NORTH PART OF MORROW HARD HIT

FARMERS LEAVE THEIR HOMES AND TAKE TO HILLS FOR PROTECTION FROM STORM.

PROPERTY LOSS HEAVY

Towns in Several Valleys Are Inundated, Bridges Are Weakened, Slides Cover Roads, Service of Trains Delayed.

HEPPNER, Ore., June 26.—The entire northern part of Morrow county experienced, shortly after noon today, the worst hail, rain and wind storm since 1903, when Heppner was practically destroyed.

Huge clouds which had been gathering for the past two days broke at 1 o'clock over the entire section, the two worst affected parts being Rhea Creek and Sand Hollow. Many farmers in this district were forced to leave their homes and take to the hills. On Sand Hollow the wind was strong enough to blow over several farm houses and barns.

As yet it is impossible to estimate the damage, but the property loss alone will run into many thousands of dollars. The hail storm continued for about 15 minutes, beating all the fall wheat into the ground. Some of the hailstones measured three and one-half inches.

THE DALLES, Ore., June 26.—The first slides in 25 years occurred yesterday on Tygh valley grade on the Dalles-California highway near here. The slides, which were caused by an immense waterspout, threw thousands of yards of earth on both the old and the new grades.

HERMISTON, Ore., June 26.—A waterspout occurred on the Upper Butte creek today at the Antone Vetter ranch, 27 miles south of Hermiston. Fifteen feet of water rushed down the Butte creek channel, which is dry at this time of the year, and spread over the valley three to four feet. Much damage was done to property and livestock, but no lives were lost.

PAVING PLANT WILL GO TO WILL'S PIT

The county court Tuesday decided to move the county paving plant from Parkplace to the Will's gravel pit in the Milwaukie district and begin the improvement of the Milwaukie-Sellwood road as soon as the plant is put up. The Milwaukie-Sellwood road was improved with bituminous macadam a year and a half ago, but the road failed to stand up under traffic owing to unfortunate weather conditions under which it was laid.

The Will's pit is considered an ideal location for the plant. The machinery can be installed in such a position that much labor can be saved in handling materials, a condition which will reduce the cost of the pavement.

COMMITTEE VOTE IS 32 TO 6 FOR HUGHES SUPPORT

PROGRESSIVE PARTY ENDS IN CHICAGO AS IT BEGAN, AMID MUCH STORM.

ROOSEVELT FINALLY DECLINES NOMINATION BY BULL MOOSE

Charles Evans Hughes Sends Letter to T. R. Applauding His Stand for "Out-and-Out, 100 Per cent" Kind of Americanism.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Charles E. Hughes, Republican nominee for president, sent a telegram to O. K. Davis, secretary of the Progressive national committee, tonight, welcoming the support of the Progressive party and arraigning the present administration for its "weakness and ineffectuality."

In making public the contents of the telegram, Mr. Hughes also gave out a letter he had written to Colonel Roosevelt in which he declared that the nation was indebted to the colonel "for the quickening of the national spirit and for the demand for an out-and-out, 100 per cent Americanism."

CHICAGO, June 26.—By a vote of 32 to 6, with nine members declining to vote, the national committee of the Progressive party today, at the end of a stormy session, endorsed Charles E. Hughes for president and the Bull Moose party practically went out of existence as a national political organization.

The fight in the committee to endorse Hughes was led by George W. Perkins, of New York; James G. Garfield, of Ohio, and Chester H. Russell, of California.

The radical element in the committee, represented by Matthew Hale, of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, of New York; Henry F. Cochems, of Wisconsin, and John M. Parker, of Louisiana, vigorously protested against the endorsement of any candidate for president and fought the majority at every step of the proceedings. The majority's first move was to insist on an open meeting of the committee, which it won after a number of the committeemen, led by John M. Parker, of Louisiana, bolted the meeting.

After Secretary Oscar King Davis read Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's letter, in which he finally declined the presidential nomination of the party and urged that Charles E. Hughes be supported in order to defeat President Wilson, the committee voted to accept the colonel's declination and took a recess for luncheon.

BOYSEN DROPS FIGHT FOR SECOND TRIAL

The failure of attorneys for Fritz Boyesen, the Milwaukie hotel man who was convicted recently in the circuit court on a charge of violating the prohibition law, to file a motion for a new trial by Tuesday night is taken to mean that Boyesen has given up a fight for a new trial. The time given to file a motion for a new trial ended Tuesday night, but the Milwaukie hotel proprietor still has 10 days to prepare a bill of exceptions, the first step in appealing to the supreme court. It is generally believed that Boyesen will appeal.

