Officers are Acquitted

Suit to recover damages from Constable Reed and Justice Kelso, of Milwaukie, and a firm of Portland attorneys, failed in court last week, when evidence introduced by the plaintiff was deemed insufficient to show the misbehavior alleged. The suit was brought by O. W. Eastham for C. W. Matthews, of Milwaukie, who alleged that Reed, Kelso and the attorneys had conspired to unlawfully remove from his house certain household effects which were mortgaged. District Attorney Hedges defended the constable and justice of the peace.

Masons Elect Officers

Members of Multnomah lodge No. 1, A. F. & A. M., held their annual election Monday evening and chose the following officers: Worshipful Master, C. C. Spencer; Senior Warden, H. A. Swafford; Junior Warden, M. W. Hedden; Treasurer, John R. Humphrys, and Secretary, William Hammond.

H. THIESSEN TO SPEAK

Head of County Cow-Testing Association to Tell of Work

During Farmer's Week at the Oregon Agricultural College, at Corvallis, H. Thiessen, president of the Clackamas County Co-Testing association, will deliver an address before the Jersey Breeders' association on the work of his organization in this county. Mr. Thiessen, who is a firm believer in the benefits that accrue from having all dairy stock tested, so that the cows that "earn their keep" can be segregated from the "boarders," will demonstrate the points of his talk at Corvallis by actual examples.

Officials of the agricultural college have asked the Clackamas county association to gather and ship down for Farmers' Week a carload of graded stock, some of which has been tested and some of which has not. This carload exhibit will be used as a practical demonstration of the benefits of cow-testing; and farmers and dairymen in attendance will be asked to pick out the cows they think are best, and give their reasons. The work of the Clackamas county association has attracted much attention, and the fact that the association recently enlarged and took in a number of new members shows that its efforts to better dairying are appreciated.

Mattoon's Hat in Ring

County Commissioner William H. Mattoon has confided to his friends that he is willing to be a candidate for re-election. Mr. Mattoon says his friends throughout the county are urging him to be a candidate, but that he doesn't particularly want the job. Mr. Mattoon is now serving his second term on the county board, and his home district is Estacada. If he runs for office again he will have opposition.

Blame Not Placed

A coroner's jury which inquired into the death of Clinton Guy, killed last week by being caught in the shafting of a buzz-saw, returned a verdict declaring that the dead man's clothing accidentally became entangled in the machinery, but attached no blame to anyone concerned.

The exports of logs and round timber from the United States in 1914 were approximately 138 million feet, while the imports were nearly 149 million feet. The exports went to Germany, the United Kingdom, Canada and the Netherlands, whereas the imports came chiefly from Canada.

The imports of laths into the United States during 1914 were nearly 565 million, valued at over one and a half million dollars, of which more than 99 percent came from Canada.

TRACK INTERESTS COX

Councilman Perambulates over Southern Pacific Right-of-Way

The hobbies of great men are always interesting to ordinary folk, but it is only in a few instances that the general public gets to learn about them. Oregon City notables have been particularly fortunate in keeping their favorite pastimes hidden from the public gaze; but at least one of them now stands revealed. Councilman R. B. Cox, it is reported to the Courier, spends some of his spare time walking over the Southern Pacific right-of-way, between the section of the city near Twelfth street to an indefinite point near the rear of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company's office.

Last week, between councilman discussions of the sale of the city filtration plant to the Hawley concern, Mr. Cox meditated on the problem while thus walking to and fro, according to report. Possibly the even surface of the rails and the even intervals of the ties enabled the councilman to better clarify the problem in his mind.

FAME FOR LLOYD

Oregon City Newspaperman to Take Control of Stanfield Paper

The ambition of every newspaperman, to quit working for a "boss" and to be the whole works himself, has been realized for Lloyd Riches, of Oregon City, familiar to many people in the county for his work as local representative of the Oregon Journal. Mr. Riches has purchased the Stanfield Standard, a live and thriving newspaper published in Eastern Oregon, and leaves shortly to assume entire charge of his paper.

The best wishes of Oregon City folk and of the local papers go with Mr. Riches in his new venture; and personally the Courier hopes that under his leadership the Stanfield Standard will grow to be more influential and more prosperous than it has been in the past. With Mr. Riches at the helm the Stanfield Standard will be a republican newspaper, and will make every effort to please its large group of subscribers and readers.

