SANTA CLAUS IS NOW A YANKEE

FORMER PRO-GERMAN LEANING IS GIVEN UP BY WORLD'S BIGGEST TOY DEALER

WAR FRIGHTENS KINDLY SAINT

Owner of Magic Reindeer Comes to United States to Make Arrangements for Filling Up Sleigh

There is no doubt at all that in former days Santa Claus used to be pro-German in his sentiments. In fact many people have declared that the old Christmas saint came of German parentage himself, and they have pointed to his fat and jolly features to prove it. Also they have pointed out the fact that most of the toys he left at the bottom of chimneys the night before Christmas were marked "Made in Germany," so it was quite evident that he did a great deal of business with the Fatherland.

This Christmas, however, things appear to be somewhat different. A terrific war has been going on in Europe for over a year, and the toy factories in Germany, that formerly turned out so much of the freight that Santa Claus carries through the sky with him in his magic sleigh, have been turning out other things than toys. Along about the middle of September, when Santa Claus took a drive down to Germany to see about his annual load of toys, his reindeer shied at a couple of Zeppelins and nearly threw the old man out of the sleigh, and right away he turned about and drove just as fast as he could away from the land where he used to be so welcome. When he got back to the North Pole he wondered what he would do to get his toys this year, and finally he decided that he'd go shopping around and see.

So he hitched up his reindeer again and went to France. There he found aeroplanes scouting through the sky, and great cannons were booming beneath him, while all the toy factories were turning out bullets and trumps instead of leaden soldiers and tin horns. It didn't take him long to decide that he couldn't do business in France, either. So swinging around he drove over to England, but there the people looked so grim and mad that he didn't stop. So he whipped up his reindeer and came over to the United States.

Here he found things about as usual, only there weren't very many toy factories. He found a few, and hitching his reindeer in front of one, he dropped in to see the boss. He told the boss that he had been getting toys for many years from Germany and France, but that this year they seemed to be so interested in fighting over there that he couldn't get his usual cargo of things to make children happy. And he asked the boss of the particular toy factory where he had stopped if he couldn't speed up the works and get out all the toys that were needed here at home.

The boss was a Yankee, which is another name for a resourceful American, and he scratched his head a minute and thought. Then he looked up at Santa Claus and said:

"I tell you, Nick, this is some order you have dropped down on me, but I'll see what can be done. You've always bought your stuff in the old world before, where labor was cheap, and it will be pretty hard for us to fill your order over here, where labor is about the costliest thing there is. But I'll see what I can do—come back in a month."

When Santa went away this toy maker had a talk with a lot of other American toy makers, and with some designers and machinery experts, and with businessmen in general. And the result was that when Santa Claus came back in a month the toy maker showed him a lot of sample toys of all kinds and asked him how he liked them. And Santa Claus was so surprised that he couldn't speak for a minute, for the American made toys at which he was looking were the finest toys he had ever seen. And after he recovered from his surprise, he left a great big order with the American toy makers, and felt happy, because he knew he would be able to give all the little children something this year just as he had before, in spite of the war in Europe.

All of which is a parable, maybe. Perhaps it isn't good for much except to read to your small boy or your small girl just before you put them to bed. But even at that it is true.

One of the most surprising results of the war in Europe has been the transfer of the world's toy market to the United States. American brains and American desire to take advantage of a business chance have so revolutionized the toy market that it is doubtful if Germany will ever again be able to really compete for supremacy in this line. For while Germany always had and always will have cheap labor, the American toy makers have perfected so many new kinds of machinery for making toys, and can turn them out in such large quantities, that America, with high wages,

POLITICS A-BREWING

National and County Situation Stirs Interest Among Voters

Probably because Oregon City's election has got people to thinking about it, and because the other city elections have helped, there appears to be an awakening of political interest throughout the county, state and nation. W. P. Hawley, Jr., who recently returned from a trip through the East, says that everybody back there is trying to pick the leader upon whom the republicans will pick their hopes in 1916, and adds that Charles E. Hughes, former governor of New York and now a justice of the United States Supreme Court, appears to be the popular favorite.

Justice Hughes has announced that he is not seeking the office, and while many republicans are hopeful that he will lead the party, efforts are still being made to find a "strong" man to run against Wilson, who appears to be certain of the democratic nomination if he will have it.