Portland—Work on the million dollar postoffice will start in August.

VILLA AND CARRANZA LEAVE G COMPANY TO TAKE UP SIMPLE LIFE

MASCOTS GIVEN OREGON CITY SOLDIERS PROVE TOO LIVELY FOR MILITARY CAREER.

CAMP WITHYCOMBE, Ore., June 23.—(Special.)—Villa and Carranza, the two cub bear mascots presented by Oregon City people to members of G company, Third Oregon Infantry, had a short but exciting career at the mobilization camp. They were presented to the company by a delegation of county seat citizens Thursday evening, and Friday morning the two little bears departed for New Era, where they will go into seclusion on a ranch until the return of the Oregon City boys from active service.

The men of G company would have been glad to keep their two mascots and take them south with them, but powers that be are higher in military affairs than the wishes of the men pointed out that it would be better for the morals of the company if the bears remained behind.

This action was due chiefly to the dispositions of the two cubs, which proved to be as typically "Mex" as their names. All Thursday night and through the before-dawn darkness of Friday morning the two mascots kept the camp busy and awake. Villa whined, rattled her chains, and generally made the night hideous with bear-disturbances, and Carranza escaped twice from his moorings and had to be pursued by members of the company and recaptured. The mascots were also looked upon as too great a peril to the company commissariat, and so the order for their banishment was regrettably issued.

SOLDIERS ALL TAGGED IN CASE OF TROUBLE

G COMPANY MEN GO THROUGH UNPLEASANT ORDEAL, BUT DON'T LOSE GOOD SPIRITS.

CAMP WITHYCOMBE, Ore., June 27.—(Special.)—One of the unpleasant features of "preparedness" was undergone by members of G company today, when the men gathered about the tables in the mess tent and watched the preparation of identification tags for themselves. These little tags are metal disks about the size of a dollar, have a hole near one edge through which a stout strand of woven linen cord is passed. This cord is tied about each soldier's neck, and the only way the tag can be removed after it is once put on is to cut the wearer's head off.

Each tag bears the name of the wearer, his official number, and the name of the military unit to which he belongs. The tags are designed to make possible the identification of dead or wounded soldiers, no matter how badly they may be disfigured. And the tags are not removed from the men until their enlist expires or unless they should be killed and buried on the field of battle.

While these tags were being stamped, and attached to their wearers, members of G company were more serious than usual, for the little metal disks brought home to every man the part of service in the present crisis. However, none of the boys asked to have the cords holding the tags in place made extra long—as it is rumored that some members of other units did. The idea of the long cords was to make possible the keeping the tag over the heart, as a sort of special armor-plate.

In fact, so that the seriousness of the situation should not be too oppressive, members of G company joked a little bit about the tags.

"What's the use of putting my name on that thing?" Daniels, the chief cook of the company, asked. "Just mark it 'Scotty,' and then they'll know who is meant."

Another member of the company said he didn't care to have his name on his tag at all. "Leave my name off and just put on my number," he said. "If I'm killed the number will be enough to identify me, and if I'm not killed I'll make a name for myself."

COMPANY INITIALS SPELL OUT WARNING

There is no reason in the world why K-L-L-M could not be pronounced "kill'em" or why L-K-M does not spell "lick'em."

The third battalion of the Third regiment, which passed through Oregon City at 6 o'clock Tuesday night, is composed of companies M, L, K, and J of the Oregon National Guard. If the Mexicans are wise enough to twist around these initials, they should be warned of the fighting qualities of the Oregon soldier boys.

5000 EAGER PEOPLE LINE TRACK WHEN TROOPS PASS

LOCAL FOLK WAIT FOUR HOURS TO SAY FAREWELL TO MEMBERS OF HOME COMPANY.

FLAGS WAVED BY ALL

Train of 23 Cars Carries Second Battalion and Supplies Towards the Border—Many Gifts Given the Khaki Clad Travelers.

Oregon City's soldiers have gone to the front.

Just where they are going only the war department knows, and what they will do when they get there is still shrouded in the mystery of fate. But one thing is certain, and that is that Oregon City people think a lot of their soldier boys, for this was demonstrated Wednesday afternoon and evening, when five thousand people stood along the Southern Pacific tracks from Fifth to Ninth street, waiting four hours for the troop special bearing the local contingent of troops to come along.

