

PECULIAR GAME PULLED BY ROOTS

INDISCREET ROADMASTER GETS IN BAD BY SHADY DEAL WITH BRIBER

ACCEPTS $100 BRIBE MONEY

Comes Home to Brag of the Clever Thing He Did. It Was
Crude Trick

About the crudest little blackmail game that has been played in Clackamas county's little history is credited to Thomas A. Roots, roadmaster. It was so crude that it is disgraceful.

It is too bad that county officials, vested with authority and honor, cannot abide by the rules of common honesty and manly decency. And its shame is made the greater because the perpetrator of this low-brow stunt brags about his accomplishment—thinks he's clever. We have no bones to pick with county officials, but when they get off the track of righteousness in the transaction of county business it is high time to show up their true colors.

The most mild characterization of Thomas Roots' little game is that the roadmaster was woefully indiscreet. The meanest thing that could be said about him is that he blackmailed with an evil result—and goodness knows that's a terrible thing to say about a public servant.

County authority can command respect only so long as its actions are respectful. It can enforce justice only while it is just. When these qualities are lacking in county officials we have arrived at a state of moral corruption in public affairs that is nothing short of dishonorable. And we should waste little time listening to the brag that tells of his clever doings, for his actions are reprehensible and should be scorned.

Tom Roots told a story last week of his own heroism and honesty which places him in a disgraceful position before the public. The Courier reviews the simple narrative for the benefit of those who may have forgotten it. Mind you, this is the story as told by Mr. Roots himself!

The roadmaster was in Portland with the county judges and commissioners dining at the Benson hotel. At the conclusion of the feast some dishonest dealer in road supplies handed Roots $100. Roots couldn't help taking the money, for it was handed him while he was shaking hands with the Portlander.

Roots hunted up the county judge, showed him the $100 bill and told him of the transaction. The money was put in the county vaults, and the roadmaster laid in wait to "get it back on" the Portlander.

Weeks went by before Roots met the briber. The conversation over a dinner table turned to road supplies, and our crafty official turned the tables on the underhanded dealer and with threats of exposure secured a promise that the dealer would give the county a 10 and then a five per cent discount on all supplies purchased from the Portland firm. Moreover, Roots compelled the man—intimating that the cost was much less than the shame of exposure—to give a five per cent discount on all goods purchased by the county in 1916. It is one thing to see the county's balance on the right side of the ledger, but there's a deal of difference in how transactions are recorded. Honesty can be the only policy in public business as well as private affairs.

That is the story that was told to the Courier last week by the proud Mr. Roots himself.

Perhaps Mr. Roots has become aware of the fact that his blackmail game was the worst kind of dishonesty—even casting a shadow over the crime of the briber. Perhaps he realizes by his own confession that he not only kept the bribe, but added wrong to folly by deliberately blackmailing the briber. The county benefitted through the crooked transaction, but that makes no difference. The fact remains that the county accepted tainted money and by threatening to blacken the reputation of the giver Roots blackened his own with his outrageous blackmail game.

If Thomas Roots was indiscreet and really had an honest desire not to accept the bribe, why did he not report the matter to the district attorney? He should have seen to it that the man who belittled the moral character of Thomas A. Roots by tendering unholy money was legally prosecuted. The Courier believes Roots to be as immoral as the Portland machinery dealer, and it also has a firm conviction that Clackamas county's officials should be above bribes and above blackmail. It believes the roadmaster and all other public servants should have manly stamina enough to flatly refuse to be a party to such shady deals as this was.

Not only was Mr. Roots a party to the scandalous affair, but he came home from Portland and spread the story of his clever bit of gambling. He not only viciously erred, believing that he was pulling off something

CAMPAIGN FOR BOND IS TO COVER STATE

SENATOR WOOD WILL CONSIDER
ESTABLISHMENT OF A CENTRAL OFFICE

Requests from counties in eastern, southern and western Oregon have been received by Dr. W. D. Wood, state senator from Washington county, asking him as senior member of the state legislative committee of eight, to take up with that committee the advisability of calling a conference of all the counties to arrange for financing and organizing a state headquarters to serve the local and county roads organizations in providing maps, pamphlets and other information asked for in their road bond campaigns.