In the county there is less interest in presidential timber than there is in county timber. The fight for district attorney and sheriff appears to be looming larger than ever on the horizon. No new candidates for the district attorneyship have announced themselves, however, and those already entered in the race appear to be marking time until the Honorable Christian Schuebel decides whether or not he wants to "sacrifice" his private law practice and really go after the place. Mr. Schuebel says that if he does make the race and should be elected that he will "lose money" through an enforced neglect of his private practice.

In the office about the sheriff's office there are a number of candidates. William Wilson confides to the Courier that he will be a candidate for reelection, and that "the papers can't scare him out." With the departure of Mr. Hackett from the chief deputyship the first of the year to become mayor of Oregon City, it is reported that Mr. Wilson will "play politics" in appointing a successor to Hackett, and will take into his office a man with a large following. It is even rumored that the chief deputyship will be offered to John F. Albright, a republican candidate for the sheriff's job at the last primaries.

On the democratic side of the fence it is understood that E. T. Mass, former sheriff, will be a candidate if H. W. Kohler, of Oswego—who ran against Wilson last election, does not want to make another try for the job. Ed Olds has also been mentioned as a possible candidate for the nomination. It is also said that W. A. Long of Oregon City, may go gunning for the democratic nomination for sheriff.

The Cat Came Back

Aurora has unearthed a cat that has been missing for sixty years. A warehouse was torn down recently and a mummy cat with dry, white skin and whiskers still in place was found. After January 1 there will enter into the mummified state some of the inhabitants of that town, and they won't be cats.—(Woodburn Independent.)

Linn Jones no sooner announces that he is "out of politics" than they shove him on the water board. That is a funny place to go to get "out of politics," judging by past performances.

can actually undersell Germany with low wages, when it comes to toys. And on top of all that the toys are BETTER TOYS.

Visit the shops in your town where toys are sold, and see for yourself. Never before has there been such a variety from which to choose, and never before have such substantial toys been offered. And the toys are more lifelike and real. Go to your home store and look over the offerings and see for yourself. Ask the storekeeper to show you what he's got, and get him to tell you about the things, and the prices. And then compare them with what you formerly paid for "Made in Germany" toys.

There are real railroad trains, made in America, with American engines with cow-catchers, to draw them, that are as far ahead of the old "Made in Germany" trains as American Pullmans are ahead of the old single-track cars that they used to have in Germany. And American children want American trains to play with—the absence of cow-catchers on their engines has long been a sorrow to American youngsters. There are "character dolls" made in American factories that not only look better and more lifelike than the dolls we used to buy, but they are better dolls and won't break so easily. There are thousands of novelties in the toy line, substantially made and faithfully reproducing the "grown-up" things they represent, that will bring joy to the heart of any child—and they are cheaper and better than the toys we used to get.

The war in Europe is a terrible thing, but it has had one good result—it has made for better toys for little children all over the world. It has made the United States the headquarters of Santa Claus, and it has given old St. Nick a better line of goods to distribute throughout the globe. Even if you aren't a child any more it will pay you to go to your local store and look at the toys—and see what fine things you can get for the children now; and how splendidly American brains, skill and labor have risen to the occasion.

HACKETT ELECTED MAYOR BY PEOPLE

BOND ISSUE ALSO CARRIES AS DO AMENDMENTS INITIATED BY STONE

VOTE AT POLLS NOT HEAVY

West Linn Votes to Take in Outside Territory but Turns Down Law Against Stray Cattle

Monday of this week voters in the county seat elected E. C. Hackett mayor by a majority of 204 ballots, re-elected M. D. Phillips city treasurer, re-elected Fred Metzner to the council, and elected A. B. Buckles and E. L. Moore to the council. The refunding bond issue was authorized by a majority of 408, and the Stone amendments to the city charter, providing for jury trials in the recorder's court and for the election of city prosecutor and city recorder were also carried. The election results did not surprise citizens who had been keeping a close tab on the campaign.

The passage of the Stone amendments may be considered a direct expression from the voters of what they think of the logic of the Honorable Christian Schuebel, who waged a bitter and eleven-hour warfare on them. The intimation that the Stone amendments were in behalf of the "wets," also advanced in an effort to defeat them, was evidently not taken seriously by the voters.

