

FAT AND FORTY.

Some Hints For Stout People Who Wish to Reduce in Weight.

Getting fat means that there is, physically speaking, either an excessive income or a deficient outgo, or both. From this the remedy would appear simple. Theoretically it would be either to limit the income of fat-producing foods or, once they are eaten, burn them up and get rid of them, or both, and presto the change is made. In practice, however, after certain habits of eating and living have been indulged in for from thirty to forty years it is not always the easiest thing in the world to form new habits. Only those with abundance of will power will succeed. Jellyfish, with jellyfish backbones and jellyfish determinations, will usually go on resembling more and more the proverbial jellyfish or sack of meal in figure. There is little hope for them.

For those who mean business, however, there is much hope. Much can be accomplished and much more prevented by observing the following suggestions: Drink three glasses of hot water, to which has been added half a lemon, half an hour before eating breakfast.

For breakfast indulge sparingly in baked apples, stewed prunes or similar fruit, omitting cereals, sugar and cream. Let dinner consist very largely of salads and vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes, turnips, cabbage, greens, spinach, celery, etc. Let supper consist largely of the same things, being careful to avoid cakes, sweets, mushes, bread, especially fresh bread, or soggy biscuits. Hard toasted graham wheat bread may be tolerated in small amounts.

For the best results it is highly essential that bulky rather than nourishing foods and laxative rather than constipating foods be eaten.

By all means live, work and sleep in the open air. Burn up all excess avoirdupois possible by breathing exercises, by walking and by exercising rather severely every day. Get up "a good sweat" every day. Avoid a sluggish, indolent, indifferent life and disposition. Be active mentally and physically. In other words, keep busy.

NAMES OF OUR CITIES.

Scant Use of the Greek Word "Polis" in Town Nomenclature.

"Gallipoli, in the Dardanelles, is pronounced with the accent on the second syllable," said a college tutor, "but Gallipolis, the county seat of Gallia county, O., has been pronounced by the people there for a hundred years or more 'Gallipolis'."

"Gallia county was settled by the French about 1788, who gave it the name the Romans gave to their country, and they mixed Rome and Greece for the name of their county seat, which thereupon became a good American name and has so remained to this day, which brings up the use of the Greek word 'polis' in the construction of our town nomenclature."

"In a country whose people are so fond of calling their towns, no matter how small, 'cities' it would seem that 'polis' would be foremost in our urban compounds; but, strangely enough, it is not so. As far as I can discover it is used only in Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Annapolis, Copperopolis, Metropolis, Kanopolis, Cosmopolis, Demopolis, Gallipolis and Opelous."

"Indianapolis, Ind., has a namesake in Oklahoma; Minneapolis, Minn., has one in Kansas and one in North Carolina; Annapolis, Md., has one each in California, Illinois, Missouri and Ohio. California has a Copperopolis in addition to her Annapolis; Kansas has a Kanopolis and an Opelous in addition to her Minneapolis; Washington has Cosmopolis and Alabama Demopolis, while Nevada has a Metropolis, and Illinois has the same and an Annapolis. Finally Ohio has Gallipolis, and it alone of all puts the accent on the last syllable, 'Gallipolis.' There is but one Gallipolis."

"In all there are seventeen places in this country showing the Greek 'polis' in their names."—New York Sun.

A Royal Tragedy.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keepers and, dabbled her clothes in blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dining in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost is believed to appear whenever the death of a member of a royal family is to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

His Practice.

"Mary Jane, why do you allow that young fellow to remain so long when he calls?"

"You see, pa, he's a lawyer, and no matter how I try to make him go he always manages when he comes to court to secure a stay."—Baltimore American.

Saved by the Telephone.

The word "hello" has been saved to popular usage by the telephone, and by that alone. Thirty-five years ago there was a real crusade against the so-called slang phrase, and the great conversational invention came to the rescue just in time.

Age of Race Horses.