The legislative committee of eight consists of Senators Wood of Washington county, E. D. Cusick of Linn county and Julian A. Hurley of Malheur county; and Representatives W. E. Schimpff of Clatsop county, W. H. Gore of Jackson county, C. C. Clark of Gilliam county, O. Laugaard of Multnomah county and Roy Ritner of Umatilla county, the latter five being members of the house committee on roads. It has been appointed in pursuance to a joint resolution passed by the legislature requiring the naming of a committee to prepare the official argument for the state pamphlet to be sent to voters prior to the special election June 4.

Representing the entire state as it does, this committee, it is said, would be the proper body to call the statewide conference that is proposed. This would insure that whatever headquarters are established would be under the domination and control of the counties outside of Multnomah, and would insure that the headquarters be kept free from the influence of paving contractors. It would also insure that whatever campaign funds were raised, should any be deemed necessary, would come from the people of the whole state in small subscriptions, and that no contributions would be permitted from any paving interest.

Senator Wood has the suggestions under consideration, and states that if he calls the meeting of the legislative committee of eight he will do so some time next week.

BABY IS DROWNED

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Milln of Portland Dies in Bath

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Milln was drowned in a bathtub at his home at Portland on Wednesday. While the mother was absent from the room the year-old baby climbed into the tub and in a moment, when Mrs. Milln returned, was laying face downward in the tub, dead. All efforts to revive the baby were futile, although Mrs. Milln rushed to a doctor with the child in her arms.

Funeral services will be held in Oregon City Friday afternoon at two o'clock, with the Rev. Father Hillebrand officiating. Interment will be made here. Mr. and Mrs. Milln are well-known in Oregon City, where Mr. Milln was born and raised. He is a son of Mrs. A. W. Milln of this city and was formerly connected with the Pacific Telephone Co., with whom he is employed at Portland.

OBJECTS TO NAMES

Husband Loiters in Pool Halls and Spends Cash for Horns

Charging that her husband spends his money "for brass horns, music and frivolous things," Mrs. Anna M. Mullan Saturday filed suit for divorce from Homer M. Mullan. They were married at Milwaukie, Ore., December 19, 1900, and have three children, of which the mother asks custody. Mrs. Mullan alleges that she has aided as a laborer with the work about the farm, digging potatoes and milking the cows and that her husband went to see her husband loitering about pool and card rooms and in being called by him "a lazy old cow." Mullan is prominent in the Milwaukie neighborhood.

WILL CHANGE ROAD

Mortenson Wants to Build Sawmill on Banks of Molalla

The county court Saturday granted F. C. Mortenson a permit to change the route of a county roadway along the banks of the Molalla river in township 5 south of ranges 2 and 3 east. Mr. Mortenson is the lessee of the property there, and wants to erect a sawmill on the bank of the river. With the road as at present there would not be room enough between the river and the road for his operations. The permit for the change covers a period of eight years, after which, if the time is not extended, Mr. Mortenson agrees to route the road as it was originally.

unusually clever, but he draped the thing in a mantle of shame when he told the story to the press and sat back to enjoy the praises that he probably expected from a public long since tired of stories of the failings of officials, of the dishonest actions of men who are supposed to be upright citizens and irreproachable characters.

CITY CELEBRATES SPRING'S ADVENT

MERCHANTS VIE FOR PRIZES
AND FOR PRAISE OF THE VISITING FOLK

IT'S TO BE A MERRY NIGHT

Music, Merriment and Friendship
Will Welcome Country People
to County Seat

There will be a hot time in the old town on Friday night.

Although the hot time will be on tap throughout the day, the night will be hotter.

Oregon City's first "Spring Opening and Get Acquainted Event" is the occasion for the hot time. Music and merriment are the trimmings, good fellowship is a basic element and business is an incidental.

Everybody and his brother and sister are coming to Oregon City Friday. If Dobbin has the heaves they'll give the tin tizzie a shot of gas, or get out the old rowboat and paddle through the mud. They'll get here somehow. Then, too, there is a special train over the Willamette Valley Southern to bring a crowd from all along that line. Indeed, folks, it is to be a glorious time.

All the live merchants in Oregon City are in on the affair. There will be special features in every display window that amounts to much—and that includes practically all. There are to be prizes for window displays, there are to be living models, showing the new direct-from-Paris fashions, maybe some enterprising merchant will serve tea to the women folks.

Anyway, the spring opening and get-acquainted event is to be SOME celebration. If you have any doubt about it just glance over the advertisements in this issue of the Courier. See the wide awake merchants who are presenting their wares to you.