Aside from the county seat, West Linn, Gladstone and Molalla held elections on Monday. West Linn citizens voted down a measure that would prohibit stock running at large in the new city, and voted for the annexation of Willamette. City officials elected in West Linn were: Mayor, J. B. Lewthwaite; recorder, L. L. Porter; chief of police, P. J. Winkel; treasurer, M. E. Clancy; councilmen, F. J. Clark, F. A. Hammerle, N. T. Humphrys, E. A. Leighton, N. C. Mickels and Charles Shields.

Gladstone elected the following city officials: Mayor, Chambers Howell; recorder, John N. Sievers; treasurer, Thomas Anthony Burke; councilmen, F. A. Burdon, C. W. Parrish and H. W. Streibig.

In Molalla the election resulted in the choosing of the following rulers of the city: Mayor, W. W. Everhart; councilmen, one year term, Tom Worthing; two year term, L. A. Daugherty, F. H. Hendricksen, I. M. Tolliver; recorder, H. N. Everhart and treasurer, J. H. Vernon.

In none of the three towns where elections were held were there any remarkable crowds at the polls. The vote in Oregon City reached a total of 1197, and in the outside towns a similar lack of interest was apparent among the electorate. However, in all points the voting was sufficiently pronounced in its results to show that the general feeling of the people was carried into effect.

In the county seat the election of Mr. Hackett will lead to several changes in municipal affairs. Councilman Hackett, who will take the mayor's chair the first of the year, will be replaced by a councilman who will be selected by the city fathers. Chief of Police Shaw will resign before the new year, and the incoming mayor will appoint his successor. There will also be a change in the office of city prosecutor, but it is believed that Mr. Hackett will ask Recorder Loder to continue in office.

ROBBERIES CONTINUE

Country Club, Near Milwaukie, Is Again Visited by Thieves

In spite of the efforts of Sheriff Wilson to preserve the peace in his bailiwick and put to rout all thugs, thieves and crooks, robberies continue merrily at the Waverly Country club, between Milwaukie and Sellwood. Sunday night complaint was made to Multnomah county authorities that another robbery had occurred in the country club, and Monday word of this got to Sheriff Wilson. The sheriff investigated and discovered that $17 in cash had been taken from the locker rooms of the club, in the rear of the interurban station at Overlinks.

This is but one in a long series of robberies that have taken place in the country club, some of which have been from the locker rooms, and some of which have occurred in the clubhouse proper. Facts regarding many of these robberies have been suppressed, club members not desiring to have the notoriety attached to newspaper reports of the pilferings.

According to the report sent Portland, the robbery Sunday night was more extensive than the $17 affair which Sheriff Wilson investigated.

Councilman Templeton didn't do anything for the city last month—at least there was no warrant for him in the finance committee report. Too bad you can't use lawn-mowers when it rains.

HONORS FOR TEACHERS

Special Certificates for Instructors Who Really Do Work

A plan for giving public recognition to those teachers of the state who have proved themselves to be progressive as well as successful in their work, has been announced by Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. A. Churchill. To all teachers who meet the five requirements adopted by the State Superintendent there will be given "professional teacher's certificates," which will certify that the holders have not only taught successfully during the preceding year, but that they are progressive and have shown a proper professional spirit toward their work.

The certificate will be issued by the Superintendent of Public Instruction upon the statement of the county superintendent that all of the requirements have been met and that the teacher deserves especial recognition of his attainments. While the certificate will in itself not entitle the holder to teach, it will be of great assistance to school boards in helping them to select thoroughly progressive and up-to-date teachers, who have been especially successful in their work.

The requirements which must be met for the Professional Teacher's Certificates are as follows: 1. Having taught successfully for at least eight months during the year 1915-16; 2. Having met all of the requirements for a teacher in a standard school and having complied strictly with the laws relating to fire dangers and fire drills; 3. Having sent promptly to the county superintendent all reports requested by him or required by law; 4. Having attended the annual teachers' institute or teacher's training school, and at least one local institute; 5. Having read during the year, under the supervision of the University of Oregon or the Oregon Agricultural College, at least two books on the teachers' reading circle list.

THIS IS STRANGE

Luncheon for County Officials to be Strictly Stag Affair

December 8, 9 and 10 are the dates for a meeting in Portland of a convention of county judges and county commissioners from all parts of the state. The gathering is to be held in the county courthouse, but a fancy banquet for those attending is to be held in the banquet hall of the Portland Chamber of Commerce. The banquet will be held Friday evening, December 10, and it will cost two dollars a plate.

