seen Mrs. Douglas at the hospital this p. m. and she says it was all my fault. So she must know."

The letter was not signed. It is believed that she intended to send it to Dawson, the barber.

The theory advanced now is that Glockner became wildly infatuated with Mrs. Zabriskie and wanted to run away with her. She refused to elope and Glockner, convinced that life was not worth living without her, took his own life.

The coroner's jury is composed of A. W. Bell, Clerk, Melvin B. F. Bauer, Alex Gray, F. E. Beckwith and Del Jadin.

PETITION IN HARRIS ESTATE.

Petition for letters of administration in the estate of the late Patrick Harris, who died July 17, 1916, was filed in the probate department of the county court Monday by H. H. Hughes, a creditor of the estate. According to the petition, Mr. Harris leaves one son, Patrick Harris, whose address is not known. Mr. Hughes asks that Elmon A. Geneste, who appeared before the court a week or two ago, not be named administrator on the ground that he is neither a relative or creditor of the deceased and that his petition was filed too soon after the death of Mr. Harris to be legal.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and this tube cannot be reached by local applications, because its opening is behind the eardrum. Cases of deafness from this cause can be cured by Catarrh Cure, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free.