These firms are not asking you to buy from them tomorrow as much as they are asking you to pay them a social visit, asking you to come into their stores and shake them by the hand. Get acquainted. That is the idea behind the spring opening affair. The merchants want to know the people they are selling their goods to. They want to know the rural dwellers better than they do now in order to serve them better in the future.

This get-acquainted idea is a good one. People like to buy from merchants they know and merchants who do business honestly like to sell their goods to their friends better than to strangers. The plan is to make the buyers and the sellers friends. And the more people who come into Oregon City tomorrow the more friends Oregon City merchants will have.

The P. R. L. & P. Co. has added its mite to the gaiety of the evening by donating electric lights and several of the buildings are being decorated with streamers of electric globes. The service is without charge and Main street will make the Great White Way look pale by comparison. The Commercial club building, where guests in the city will be entertained, will be brightly illuminated.

Orchestras have been engaged by some of the merchants participating in the grand opening evening and the music that will ring in the ears of shoppers throughout the day will be the bargain counter tunes. But not all will be bargains. The new spring stocks have arrived in all the stores and a special effort will be made to display these.

That the merchants are serious in their determination to get acquainted with their patrons is attested by the fact that none of the stores will sell any of their goods after the closing hour in the evening, yet every one of them will be wide open and all the clerks will be on hand. During the evening hours patrons will visit the stores, inspect the stocks and chat to their hearts' content—but they can't buy goods.

Several of the stores have arranged for premiums for their visitors tomorrow night. Little tokens of remembrance will be given out and the entire evening will be devoted entirely to making patrons feel the welcome that is extended to them upon this occasion.

Aside from the program in the stores the Commercial club will have an active part in the spring opening. Bands will play on the streets, the show houses and club rooms will be open and hospitality will be written in big letters all about the town.

C. W. P. CO. COMPLAINS

The Crown-Willamette Paper company has filed a complaint at Washington, D. C., charging that the rate of $1.25 a hundred on wood pulp from that point to Portland is excessive to the extent that it exceeds 75 cents a hundred. The establishment of a reasonable rate and reparation for $1100 1/2 excess charges is asked.

MAN OF MANY FLAGS WANTS CITIZENSHIP

MANY APPLICATIONS FOR PAPERS
COME TO COURT NUMBER
BER ARE GERMANS

No one could truthfully call Mikael Stern a man without a country. The trouble seems to be with Mr. Stern that has too many countries. He wants to get rid of at least two of them and become a full-fledged American citizen. One of his countries is at war and the other is in the hot water of revolutionary activity—the peace and quietness of America appeal to Mr. Stern.

He is of Swedish birth, is this man of many flags. He came to the United States from Acaponeta, Mexico, and tells County Clerk Iva Harrington that he does not longer want to be a subject of King George V of Great Britain. Mr. Stern came to the United States on December 2, 1912, and on Tuesday he declared his intention of becoming a partner with Uncle Samuel. The man with too many countries is a miner. He immigrated from Sweden to Canada and there became a British subject. Later he went to Mexico to work in the mines and from there came to the United States. That's how he happens to be connected with so many nations.

Ernest Koster of West Linn Tuesday applied for a final certificate of citizenship. He is a native of Germany and 10 days after his arrival in America, in March, 1910, declared his intention. He is a machinist.

Siebschloessen, Germany, is the birthplace of Fred Moehne, who applied here Saturday for a final certificate of citizenship. Mr. Moehne, who is 65 years old, came to the United States from Canada in August, 1876, and took out his first papers in January, 1879. He is a farmer, living near Estacada, and is the father of 13 children, 11 of whom are living.

Griffith Griffiths is a native of Carnarvonshire, Wales, and has been in the United States since January 2, 1904. He secured his first papers in June 2, 1905, and applied Saturday for the final certificate. He is a farmer, and lives at Hoff.

John Nofzinger and Rudolph Adrian, natives of Germany, have applied for final certificates of citizenship. Mr. Nofzinger came to the United States on May 12, 1872, and received his first papers on May 17, 1913. He is a farmer in the Macksburg country. Mr. Adrian came to the United States on October 15, 1911, taking out his first papers almost immediately. He lives at West Linn.

Daniel McLaren, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, has applied for final certificate of citizenship. He came to America on April 1, 1880, and has been a logger in Oregon since 1903. He lives near Molalla and is the father of seven children.