In announcing the banquet the executive secretary of the Portland Chamber of Commerce says: "Men only will be present at this event. An unusual line of music, stunts and a varied snappy entertainment will be featured. Only a very few addresses will be given."

That is a peculiar announcement for a gathering of county judges and county commissioners, isn't it? What do you suppose the county judges and the county commissioners are going to do and see in that "snappy entertainment" that makes it necessary to bar women?

It is a queer meeting, isn't it?

Land Patent Given

The government has granted to the widow of Wesley Joslin a patent to 300 acres of land in sections 32 and 33, township 3 south, range 1 east. The late Mr. Joslin never filed the original patent given him, and a photograph of the one granted by President Grant was secured in Washington and forwarded here with due guarantee of its genuineness.

Starr Is Out

J. M. Starr, who was sentenced to 250 days in jail by Judge Campbell for an alleged assault upon R. B. Hayhurst, has been paroled after serving a little over a month. Starr and Hayhurst had an altercation resulting from the efforts of the former to trespass upon Hayhurst's land during the pheasant hunting season.

One clear morning last week proved that the sun is still on the job—we had commenced to doubt it.

"It's a Long, Long Way to the Mayoralty" might be sung in certain quarters in the county seat now.

WILL CITY YIELD IT'S WATER RIGHT

REQUEST OF HAWLEY COMPANY FOR SALE OF FILTRATION PLANT STARTLES ALL

GRAVE QUESTIONS ARE RAISED

Right to Use Flume Sought by Paper Concern, Which Bids $20,000 for Main Street Property

After the preliminary skirmishing which has been going on for over a week, the Board of Water Commissioners Wednesday night asked the city council for "advice" upon an offer of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company to buy the old filtration plant on lower Main street for $20,000. M. D. Latourette, of the water board, brought the matter before the council, and set off the fuse that is securely tagged at its other end to one of the biggest municipal explosions yet on record. Prompt action on the part of Councilman Meyer, however, stopped the fuse from burning its entire length, and after a good deal of maneuvering the matter was finally landed safe in the hands of a committee, who are to report within a week.

Mr. Latourette read the Hawley company's letter to the council. The letter is addressed to the water board, and asks for a 60-day option on the old filtration plant on Main street, declaring that if the company finally concludes to buy the property the sum of $20,000 will be paid for it. According to the letter the company desires to purchase 386 feet frontage on the east side of Main street, north from the present sulphite mill, and on this site promises to erect a reinforced concrete building. The letter says that the mill company desires solely to "deal in real estate," and does not desire to purchase any water rights or leases, with the exception of the present city flume. If the company buys the property, the letter states, the output of the mills will be increased 50 percent, and 200 more men will be given employment.

After reading the letter Mr. Latourette informed the council that all the property now covered by the old filtration plant had been deeded to the water board, and that this body could dispose of it as it desired. The board, he added, however desired to have the advice of the council in the matter and would abide by its decision. The matter would also be put up to the taxpayers, according to Mr. Latourette, in an effort to get public sentiment in the case.

Mayor Jones suggested that the council would probably like to think the matter over. Mr. Templeton reached for the Hawley letter, and asked if the paper company also wanted the fire house at Third and Main street.

Mr. Latourette answered that the Hawley company wanted the entire block, but that the matter of obtaining the fire house would be taken up later. He added that the filtration plant would be no use in its present location if it was desired to use it in connection with the South Fork water system, and that as far as the pumps were concerned, the Hawley company would be willing to make room in the basement of their proposed buildings for the pumping plant, so that the city would have an emergency water equipment. With the $20,000 to be realized from the sale of the property, if the deal went through, Mr. Latourette said the water board proposed to build a high level reservoir that would contain enough water to supply the city ten or twelve days, and so provide a supply in case of trouble on the pipeline. The sale of the property, he added, would bring several thousand dollars of taxable property into the city, increase industry, and cut off the present expense of $260 per month for employees at the old filtration plant.