The age of race horses is taken from the first day of January in the year in which they are born. Thus, a horse foaled in March would be counted as a foal until the following Jan. 1, just the same as an animal born in December.

Idleness is the sepulcher of a living man.—Anselm.

DAZED THE GUESTS

The Grand Vizier's Speech at the Gridiron Club Dinner.

FAIRLY BLAZED WITH ABUSE.

It Looked Very Much Like the Makings of "a Bully Row," but the Surprising Climax Averted All Danger of Diplomatic Complications.

In January, 1904, Mirza Ali Asgar Khan, former grand vizier of Persia, was making a trip around the world and was booked to sail to Europe from New York. His attendance at the Gridiron club dinner in Washington was announced in the newspapers. What happened at that banquet is thus dramatically described by Arthur Wallace Dunn in his book, "Gridiron Nights."

The grand vizier came in late, after the dinner had been in progress for a time, and was accompanied by Scott C. Bone of the Washington Post, his host of the evening. Before taking his seat, directly in front of the president of the United States, he bowed low to that official and then made a sweeping salaam to the assembled company. Senator Beveridge was introduced and shook hands. William H. Taft, then governor general of the Philippines, who had crossed the ocean on the same ship with the grand vizier, walked across the dining room and shook hands, expressing his pleasure at seeing him again. Senators Aldrich, Gorman and Hanna and Speaker Cannon, sitting near by, were introduced.

After the dinner had progressed for a time, President Louis A. Coolidge introduced the oriental guest as one who had journeyed far and who came that night with views he had gathered in his travels.

Mirza Ali Asgar Khan, with more profound bows, said that his message to the Gridiron club and its guests had been written, as he was somewhat imperfect in our language, and then he began to read from large sheets of paper.

"The people of the United States," he began, "are watching every day to see whether there is to be a war in the world. In the east we also watch for that war. It is to observe preparations for that war that I travel."

"I was in Japan before I came to this country. In Persia we take great interest in Japan, because the next war will be the great struggle between the civilizations of the east and west. We believe that the eastern civilization will overcome the western civilization."

"This will mark the downfall of Russia, that treacherous power that has plotted against peace of mankind from the days of Peter the Great and has been the hypocrite, the false friend of every weaker power it has aimed to destroy."

He was interrupted by a member of the club, who suggested that as the Russian ambassador was our guest no such discussion should be permitted. Mirza Ali looked puzzled and continued:

"The barbarous rule of Germany will be brought to an end, and a higher morality will supplant the vicious rule of the vandals who have kept the intelligence of Europe under a reign of terror."

Again he was interrupted and attention called to the presence of the German ambassador. The situation was explained to the grand vizier, and he turned over two or three pages of his manuscript and continued:

"And then Great Britain, the traditional enemy of the free American people—perfidious Albion, as she is called by one of our poets—she has been the trader of the world—buyer and seller of men—pretending to love liberty, but hypocritically sheltering slavery when it could be to her interest."

President Coolidge stopped him by sharp raps of the gavel. The faces of the diplomats were drawn into frowns of disapproval. Guests and members were aghast, while President Roosevelt looked as if he thought it was the makings of a bully row.

"We are very much obliged," said Mr. Coolidge, "to his excellency the grand vizier, but as some members of the British embassy are with us—"

"You will not let me speak," said the vizier angrily; "then I bid you good night! You invite me here—you ask me to speak—I prepare my speech—you are as bad as the rest. You have no free press—you have no free speech! I go."

And as he was making sweeping gestures he tore away his fez, wig and beard, and there stood Francis E. Leupp of the New York Evening Post. He had put over the greatest hoax ever perpetrated by the Gridiron club. The real Mirza Ali Asgar Khan had sailed for Europe that very day.

Long Range Pensions.

Uncle Sam's pension system is nothing in its long reach compared to certain pensions that are being paid in European countries.