TWO GO TO ASYLUM

Young Derelict Drank Patent Medicine and Firey Liniment

C. O. Holther was committed to the state hospital Thursday by Judge Anderson, following an examination which proved that the man's mentality had been seriously affected by constant use of alcohol. Holther, who is 28 years old, had been intoxicated for six weeks before his commitment, and in the absence of whisky, he has been drinking patent medicines and liniments. Holther lived in Oregon City.

William Krueger, of Milwaukie, was sent to the state hospital with Holther. Krueger is practically without mentality, although the cause of his insanity was not determined by his examiners. He is 60 years old and relatives say he has suffered since he was thrown from a horse 12 years ago.

JURYMEN CALLED

The March jury term will open here on March 26, when a number of minor cases will be disposed of in circuit court. The grand jury for the term will sit beginning March 19. The grand jury is made up of C. G. Stone, H. G. Ziegler, O. L. Hammond, Nat H. Scribner, J. W. Bennett, H. E. Straight and A. J. Johnson.

Studer is Pardon

Sheriff Wilson last week received notice of the pardon from the penitentiary of Phillip Studer, sent up from this county last year for chicken stealing. Mrs. Studer sent heavily signed petitions to the governor, pointing out the heavy sentence against her husband. Studer's home at Stringtown was raided when he was arrested last year and evidence of wholesale chicken stealing was uncovered. Studer was sentenced to a minimum of two years and his pardon is made conditional by Governor Withycombe.

Teachers Will Meet

The Clackamas County Teachers' association will hold its regular meeting at Milwaukie on March 17, in conjunction with the Schoolmasters' club of the county. Mrs. Barnum of Mount Pleasant is president of the Teachers' association and Professor J. R. Bowland is secretary.

BIG LOGAN MEET ENDS IN A TILT

SPLENDID MEAL WINS HEARTS OF OREGON CITY BUSINESS MEN

GOODNESS, HOW THEY ATE!

Impromptu Talk on Roads Rouses
Logan Grangers to Debate
Road Bond Issue

Near fireworks did not confine the joy at the Live Wire meeting with the good people of Harding grange at Logan on Tuesday evening. And the big feature of the joy program was the wonderful dinner served by the matrons of the community. Chicken, cake—impossible! It cannot be described.

The women veritably loaded the tables with tempting viands and won the hearts of 40 Oregon City business men who were guests at the grange hall. Ten automobiles carried the delegation to Logan and it was a willing army that attacked the splendid dinner. The women were praised for their culinary achievements and were given a vote of sincere thanks.

After the Wires had done justice to that dinner they were in a mood for any fray and had their feet not turned a little cold under the pressure that better judgment exerted upon them they would have had their desire for wordy battle entirely appeased. O. D. Eby, president of the Commercial club, started the action when he explained to the grangers that the Live Wires were not all of one opinion as to the merits of the proposed $6,000,000 bond issue and said there was no desire to debate the subject. But, he said, the Wires would debate if the grangers said the first word. It was the sign of battle. "We'll fight if you hit first," Mr. Eby had said, and forthwith one of the Logan men landed a blow.

B. T. McBain came back with a strong argument in favor of the bond issue and literally "spilled the beans." The debate that the Live Wires had wanted to avoid was on. When Mr. McBain had spoken his little piece, William Lillie, the Logan farmer-lawyer, came back at the speaker in a popularly humorous vein. Other grangers who spoke against the bonds were George Gerber and Louis Funk. The time of night was the only thing that saved the Wires from the oratorical onslaught of the farmers. The Logan farmers were loaded for debate and showed their disappointment at its absence.

Willard P. Hawley, Jr., sub-Trunk of the Live Wires, presided at the meeting. He called upon O. D. Eby, Senator Walter A. Dimick and County Judge H. S. Anderson. The judge outlined the status of the county's road business, touched upon the subject of bonds and told of the work the court was attempting to do for the rural communities. Senator Dimick reviewed the county division proposal that met with defeat in the senate at the last legislative session.

The evening's entertainment was featured by the delightful vocal solos of Miss Lillian Anderson, accomplished daughter of the county judge, and by Dr. Roy A. Prudden, who also sang. The Rev. J. W. MacCallum pronounced the invocation.

