

Captain Williams Calls Volunteers For New Regiment

One company of the proposed Fourth Oregon infantry regiment of volunteers, plans for the recruiting of which have been already formulated by Judge Gantenbein and other Spanish-American war veterans, will be recruited in Oregon City, according to announcement made Friday evening by Captain H. E. Williams, of the old Second Oregon. Captain Williams, who is himself a Spanish-American war veteran, with an honorable record for service in the Philippines, will command the local company of the new volunteer regiment, and says that already he is assured that the Oregon City unit will have at least 50 charter members.

The volunteer regiment will be recruited at once, plans for forming companies in Portland and other principal cities of the state having already been approved by Adjutant General George White and members of the state military staff. It is planned to offer the services of the new regiment to the government just as soon as it is mustered in.

Captain Williams has already received informal orders to organize a local company for this volunteer regiment, and says that possibly within 48 hours a recruiting office will be opened in the county seat. As members of the Third Oregon infantry, now at the mobilization camp, will be equipped with new guns and other accoutrements as soon as they are mustered into the federal service, it is believed that the entire regimental equipment of the present militia regiment will be available for the volunteer troops. This will greatly simplify organization of the new regiment, which if it is taken into federal service will be known as the Fourth Oregon volunteers.

Enthusiasm for enlistment in the volunteer organization is high, in spite of the fact that no formal announcement of the formation of the regiment has yet been made. Ever since Portland newspapers told of the plans of Judge Gantenbein to organize the unit, local veterans of the Spanish-American war have been hoping that opportunity would be offered them and their friends to offer their services to the government, so the announcement that Captain Williams would form a company has been gladly received.

Personally Captain Williams is extremely popular with the younger men of the community, and the fact that he has made an enviable record in active service in years gone by will bring many recruits to the colors. Even if the proposed Fourth Oregon infantry should not be needed at the border or in Mexico, it is believed that the general enthusiasm of the times for matters military will bring a substantial number of men to the colors for home guard duty or for any other service that may be found necessary.

DAMASCUS HOPES FOR RAILWAY TO PORTLAND SOON

ACTIVITY OF SURVEYORS AND LOCATION CREWS NEAR ARDERWALD INTERESTS.

What appears to be a first class railroad mystery has people of Ardenwald and Minthorne addition of Milwaukee guessing these days. From all appearances it is believed that plans are afoot to give this section of the county direct transportation facilities with Portland, yet nobody seems to have discovered as yet whether the proposed line is to be a branch of the Carver road or an offshoot of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company's lines.

For years people of this district have believed that some day a railroad would be built running from their neighborhood into Portland, but small hope of any actual developments has been held. Recently, however, surveyors and right-of-way agents have appeared in the district, and the belief has developed that the line would extend through the Sycamore and Pleasant Valley neighborhoods to the city limits at the Multnomah county line. The surveyors are reported to have said that an almost perfect grade has been found and that only one trestle would be needed to carry the line into Portland.

It is said that the line may be extended beyond the northern part of Milwaukee up towards Damascus and into the timber country beyond, which would assure it ample traffic. J. D. Lee is among those most interested in the proposition, and L. A. Chambers is chairman of a farmers' committee that is fostering the road. In the near future a meeting will be held at Damascus to arrange some definite plan of financial aid for the new road, and at that time it is believed that the mystery of the backing of the proposed line will be cleared up.

O. C. WILL SELL WEST LINN BONDS TO RAISE $40,000

PROBLEM OF FINANCING CONSTRUCTION OF NEW RESERVOIR SOLVED BY BOARD.

PLAN OF ISSUING WARRANTS NOT FOLLOWED AND INTEREST SAVED

Money Will Be Secured Without Issuing More Bonds or Giving Out Additional Securities Drawing Six Per Cent Interest.

The Oregon City water board has solved the problem of financing the construction of a second reservoir, which will provide needed storage. Reservoir No. 2, as it is officially known, will be located near the present reservoir, and will be several times its capacity.

Through the sale of the site of the old filtering and pumping station to the Hawley Pulp & Paper company and because of the surplus left after building the South Fork pipeline, the warrant indebtedness of the water department was practically wiped out. The only debt of the department is in bonds, excepting about $9000 in outstanding warrants. The board wanted to raise $40,000, the estimated cost of the new reservoir, without issuing more warrants or calling upon the voters to authorize another bond issue.

Oregon City issued $375,000 worth of bonds to build the South Fork pipeline a year ago. West Linn bought a one-third interest in the line, paying Oregon City $116,000 in bonds, drawing 6 per cent. Under the original plans, Oregon City was to hold these West Linn securities, collect the interest and the principal, the money in this way secured used to aid in meeting payment on the Oregon City $375,000 issue.

The water board will sell $40,000 of these West Linn bonds, using the money to build the new reservoir. The bonds draw 5 per cent interest and will be taken up as soon as possible. The issue is of the serial variety, the first bonds being due in about four years.