Only three years ago there died in England the last of the descendants of the man who assisted Charles II. to escape after the battle of Worcester, all of whom had enjoyed substantial pensions throughout their lives for the service their ancestor had rendered his monarch. Admiral Rodney's heirs still draw $10,000 a year, while the representative of Lord Nelson gets $25,000 a year because Nelson won the victory of Trafalgar.—New York Sun.

Happiness grows at our own firesides and is not to be picked up in strangers' galleries.—Jerrold.

A TOUCH OF GOLD.

Its Magic Restored to Its Pedestal His Tottering Dignity.

One day during his prosperous "Adonis" time in London Henry E. Dixey was walking in the Strand when he met an American actor. He belonged to the order of self-satisfied persons who live to give out the impression that the man they deal to speak to is specially singled out by an indulgent providence for high favor. This particular haughty one had obviously made acquaintance with misery. His clothes were seedy, and there were written all over him the signs of pressing want.

"Hello, old man, how are you getting on?" was the Dixey hail.

"Very well, I thank you, sir," replied the unbending one.

"Doing anything just now?" queried Dixey.

"Well, no, I may candidly say I'm not. These plebeian hounds over here do not estimate art at its proper value, and I have refused, in deference to my dignity, to accept anything less than I consider my services worth. I may be out of an engagement temporarily, but, thank heaven, I have not degraded myself by taking any paltry advances, and I still consider myself a gentleman."

Then he added, in a lower and less aggressive tone, "But I must candidly own that the pangs of hunger may soon make me forget my professional dignity, as I have not had a mouthful to eat in two days."

"For heaven's sake," exclaimed the pitying Dixey, "take this and get something to eat!" And he laid in the starving man's hand a sovereign.

With the touch of gold in his consciousness the recipient's face underwent a magical change. Halting a passing cab, he turned to Dixey and said: "Thanks, old fellow, I'll return this in a couple of days. Caddy, drive me to the Cafe Royal."

And away he went to spend that precious sovereign at a single throw. His price as a gentleman must not be allowed to suffer.—Detroit Free Press.

IMPOLITE OFFICIALS.

They Sometimes Get a Jolt, as One of Them Did in Paris.

It would appear that the public servant, no matter how small his position or humble his function, is much the same person in France as in this country, manifesting much the same lack of courtesy as that which meets us so often here.

Recently in one of the departments of a Parisian municipality, toward midday, a little old employee was about to begin munching a bunch of carrots. Some one tapped at the door. No response from the little employee.

The person who had tapped entered "Monsieur," he began.

"Come back at 2 o'clock," growled the little employee, as he continued to gnaw away at the vegetables.

"But—"

"No buts about it. Come back at 2 o'clock."

"I am the new chief of the bureau," said the visitor.

At once the little employee jumped up, trying to hide the bunch of carrots behind his back, as he bowed deeply to the visitor.

"Go before me," said the chief, "and show me, if you please, to my bureau."

The little employee was greatly embarrassed by his carrots. He did not know where to put them.

The chief took pity on him. "My friend," he said, "put down your carrots. There is no shame in eating vegetables. But that respectable occupation should not prevent you from giving a gracious welcome to the public. Let this serve as a lesson to you."—Indianapolis News.

Mathematical Prizes.

The Academy of Sciences of Göttingen, Germany, holds $21,000 to be awarded to whomever can furnish a general proof of Fermat's theorem, which is to the effect that in the equation $x^n + y^n = z^n$ if n stands for an integer (whole number) greater than 2, no integral values can be found for x , y and z . This must be furnished before Sept. 1, 2007.

The French Academy of Sciences awards every five years the Jean Reynaud prize of $33,200 for the best original work in mathematics.—Scientific American.

Mark Twain's Advice.

Mark Twain was a firm believer in the higher education of woman, but Hartford still remembers a speech he made one June to a platform of Hartford girl graduates.

This speech, a humorous attack on the college girl, ended:

"Go forth, Fall in love. Marry. Set up housekeeping. And then, when your husband wants a shirt ironed, send out for a gridiron to do it with."