Every vantage point was black with people. They stood upon the bridges over the track, they massed on the stairways leading to the viaducts, they lined up ten deep along the right-of-way, and some of them even clambered up the side of the bluff and up on the elevator's steel frame. A very few of them found seats on railings and fences; most of them simply stood—and so standing for four hours, part of the time in a drizzling rain, they paid their tribute to the brave men of G company.

False Call is Sounded.

Arrangements had been made by O. D. Eby, president of the Commercial club, to have the fire bell sounded when the troop train left Camp Withycombe. Through a mistake the bell clanged out at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. While its clarion strokes were still ringing over the city, practically every man, woman and child within reach of its deep, metallic notes dropped whatever task was at hand and hurried to the railroad tracks and the depot. And there they stood, waiting—waiting—waiting until after 8 o'clock, when the special train finally pulled into the station and made a brief stop.

The troop train was scheduled to leave Camp Withycombe at 6 o'clock.

LOCAL SOLDIER LADS ARE WELL CARED FOR NEWSPAPER WOMAN FINDS CAMP OF G COMPANY MODEL OF UNUSUAL CLEANLINESS.

(By Nan Cochran.)

CAMP WITHYCOMBE, Ore., June 24.—(Special.)—The quarters of G company at the state mobilization camp are most attractive and neat in appearance and are considered among the most sanitary on the grounds. The kitchen and mess tent would make any housewife "sit up and take notice," the spotless condition of these two departments being highly praised by hundreds of visitors each day.

Charles Daniels, familiarly known as "Scotty" in Oregon City, has charge of the mess end of things in G company's camp, and his assistants are the Turner brothers. "Scotty" enlisted in the company a few days ago and before that served in the United States navy, so he brings with him much experience in caring for the needs of the men.

"Scotty" is a firm believer in "preparedness," and after each meal he finishes, he starts to work getting ready for the next one. Thus in the evening you may find, in the store tent, potatoes and other edibles already prepared for the morning meal.

Though the boys are well fed, they are always hungry for fresh fruit, particularly cherries. Any citizens having spare fruit will confer a favor upon the boys by sending it to camp, and if this is inconvenient, it will do as well to inform members of the company, and the cherries will be picked by the soldiers and their friends.