Mayor Jones said that he had talked of the matter with Mr. Hawley and had been assured that the city could have room in the basement of the new mill buildings for the installation of a water wheel and an electric generator or should the city desire to establish a municipal electric plant. In reply to this Mr. Latourette volunteered the information that the lease the city had on water rights from the Willamette Transportation & Locks company was solely for pumping purposes, and that the city couldn't install an electric plant.

Intense opposition to the plan was known to exist among the council, many members of which do not see any need for haste in the matter and wonder why the scheme is trying to be rushed through the present council. Mr. Hackett, the incoming mayor, is among those known to oppose it, and other councilmen do not like the idea of the city giving up its flume, which carries "priority water rights," guaranteeing to the city first use of water from the basin, no matter if the river is so low that all other flumes have to go dry.

BUDGET ALL RIGHT

Adoption of Amendment Will Not Mix Up County Seat Affairs

While the council of Oregon City adopted a tax levy of ten and a half mills, the voters at Monday's election, by passing favorably upon the refunding bond issue, have adopted a levy of 14 mills. County Assessor Jack is empowered by law to extend either levy upon the tax rolls, but the chances are that he will extend the 14 mills levy, as it is a rule of the court in Oregon that any initiative measure takes effect immediately upon its passage.

The fact that the county seat's budget for 1916 is based on a ten and a half mill levy, and that under the amendment the city will have but seven mills to expend on its general expenses, will not mix things up very much, in the opinion of City Recorder Loder. Mr. Loder says that much of the 10 1/2 mill levy is taken up with interest on outstanding warrants, and with sums for the payment of a part of the indebtedness. These amounts will now be cared for by refunding bond issue, and so the city will not have to plan on expending money for this purpose. The result will be that the remaining figures in the budget will just about equal the seven mills allowed under the amendment—half of the new 14 mill levy being reserved as a payment on the new issue of refunding bonds.

"The city will get along just about as it had planned," said Mr. Loder, "and I do not believe that the council will find itself in any way hampered."

If any shortage of funds does develop, the cutting will come in the street department, and probably there will not be much of a cut there, as the city's share of the county road tax is expected to provide enough for all street work.

BUY-AT-HOME STUFF

Oregon City Firm Distributes Advertising Printed Out of Town

This buy-it-at-home campaign is great stuff. All the local merchants and businessmen are back of it heart and soul. They all say that every penny spent in Oregon City is a penny kept at home, where it can go round and round and help on the prosperity of Oregon City. Sure.

Councilman R. B. Cox is an enthusiastic supporter of the buy-it-at-home idea. He doesn't think Portland jitneys ought to come into Oregon City and compete with Oregon City jitneys, or with the saintly Portland Railway, Light & Power company, which pays taxes here and does other things. Mr. Cox is also interested in the Oregon City Ice Works, and he thinks everybody ought to buy Oregon City ice and coal and other things like that. Sure he does.

And this week, leaflets bearing the advertisement of the Oregon City Ice Works and urging the people to buy their coal of the Oregon City Ice Works have been distributed all over town. Buy-it-at-home stuff, sure.

And the advertising leaflets were printed by the Modern Printing Company, Pittock block arcade, Portland, Oregon.

Buy-it-at-home stuff, SURE!

MRS. QUINT DIES

Barlow Woman Whose Life Was Largely Spent Pioneering Passes

Mrs. Harriet R. Quint, of Barlow, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Irwin, the day following Thanksgiving. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Love, of the Spiritual church, Portland. Mrs. Quint was 82 years of age, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Irwin, of Barlow, and Mrs. Susie Chase, who lives in South Dakota; and by five grandchildren.

Harriet Relief Brown was born in Cass county, New York, in 1833. When she was 12 years of age her parents moved to Michigan, where they settled upon a donation land claim. In 1857 she was married to Obed W. Quint. In 1870 they moved to Iowa, locating on a homestead. After four years they moved to Sioux City, Iowa, where they resided till 1892, when they came to Oregon, settling at Barlow. Mr. Quint died in 1899. He was a veteran of the Civil War. Mrs. Quint's father and two brothers lost their lives in the service of their country.

Mrs. Quint was a kind and loving mother, a faithful friend, possessing the true pioneer spirit of hospitality.