Pride of Pedigree.

"Who was that you just spoke to?" "Can't think of his name just now, but he is a descendant of one of the old families."

"He hasn't got over it yet?"

"My boy, they never do."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Worth Cultivating.

"I think fortune is beginning to smile on me a little."

"Keep up the flirtation," advised the friend.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Diplomatic.

Bobby—Pa, what are diplomatic relations? Pa—Ask your mother, Robert. Some of hers were, before I married her.—Judge.

GOOD SEED.

Honor must grow out of humility, freedom out of discipline, righteous joy out of righteous sorrow, true strength out of true knowledge of our own weakness and sound peace of mind out of sound conviction.—Charles Kingsley.

HE FOUND OUT

Man Wondered Why Eighth Stick of Dynamite Didn't Go Off

The man who looks for a leak in the gas-pipe with a lighted match in his hand is familiar to all newspaper readers; but the man who looks into a blast hole to see why a stick of dynamite didn't go off is not so familiar. However, he exists—or rather he did.

Tuesday Matt Livarich, an Austrian, was blasting stumps on the ranch of Joseph Solie, in the southern part of the county. Matt put eight sticks of dynamite in one stump, fixed the caps, and then withdrew to a safe distance. Seven of the sticks went off with regularity, but the eighth stick failed to fire. Knowing that dynamite is treacherous stuff, Livarich waited some minutes, and then he went to the stump to investigate.

Just about that time the eighth stick of dynamite went off, and Coroner Hempstead was called. Upon investigation he found that Livarich was 26 years old when he died, that he had been in Clackamas county but five weeks, and that he had friends in Portland, who were notified to take charge of the body. No inquest was held.

CARVER LINE PLANS

Trial Trip Made, and Regular Service Soon to be Established

Without any display of officials the initial trip on the new Portland and Oregon City railroad was made Sunday, Nov. 21. Stephen Carver, the unassuming president of the road, invited a score or so of his friends to make the trip from East Portland to the station of Carver, near Baker's Bridge, and return, covering a distance of about 32 miles. All along the line smiling farmers waved a welcome to the new train, which affords them ready access to the city. The country which the new line taps is very fertile and farther out is heavily timbered.

Ballasting on the new line is about completed and as soon as the washouts caused by the recent heavy rains are repaired, service will be established. The through trip will be made on the comfortable interurban cars as transfers will be made to the Estacada line just east of the Golf Junction until the new line is completed into the city.

OAK GROVE MAN HELD

Escape in "Freaked" Ford Proves Undoing of Alleged Forger

Portland police and Sheriff Wilson say that if Ralph Brandt, of Oak Grove, hadn't had so many "bright" ideas he might have got away from pursuing officers, who finally overhauled him at Cathlamet, Washington, and took him back to Portland to face a charge of forgery. Brandt made his "get-away" in a Ford automobile—and might have escaped notice among the hundreds of Fords that daily pass along the Pacific highway if he had left the car alone.

But he didn't leave it alone. He ripped off the regular body and replaced it with a home-made affair, which he painted a distinctive grey. Hence, instead of being just a man riding in a common Ford, Brandt became a man riding in a freak automobile, and everywhere he went he was noticed.

It is charged that Brandt gave the Ford agency in Portland a forged check when he bought the car that led to his arrest. The alarm was sent broadcast for him, and deputies of Sheriff Hurlburt's office in Portland went to Cathlamet to bring him back.

GLADSTONE FOLK WED

Miss Eva Burns Becomes Bride of Fred W. Baker Thanksgiving

In St. John's church, Oregon City, there was solemnized on Thanksgiving the marriage of Miss Eva Burns, the daughter of R. P. Burns, and Fred W. Baker, the son of F. S. Baker, both of Gladstone. Father Hillebrand officiated at the ceremony, which was attended by members of the families of the bride and groom. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride in Gladstone; after which Mr. and Mrs. Baker left for a wedding trip.