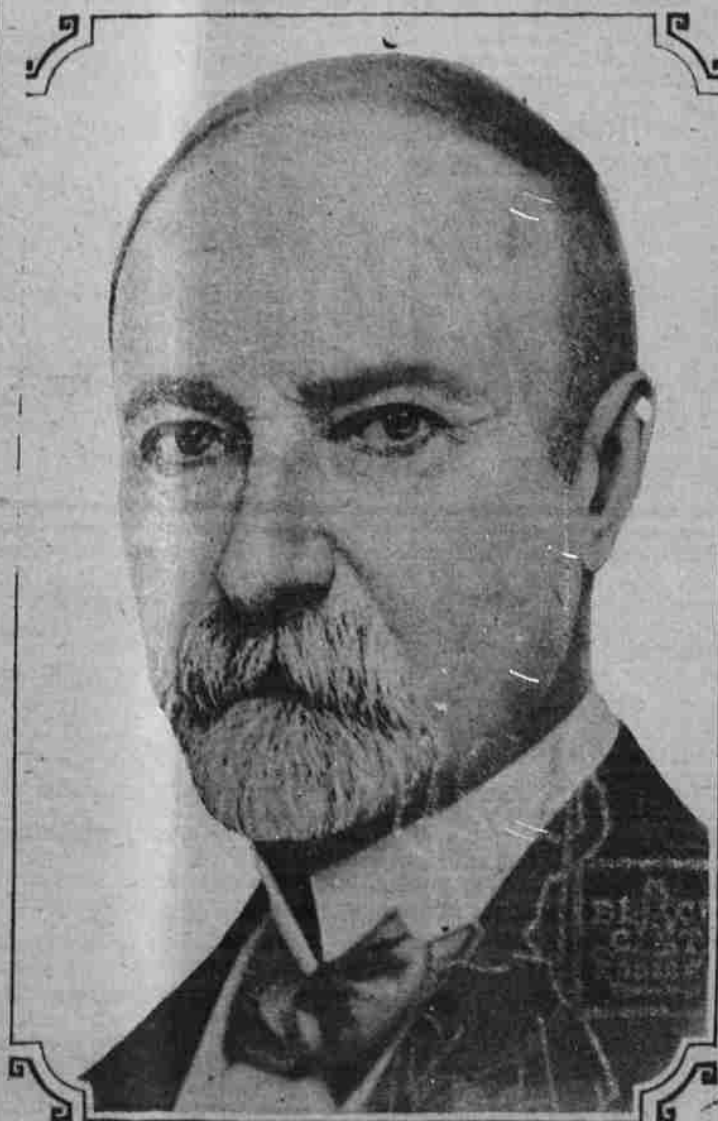

The boys are also very fond of pie and anybody who desires to gain the lasting regard of the members of G company can do so easily by sending them one or more "pies like mother used to make." Many pies have been sent to the soldiers already, but the boys say there is always room for more.

F. E. GOODMAN ASKS FOR SECOND TRIAL

Oregon City.—(Special to Press.)—F. E. Goodman, the Gladstone councilman against whom Ben Stark recently secured a judgment for $1000, for alienation of Mrs. Stark's affections, Monday filed a motion for a new trial, alleging that Circuit Judge Campbell erred in admitting certain testimony. T. A. Hayes, a Portland attorney, filed the papers Monday for Mr. Goodman, although Stone & Moulton have appeared in other actions.

An answer to the recent suit of Stark to set aside the deeds by Goodman conveying his property to his wife made two days after the alienation suit was filed, was also filed by Goodman Monday. He denies that the property was conveyed for the purpose of avoiding payment in case a judgment was secured against him and asks that the suit be dismissed.

REPUBLICAN NOMINEE FOR VICE-PRESIDENT

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS

Here is the latest picture of Charles Warren Fairbanks, Republican nominee for vice-president and running mate of Charles Evans Hughes. He was the favorite son of Indiana for presidency but was also mentioned for the nomination for vice-president before the convention, a position he held from 1905 to 1909 under Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Fairbanks is known as a man of conservative opinions and steadiness. He was chairman of the committee on resolutions of the 1912 Republican convention. Like many other presidents and presidential possibilities, Mr. Fairbanks is an Ohioan by birth. He is 64 years old, a lawyer by profession and served two terms in the United States senate. His home is in Indianapolis.

OREGON'S FIRST DETACHMENT OF TROOPS DEPARTS

THIRD INFANTRY BATTALION IS ON WAY TO CALIFORNIA BORDER FOR GUARD DUTIES.

KISSES, TEARS AND CHEERS ARE FEATURES OF PLATFORM SCENE

Second Battalion Scheduled to Leave Wednesday, and Camp Withycombe Will Soon Be Deserted—Preparations Continue.

CAMP WITHYCOMBE, Ore., June 27.—(Special.)—Exactly at half past five—one hour after the train was scheduled to leave—the first troop special from Oregon pulled out for the south from Clackamas station today, carrying aboard it officers and men of the third battalion, Oregon National Guard, consisting of I, L, K and J companies. A crowd of several hundred civilians and about as many soldiers lined both sides of the track as the troop special pulled out, and cheered the men to the echo. And there was also a good deal of weeping.

The train is scheduled to run to San Diego, where the men will report to regular army officers, and then take a detail—probably on the southern California border. On its run to the south the special will have right of way over all other traffic on the Southern Pacific, and it is expected that close to record time will be made.

Departure is Delayed.

The first Oregon troop special was scheduled to leave at half past four. At that time it was loaded, and the soldiers were waving final goodbyes from the windows to the frenzied crowd outside. Shortly after this the train moved—but it moved north, and took a siding so a freight coming from the south could get past. Then it pulled into the station again, and until half past five the train dodged back and forth over the siding switches, while the people gathered to watch it depart amused themselves in all sorts of ways. One of the chief forms of amusement among the members of the fair sex present was kissing soldiers, and some of the boys in khaki probably were kissed more often between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m. on Tuesday, June 27, 1916, than they had been in all their former life.

But Few Men Rejected.

But two of the companies that departed on the train had been through federal physical examination—M and L—so there is some doubt as to whether all the members of the other companies will get a chance at border service. Owing to the haste in dispatching troops physical examination was waived after L and M companies had been examined, and the balance of the Oregon troops will have to face this ordeal when they get to California. However, as the requirements in the Oregon guard have been stiffened during the past year, it is not believed that many of the men who got by the test of mustering in will be rejected. In some of the companies mustering officers rejected as high as ten men—the causes being insufficient weight, poor teeth, heart trouble or other forms of sickness.