PAVED ROADS ASKED

County Boosters Want $60,000 Extended on Hard Surface Work

Backed by T. A. Roots, Ed Olds, Sam Roake, the Honorable Christian Schuebel, Dr. J. A. Van Brakle and others, the Live Wires of the Commercial club this week adopted a resolution asking the county court to spend at least $60,000 in 1916 for laying hard surface roads in Clackamas county. The Live Wires estimate that a hard surface road can be laid on five miles of good macadam road for the sum that may be raised by a two-mill levy, and that such a road would not need any maintenance charge for at least ten years.

The resolution has been forwarded to the county court for consideration, and when the matter comes up a number of county taxpayers who have a knowledge of road work will argue for the new plan before the commissioners.

WHY HAVE LAWS LIKE THESE, EH?

VAGARIES OF SCHUEBEL RULE MAY BE AMUSING, BUT THAT'S NOT POINT

TIME TO QUIT MONKEY SHINES

Serious Questions Raised by Lawyers as to Ability To Enforce Recent Enactment if Attacked

Last week the Courier mentioned casually that it would have something to say this week about the Honorable Christian Schuebel and some of the city legal business with which he has been connected since he has enjoyed the decorative title of "city attorney." The Courier wasn't going to spill this stuff when it first got next to it because the spilling of the bean-pot may not do the city any good; but the Honorable Christian Schuebel is so cock-sure of himself, and is also so sure that the Courier is related to a long-eared quadruped, that it is perhaps just as well that the stuff be spilled.

In a letter in Sunday's Enterprise, the Honorable Christian Schuebel intimated that the Courier was a jack-ass or a mule—his language is a little hazy, as usual, and it is hard to get his correct meaning. Maybe the Courier is a jackass or a mule, but the Honorable Christian Schuebel should not be so scornful, and should remember that both the jackass and the mule have aided America in accomplishing a great deal of its present glory. Even in this day of automobiles and flying machines, the United States maintains several hundred mules for mountain artillery uses, so it would appear that at least one breed of long-eared quadrupeds is of considerable value.

Last week a reporter of the Courier asked the Honorable Christian Schuebel if it wasn't a fact that the so-called "Jones anti-boose law," which Chris drew, wasn't worthless as far as law went. The reporter said he had heard it was worthless because the city charter doesn't give the council authority to regulate the sale of liquor anywhere except in saloons and liquor stores. Mr. Schuebel poo-pooed the idea, and quoted the charter, to wit as follows:

"The city council has power and authority within Oregon City to license, tax, regulate and restrain barrooms, drinking shops * * * provided that no law or part of law authorizing any officer or officers of the county of Clackamas to grant tavern or grocery licenses shall apply to persons vending liquors within the limits of said city."

The Courier reporter had heard this section of the charter quoted before, and he asked the Honorable Christian Schuebel if there was anything there in it to give the council power to pass an ordinance "regulating" the sale or disposition of liquor in private residences, or outside of "barrooms and drinking shops."

The Honorable Christian Schuebel crawled and hemmed and hawed a minute, and then he said that the local option law, which was still in force gave the city power to do as it sweetly pleased in regard to booze. And furthermore, the Honorable Christian Schuebel remarked that he'd like to have some "smart attorney" give him a run on this law and carry it into court if he didn't think it was good. Then, just for full measure, the Honorable Christian Schuebel announced that if he was "city attorney" next year, violations of the statewide prohibition law would be prosecuted under the city ordinance which he drew.

The Honorable Christian Schuebel has a right to his opinions. And so have other attorneys. And quite a number of other attorneys, including some of those in the city say the Jones anti-boose law isn't worth the paper upon which it has been typewritten, because it goes beyond the powers of the council as set forth in the charter.

Now the Courier is "dry," and it wants Oregon City to have a good prohibition law, since the majority of people have declared for prohibition. But it doesn't feel that the Honorable Christian Schuebel knows more about the charter than some of the other attorneys or "smart attorneys" of the city, as Chris calls them. And if the Jones anti-boose law isn't GOOD LAW it is time that somebody took a fall out of Chris on it, and got a GOOD LAW enacted. And inasmuch as the charter doesn't say anything about the power of the council to regulate booze outside of "barrooms and drinking shops," and inasmuch as the charter denies the council the right to take advantage of county laws and powers, it looks to us as if the foot of the Honorable Christian Schuebel had slipped.

Then there was the matter of the city budget that was brought up by the reporter to Chris. The law says the budget must be published twice. The Honorable Christian Schuebel says the budget was printed twice;