The Wires, to the last member, are glad that they were in a position to do justice to the spread put before them by the women of Harding grange. The only regret they have, aside from any unpleasantness that might creep under the skins of some farmers because of the talks made without the sanction of the Wires, is the fact that Harding grange women cannot furnish more of the regular luncheons of the organization.

YOUTHS ARRESTED

Break into Chautauqua Buildings and Steal from Grounds

With the arrest of Harry and Norman Dunmire and William Marx, Sheriff Wilson believes he has stopped the losses reported from Gladstone Chautauqua park within the past few weeks. H. E. Cross, owner of the park, reported that several of the Chautauqua buildings had been entered and that valuable tools had been stolen from Mack Rivers, who was employed at the park by Mr. Cross. The trio arrested are 14, 15 and 17 years old respectively. The boys turned over to the officials the tools they had taken and confessed to their theft. Articles taken from the park buildings have not been recovered.

In the Divorce Court

Elsie Barbur charges Orange L. Barbur with cruelty in a divorce petition filed here Thursday. The couple was married at Vancouver, Wash., on November 30, 1915. Mrs. Barbur alleges that her husband did not properly support her and attempted several times to force her to lead a life of shame. She asks the restoration of her former name, Elsie Blood. Adolph and Minnie Woelm were divorced Thursday, a default decree going to Mr. Woelm.

FISH FAMILY ASKS DAMAGES OF COUNTY

ACCIDENT AT NEW ERA LAST YEAR RESULTS IN SUITS
FOR $4400

Clackamas county is asked to pay the damages resulting from an accident to the Fish family on the Pacific highway south of New Era last August, in complaints filed in Judge Campbell's court here yesterday. The damages sum up, according to the complaints, $4400, including hospital bills for the injured.

Separate complaints were filed by the three members of the family in the accident. Frank E. Fish, driver of the automobile, escaped from the accident uninjured when his machine went over the bank. He wants $400 for the repair of the machine. Mrs. Alice Etta Fish wants $2000 for personal injuries sustained. The complaint says that Mrs. Fish suffered broken bones and a nervous shock. Amy Fish, a daughter, seeks to recover $2000. She alleges she suffered several broken bones and cuts about the body. Her left leg was mangled, the complaint says. Frank Fish has been appointed her guardian for the purposes of the suit.

The three complaints against the county are similar. Each alleges that the Pacific highway at the point where the accident occurred was in a defective and dangerous condition. They say a cut in the road had been filled in, leaving a 12-foot bank on a curve. The edge of the bank was hidden in the ferns, it is charged, and when Mr. Fish tried to avoid another car on the road he drove close to the edge. The fill gave way and the car crashed to the bottom of the fill, resulting in the serious injury of the mother and daughter and damaging the car. The accident occurred on August 10, last.

OLD BILL IS PAID

County Book Auditors Accept Court's Figure After Much Delay

A bill for auditing the books of Clackamas county in 1914 was ordered paid by the county court Friday. E. H. Collis & Co. of Portland audited the books and presented a claim for $1023.85. The court cut $400 off the claim and issued the warrant in February, 1915. The warrant was refused by the company and has been on file in County Clerk Harrington's office for two full years and has been cancelled. In the meantime the state legislature has ordered the county courts owing similar bills to pay what they thought a just amount.

Friday the Collis company presented its claim again for the $1023.85. After debating the question the court ordered a warrant drawn in the sum of $623.85, exactly the same as was made in the first place, and the company accepted payment.

BOXERS ARE FAST

Soldier Gets Number of Martin Schultz, Oregon City Pugilist

The feature of the smoker card of the Falls City Athletic club Thursday night was the six-round battle between Martin Schultz and Soldier Jack McDonald. The bout was a merry slugfest and the referee's decision in favor of McDonald was popular. The headline bout between Tommy Clark and Jack Wagner was declared a draw after a fast six rounds. It took Joe Farrell of Oregon City three rounds to show his colors to Frankie Warren of Portland, and the fight was stopped after Warren had taken all the punishment he could stand. Ping Bodie and Eddie Olson fought a draw that lacked fight and Carl Martin of Oregon City went to a draw with Jimmie Moscow of Portland.

DOWNY LOT REFUSED

West Linn Voters Support Council at Special Election

The voters of West Linn at a special election held last week rejected by a large majority the proposition to purchase from James Downey a site for the proposed fire house. Downey secured his hearing at the polls through initiative petition and lost by 201 votes to 56. He offered a lot for sale to the city and the purchase was not approved by the council, which authorized the purchase of another site at a lower figure. The councilmen of West Linn campaigned against the object of the special election yesterday.