The bride wore a neatly tailored suit of brown broadcloth and hat to match, a corsage bouquet of rose buds and maiden hair fern. Her bridesmaid, Miss Charlotte Baker, sister of the groom, wore a suit of blue broadcloth. Thomas N. Burns, brother of the bride, was groom's man. As the bridal couple approached the altar, Miss Sallie Clancy played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

FALL CASTS SHADOW

Curious Effect of the Full Moon upon the Beautiful Yosemite

Did you ever see a waterfall cast a shadow? asked Stephen T. Mather of the group around the club table. Mr. Mather, who is assistant to Secretary Lane, in charge of the new Department of the Interior is doing in the national parks, had just returned from a strenuous summer among the mountain tops.

"Well, Yosemite Falls cast my shadow very distinctly one night last August. It was half a mile or more away, gazing beauty-bound, at the effect of the full moon upon these giant falls, which are, by the way, as high

"You Can Do Better for Less on Third Street"

Store Opens	The Most in Value	The Best in Quality	Store Closes
8:30 A. M.			5:30 P. M.
Saturdays at			Saturdays at
9 A. M.			6 P. M.
Pacific Phone Marshall 5080 THE MOST IN VALUE— —THE BEST IN QUALITY
Home Phone A 2112

SPLENDID ECONOMIES IN THESE OFFERINGS OF

Laces, Ribbons, Neckwear, Handkerchiefs and Embroideries

A Visit to our Fancy Goods Section at this time will 'prove most interesting and profitable. The extensive assortment of laces, ribbons, neckwear, handkerchiefs and embroideries offer you the widest latitude for selection and the prices at which these goods are offered bring to you the best possible values—for instance:

Embroideries at 29c Yard

Formerly Sold to 75c
An elegant line of high-class Embroideries, including the most desirable patterns; 27-inch baby flouncings; 18-inch Dress and Baby Flouncings; also Corset Cover Embroideries; lines selling regularly up to 75c a yard. This Sale, 29c

Dainty Laces at 5c Yard

Formerly Sold to 15c
An unusually attractive showing of dainty laces especially desirable for holiday sewing; new Val., narrow Cluny, the popular Torchon and Shadow Edges in an endless variety of patterns. Values to 15c a yard. This Sale at, 5c

10c a Yard for Laces Formerly Selling at 20c to 35c

In this assortment are to be found Shadow Flouncings, Oriental Edges, Cluny Sets, Camisole and many other popular laces that formerly sold from 20c to 35c a yard. This Sale Only, 10c

Ribbons Specially Priced at 8 1-2 to 35c Yard

An elegant assortment of Warp Print, Stripe, Plaid and Novelty Ribbons; also the most wanted plain shades. Tempting values at, yard 8 1/2c, 15c, 19c, 25c and.....35c

Neckwear Specially Priced at 25c to $1.00 Each

A complete showing of all the latest styles in Collars, Sets, Guimpes, Vestees, Fichus, Ruffs, etc. Unmatchable values at 25c, 50c up to.....$1.00

Handkerchiefs in Late Novelty Effects Priced at, each, 5c, 10c, 15c and.....25c
Handkerchiefs in Holiday Boxes; Many Patterns to select from at, box.....19c up to $1.75

as sixteen Niagaras piled one on top of the other.

"The moon was behind me, of course. The double falls, shining like silver, lit brilliantly by reflected light the dense shadows of the trees which hid me from the moon. Turning, I saw my shadow outlined vividly upon the grass."

KNEW WHAT HE WANTED

Mollala Man Had Reasons for Demanding White Flannel

A citizen of Mollala entered an Oregon City department store this week and asked for three yards of white flannel. The store had some very nice flannel, mostly white, and with cute little blue dots on it. The sympathetic saleslady said that it was admirably suited for making sleeping garments for a child. The Mollalan admitted that, but said he wanted white flannel.