TYPHOID IS FATAL

Seven-Year Old Girl Dies Day After Being Stricken with Disease

Evelyn Ingraham, the 7-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ingraham, died Saturday morning of typhoid fever at her home in the county seat. Miss Ingraham had been ill but a day with the disease, which rapidly advanced to its crisis. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the Presbyterian church. Miss Ingraham was a grand-niece of E. H. Cooper, and was known as a remarkably bright and attractive child.

FARMERS LIKE BOOKS

Experience in Rural Library Makes Maryland Woman Happy

In the January Woman's Home Companion is the story of a Maryland woman named Mary Dewitt Titcomb who has extended the field of the Washington County free library until it supplies the loneliest, inaugurating an R. F. D. library service. In reward the trustees have built her a residence attached to the library.

"Miss Titcomb felt that it was necessary for the library to go to those who were not able to come to the library. So, with the consent of the trustees, she built her first 'library wagon.' It was, according to her own description, 'most like a sublimated laundry wagon.' There were side doors opening outward, and each side was fitted with shelves full of books. Between the shelves and in the space below were boxes holding more books. Drawn by two dapper mules, the wagon started on its mission of carrying good books to every little crossroads settlement, every hillside farm. An auto has now taken the place of the wagon, and it carries a visiting librarian, who helps farm families and the teachers of remote schools in their selection of books and pictures.

"It makes two trips a week on sixteen routes, covering the entire county. The county has fifty thousand inhabitants, and last year the circulation of books from the traveling library alone was sixty thousand. Its clients demand less fiction than do the town people, showing a keen interest in works devoted to travel, biography, history, sociology and poetry. Appreciating the value of their librarian, the trustees have built a charming residence, attached to the library just as a manse is to its church, in which Miss Titcomb now lives."

BEAVER CREEK CONCERT

Boys' Band Gives Pleasing Entertainment with Many in Attendance

Saturday evening, Dec. 11, an entertainment was held in Beaver Creek hall for the benefit of the Boys' Band, which was organized about two months ago by Paul Prager. This was the Band's first public appearance, and the selections rendered by them were greatly appreciated by a packed house. A great deal of credit is due their leader for his faithful work with the boys. There are 23 boys in the band. The Brown-Eyed Orchestra rendered some beautiful selections, and the Beaver Creek Quartette sang "Evening Bells."

There were several recitations and one of the main features of the program was a little two-act play, "Dr. Cure-All," which afforded no end of amusement and entertainment to the audience.

After the program, coffee and sandwiches were served. The entertainment netted over twenty dollars for the boys.

IS ALWAYS IRISH

Manager of Munitions Plant Wont Take Chance with Retired Marine

When is an Irishman not an Irishman and does he ever become thoroughly Americanized?

That is what First Sergeant John Fox, United States Marine Corps, retired after thirty years honorable service with the colors, would like to know.

Applying recently for a position as watchman at one of the large factories supplying ammunition to the Allies, Fox was told that the fact of his having been born in the Emerald Isle over half a century ago, barred him absolutely from such employment.

Fox's discharges show that he fought bravely at Guantanamo, Cuba, in 1898, when a handful of United States Marines held in check thousands of Spaniards there, and established a naval base at that point, but his thirty years of excellent service with Uncle Sam's sea-going soldiers counted for naught with the munition makers.

"Once an Irishman always an Irishman and we can't be too careful in the selection of our guards," Fox was told.

Fox, who says he is intensely American and absolutely neutral, cannot get their viewpoint, but isn't worrying much, for Uncle Sam pays him $70.00 a month retired pay.

"CHARLIE" APPRECIATED

British Paper Sorry, However, that He Can't Hear People Laugh at Him

In the January Woman's Home Companion Hayden Carruth says:

"Perhaps Charlie's art is better appreciated abroad than in this country. 'Punch' had an article about him a few weeks ago. 'It was a wise instinct that caused him always to appear in the same costume,' says our London contemporary. 'But his especial fascination is that life finds him always ready for it.' No man has, in the same space of time, ever made so many people laugh as he. 'It is a curious thought that Charlie does not hear it.'"