COURT IS PETITIONED

Road Matters Will be Brought up by Taxpayers of Several Districts

At its April term, the Clackamas county court will be presented with petitions from at least three groups of taxpayers asking, in two cases, the location of new county roads, and in another the vacation of a roadway. The Noland's Mill and Gribble Prairie road is the subject of a petition to be presented by taxpayers who want to establish a uniform width of 40 feet. Another petition asks for the creation of a county road over what is known as the Huggill route, and the residents along a certain section of the Oswalt road want the road vacated.

ALBRIGHT VOTED OUT OF COUNCIL

MATES ON THE CIVIC SHIP AS ONE IN EXPELLING AN ERRANT KNIGHT

IS TO BE TRIED SATURDAY

Early Meeting of Aldermen Will Consider Successor to Ousted
Member

A climax was written to the dramatic and novel career of John F. Albright as a city councilman on Friday afternoon, when Mayor Hackett called a special meeting of the aldermen and the errant knight was expelled from his seat by unanimous vote.

Albright was in his seat at the special meeting and heard himself excommunicated by several of those who have been in the body with him through the past few years. H. M. Templeton led the attack upon Albright, and when a resolution of expulsion was presented all voted for it save E. B. Andrews, whose right to vote was in doubt. Albright was represented at the meeting by Joseph E. Hedges, who made a plea for his client.

Public sentiment is said to have been growing against Albright for several weeks, or since he was arrested for driving his big automobile on the sidewalk in front of a theater while intoxicated. The council considered that Albright had added insult to injury when he was arrested last Thursday night on the charge of intoxication and spent the night in jail.

Until Albright came into money some time ago he was connected with the local paper mills. He has been a member of the city council for five years and his second term would have expired next January. When he received money he bought a big automobile, and his career in the courts started immediately. He was arrested several times in Portland for mixing up with the traffic and prohibition laws. The resolution passed by the council Friday says that Albright had attended several meetings of that body while intoxicated.

It will be the duty of the council at an early meeting to elect a successor to Albright, who, with H. M. Templeton and F. A. Metzner, represents the first ward. Voters in the first ward will recommend Thomas Randall and W. L. Mulvey for the vacant seat and others may be designated for the council's consideration.

Twice Albright's trial has been set by Recorder Loder and at present is ready to be heard on Saturday afternoon. The former councilman will tell his story to a jury of six men, if another postponement is not granted, at that time. He is said to be ready to base his contest of the case upon a plea of not guilty. Because of Mr. Albright's position and influence in the city reports have been in circulation that the authorities would bury the case if possible. Recorder Loder and City Prosecutor Story are firm in their denial of the rumor.

Gets Judgment Against Park

A judgment for more than $7000, with attorney fees in the sum of $300, was signed Saturday in favor of John L. Bowman in his suit against the Mount Hood Hotel company and Donald Bodley. The judgment carries with it a first lien upon the company's property, the Arrah Wana park and hotel, in the Mount Hood country. The case went by default to Mr. Bowman, who has a summer home adjoining the park property.

Germans Want Citizenship

Otto Schmießer and Joseph Schmidt have applied for final citizenship papers, and their names have been filed until the next hearing. Mr. Schmießer was born in Germany, and has been in the United States since May 1, 1881. He has been a resident of Oregon since 1910, and is a farmer in the Carus country. Joseph Schmidt was born in Bavaria, and came to the United States March 15, 1886. He has been in Oregon about 25 years.

Concord Teachers Meet

The Parent-Teacher association of Concord met at the schoolhouse on Friday afternoon and the question of having a directed play at the school grounds for the children this summer was discussed and will be voted upon at next meeting. Miss Lobdel, a passenger agent for the O.-W. R. & N., gave the club a talk on "Do's and Don'ts" for the traveler.

Sues Because of Injuries

Ernest O. Froese is suing the Crown-Willamette Paper company for $2999.99. The suit is brought because of accidents sustained by Froese while in the employ of the company. On October 11, 1916, 650 pounds of pulp fell upon him in such a way that his knee, he alleges, has been permanently injured.

Get acquainted with Oregon City merchants; they are a fine lot of folks to know.