The clerk then showed him some white flannel with a narrow pink stripe in it, and started in on a catalogue of its good points, but the Mollala citizen shook his head and reiterated that he wanted white flannel, and only white flannel. At this the proprietor of the store took a hand in the game, and suggested that after the flannel had been washed a few times the colored dots or stripes would fade out.

"What I want is white flannel," said the Mollalan, "and I'll tell you why. I live out in Mollala, and we have fleas out there. Now you can see a flea on white flannel, but if you get flannel with colored spots in it the pesky flea will get on the spots and you can't see the pesky varmint at all. That's why I want white flannel, and why nothing else will do."

There was no further argument.

NAMES OWN CENSORS

County Court Selects Citizens to Go Over Budget Accounts

The county court this week named fifteen taxpayers from all sections of the county to act as a citizens' committee to confer with it regarding the budget. A meeting of these taxpayers has been called for next Wednesday evening at the courthouse, Oregon City.

Those named as censors on the county's budget are: Harvey E. Cross, Gladstone; W. P. Kirchem, Redlands; C. E. Spence, Beaver Creek; J. L. Kruse, Sherwood; Frank Jaggard, Carus; C. H. Dye, Oregon City; T. W. Sullivan, Oregon City; John Risley, Risley; E. G. Canfield, Oregon City; John R. Cole, Mollala; George H. Brown, New Era; John Ely, Estacada; W. A. Procter, Sandy; C. N. Waite, Canby, and A. D. Gribble, whose post office address is Aurora, but who lives in this county.

The committee will make a report to the general taxpayers' meeting set for December 14.

The Enterprise said last week that somebody stole a dog from the sheriff. It's too bad when a republican paper has to abuse the sheriff, who is also a republican. It wasn't his dog at all that was stolen.

Twenty-five Portland couples got married on Thanksgiving. It is to be hoped that their anniversaries will always be appropriate.

Dear Amy:-

I went to the club yesterday. All of the women were discussing what they wanted their husbands to give them for Christmas presents, and do you know that everyone of them said "New furniture! New furniture!" I think they were all sensible, don't you? I wouldn't live in anything but a nicely furnished home. This makes Christmas time Merry.

Ta, Ta,
Lou.

P.S.—All the club women yesterday said they were going to buy their new Christmas furniture from

FRANK BUSCH

Leading Furniture Dealer

11th & Main Sts.

Oregon City, Ore.

Children and Night Life.

Night life militates against children's health and growth to a greater extent than has been realized.

Overstimulation in place of rest and sleep, which growing children need, tends to undermine even the strongest constitutions. It needs no physiologist to perceive that the ravages of night life help materially to reduce measurements of weight, height and chest and to weaken heart, lungs and eyes. . . . Moreover, their education suffers. Children who are out until midnight must report at school the next morning although tired and mentally dull. Night life destroys the habits of industry. Littering and loitering becomes rooted into a habit.—From "Streetland."

Platinum.

Platinum in its pure state is a soft whitish metal, much resembling silver. It melts only at a very high temperature, does not oxidize when exposed to the atmosphere and is not affected by the strongest acids.

SUIT IS DISMISSED

Attorney for Plaintiff Ends Litigation Which He Started

On motion of William E. Stone, attorney for Gustav Flechtner, Justice John N. Slevers Wednesday afternoon dismissed the suit in his court filed some weeks ago against the Courier, M. J. Brown and A. E. Frost, in which Mr. Flechtner sought to recover the price of a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco. It is alleged that Mr. Flechtner won a certificate good for such a trip in a contest conducted by Messrs. Brown and Frost when they controlled the Courier over a year ago, but was unable to utilize the certificate.

In asking dismissal of the suit, Attorney Stone said he didn't think the justice court, where he originally brought the action, had jurisdiction to try the case.

The Courier is Only $1.00 Per Year
Why Not Now?