The second battalion, consisting of E, F, G and H companies, and Battery A of the artillery are scheduled to leave for the south tomorrow night at 6 o'clock, on a special train. Like today's special, the train will be composed entirely of steel baggage, tourist and standard sleeping coaches, and will have the right of way over all ordinary traffic. As this train winds its flight towards the border, it will pause for about five minutes in Oregon City, to give county seat folk a chance to say a final good-bye to the local boys.

CARRANZA MEETS U.S. DEMANDS

CAVALRYMEN ARE NOW ON WAY NORTH TO BOUNDARY UNDER HEAVY MEXICAN GUARD.

FUNSTON GETS REPORT

23 Negro Captives and Scout Spillsbury Expected to Arrive Today—Arms and Accoutrements Also on Way from Chihuahua.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 28.—General Funston received tonight a report from Brigadier General George Bell Jr., at El Paso, which stated General Bell had been notified by Mexican Consul Garcia that the American prisoners taken at Carrizal now are on their way north to Juarez and probably would arrive there tomorrow morning.

According to the report, Consul Garcia had received word from General Jacinto Trevino that the American prisoners, with their arms and accoutrements, were to be delivered at once to the American authorities.

The report was forwarded at once to Washington by General Funston.

EL PASO, Texas, June 28.—President Wilson's peremptory demand on General Carranza for the release of the American prisoners held in Chihuahua penitentiary today met with compliance.

Late this afternoon it was announced from the commandancia in Juarez that a message had been transmitted over the Mexican telegraph which said that the 23 negroes of the Tenth cavalry captured at Carrizal, with Lem H. Spillsbury, Mormon scout, had been removed from prison.

The message added that the men, with their arms and accoutrements, under heavy guard, had been placed on a Mexican Central train bound for Juarez, where they are expected to arrive tomorrow morning.

The telegram conveying this news was addressed to General George Bell Jr., commander of the El Paso base. It was signed by General Jacinto Trevino, commander of the Mexican military district of the northwest, whose headquarters are at Chihuahua City.

Mexican officials tonight were happy over the turn in events. They declared that this would mean a lessening of the tension of the last few days.

MILLS CLOSE FOR TIME

All mills of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company were closed Wednesday afternoon and evening so that the workers could gather at the Southern Pacific tracks to bid farewell to members of G company who were leaving for the front. The big mill whistle blew for quitting when the first report came in that the troop train would arrive soon after 4 o'clock, and after the men had been called back to work when the error was discovered, the whistle blew for another cessation of toil later in the day when the train actually came along.

The Hawley employees swelled the crowd gathered at the depot very materially, and the men were enthusiastic in the greeting they gave the soldiers, many of whom had been former companions in the great industrial plant.

Sergeant Honors Patriotic Mother

CAMP WITHYCOMBE, Ore., June 23.—(Special.)—All is not glory and fun at Oregon's mobilization camp for the National Guard. Occasionally an incident occurs that brings the stern reality of war close to the boy in khaki, and then for a moment there are moist eyes and thoughtful faces. Such an incident happened this afternoon.

In one of the open company mess tents sat a gray-haired woman, all alone on the hard wooden benches silently watching the awkward squad just outside being put repeatedly through the manual of arms. For an hour and a half the drill sergeant labored with the men, and finally he singled out two, placed them before the squad, and had them go through the gun movement alone.

"There," he said, "that's the way to do it. These two boys have learned it; why can't the rest of you do the same. Now we'll try it again."

While the balance of the squad made renewed efforts to master the movements required of them, the two who had been picked as examples walked over and took their places on either side of the silent woman, who had sat and watched them for so long. They said but little to her, and she said nothing to them—she simply looked at them, as if her eyes would never see enough of them.

Later the drill sergeant, noting the group, came over himself.

"Your boys will make fine soldiers, madam," he said.

The quiet, still woman, with the grey hair, raised her eyes to his and smiled wanly.

"They ought to, sergeant," she said, "their father died fighting for his country in Cuba, and their grandfather was killed at Gettysburg."

The drill sergeant squared his shoulders, stood stiffly before the woman, and saluted. And as he turned away he rubbed his hand across his eyes—perhaps some dust had blown into them.