The plan of selling West Linn bonds instead of issuing more warrants will result in a saving as the warrants draw 6 per cent interest and the bonds 5.

GRAHAM HEIRS FILE ANOTHER SUIT FOR WILSONVILLE FARM

THREE MEMBERS OF FAMILY SUE BROTHERS AND SISTERS FOR SHARE OF BIG ESTATE.

Another suit among the heirs in the John Wallace Graham estate, consisting of 309.98 acres two miles from Wilsonville valued at $30,000, was filed in the circuit court Monday.

Kate B. Chance, Sarah M. Graham and Rose B. Graham are the plaintiffs in the suit and Robert B. Graham, John W. Graham, William W. Graham, Little A. Young and Jane M. Galtbreath all children, and Marion C. Young son-in-law of the late John Wallace Graham, are defendants.

A former and somewhat similar suit several years ago was dismissed in the circuit court, and the ruling of the lower court upheld by the supreme court when an appeal was taken.

The plaintiffs allege that John Wallace Graham made an agreement with Marion and Little Young, April 5, 1897, whereby the elder Graham conveyed the property to Mr. and Mrs. Young, with the understanding that it should be given back to him as soon as mortgages against the property were cleared off. Through the sale of part of the land and through the crops sold, the mortgages were cleared off, the plaintiffs maintain, but the land was not needed back to the elder Mr. Graham. On December 3, 1899, John Wallace Graham died, and since then Mr. and Mrs. Young have retained possession of the land.

The plaintiffs declare that at the time the first suit was filed, the other heirs promised to give them $5000 in cash and property, but they have failed to make this payment.

The agreement between Mr. and Mrs. Young and John Wallace Graham has been lost or destroyed, the plaintiffs allege.

Robert B. Graham, one of the children, is alleged to have told Sarah M. Graham that in case a suit was filed in an effort to get a share of their father's estate, illegitimate children would be brought to light, now living in southern Oregon, and that their father's name would be disgraced. She claims that this assertion was entirely untrue and made with the aim of preventing her from filing an action. The three children who filed the suit asks that the deed conveying the property to Mr. and Mrs. Young be set aside, that they be forced to give a complete accounting of their handling of the property and the six heirs who have not received their share of John Wallace Graham's estate be given the property.

The porch was littered with shavings made by a chisel used to cut in back of the lock and the lock itself bore evidence of a file having been used upon it. Two men sleep in a rear room, but they heard no noise.

Citizens Turn Out To Honor Soldiers From County Seat

Oregon City paid a notable tribute to the patriotism of its citizens who are members of G company, Third Oregon infantry, Tuesday night, when a banquet was tendered the soldiers at Willamette hall and a public reception was held in honor of the military men on the court house lawn. While the affair was participated in by the people of the entire city, its details were in charge of committees from Meade Relief Corps No. 18 and the Live Wires of the Commercial club.

Members of G company were brought to the county seat from Camp Withycombe just before 7 o'clock, local automobilists offering the use of their cars for this purpose. At Willamette hall the soldiers were welcomed by the Pioneer fire and drum corps of the Grand Army of the Republic and by the Moose band, both of which organizations furnished stirring music. Several hundred people also lined the sidewalks in front of the hall and cheered the troops as they entered.

At the banquet Captain H. E. Williams, of the old Second Oregon infantry, presided, and called upon Mrs. George A. Harding, chairman of the relief corps committee, to say a few words. Mrs. Harding congratulated the guardsmen on their devotion to their country and wished them the best of fortune while on border patrol. Judge Campbell also made a few remarks and Captain Lowell E. Blanchard thanked the ladies and citizens for their efforts on behalf of the local company. The company then marched to the house, where such a crowd had gathered that the exercises were held out of doors instead of in the big court room as was originally planned. Captain Williams again presided and introduced Captain J. P. Apperson, a Civil war hero, who delivered a stirring address to the men. Judge J. U. Campbell followed him and gave the men some earnest advice upon the wisdom of leaving strong drink alone while they were in the field. The judge pointed out that the local soldiers were going to a country where there would be every temptation to drink, but urged the men to shun all beverages that would tend to befog their wits and make them liable to commit deeds for which they would later be sorry.

Captain Blanchard also spoke a few words, and First Lieutenant W. R. Logus made a strong appeal to the people to care for the wives and families of the soldiers who had answered the president's call and gone to the front. "We are doing our duty in answering our country's call for men," said Lieut. Logus, "and in doing this we are believing that you will also do your duty and care for the wives and families of the men who will get but $15 a month for their services at the front."

The Fallsarians quartet sang a couple of songs, and there was a general reception for the soldiers, citizens pressing forward to shake hands with the enlisted men and to assure them of their good will. Following three rousing cheers for the flag and three more for the members of the company, the soldiers boarded the automobiles again and returned to Camp Withycombe, to get a good night's sleep before entraining Wednesday night for the south.
