

Retaliation

By WILLIAM CHAMBERLIN

I've heard a story about a certain orator that will bear repeating. They say that when he was in college he was a member of a debating society and was on a debating team chosen to meet a team from another college for the intercollegiate championship.

When this young man came home on vacation he was used to spending a good deal of his time with a girl who lived in the adjoining place to his father's. Both places were in the country, with large grounds about them. The college boy used to go out in the rear of his home and practice elocution. When he was not practicing elocution he was talking soft to the girl next door. Young fellows of that period in life, especially collegians, don't mean anything when they spoon with a girl, and the governor—we'll call him the governor, since he afterward became the chief executive of one of the United States—didn't mean any more than other boys of his age who pretend to be in love.

One afternoon—the governor was going back to college the next day for his senior year—Grace from her window saw him orating in a wood at the back of his home. She could see his gestures, but could not hear a word he said, not even a sound. Any one who has thus seen a person addressing an audience must have been impressed with the absurd appearance he presented. A smile came over the girl's face, which suddenly gave place to the expression of an idea having entered her brain. Going to a telephone, she took down the receiver and called a number.

"Is this the county insane asylum?" "Yes, ma'am."

"I think one of your patients must have escaped. At any rate, there is a young man back of the house next to this who is talking to himself and flailing his arms about wildly."

The person at the asylum took down the address and hurried away.

Not ten minutes had elapsed before a couple of men in a buggy, with the letters M. C. A. S. painted on the side, drew up in front of the governor's home and, passing through the grounds, saw the governor in the position that had been described to them. Walking slowly and carefully toward him so as not to excite his suspicion of their intent, as soon as they came near enough to him they sprang forward and plucked his arms. Of course he was greatly astonished, asked a lot of questions and made many protests. The men paid no attention to either, but one at each of his arms, walked him through the grounds to the road where the buggy stood.

Now, it happened—that's what Grace said, it happened—that she was looking out of her window as the prisoner was walked by in the adjoining lot. When they came opposite her she called out: "What's he been doing?"

"Loony," replied one of the captors. This was the first the governor knew of the reason for his arrest. The cause of his being considered a lunatic dawned upon him at the same time.

"Really, gentlemen," he said, trying to laugh, "this is very funny. Grace, explain please."

What did Grace do but withdraw from the window without a word. The governor looked at her first with astonishment, then with anger, then with terror. He was hustled to the buggy, placed between the two men and driven away.

Before they reached the asylum Grace had set out a pony cart and driven there herself by a shorter route. At the office she informed the man on duty that she was the person who had telephoned about the maniac next door and had come to tell them about him. A few minutes later the two asylum men with the governor drove up and entered a waiting room. Presently Grace came in, raised a pair of glasses, through which she stared at the prisoner, then dropped them and said: "All right; that's the man."

"Grace," cried the governor, "for heaven's sake, what does this mean?"

But Grace walked away, evidently not inclined to argue with a madman. As soon as she was outside, however, she told the keepers that she was quite sure the man was harmless—indeed, she regretted having caused his capture—and, after considerable vouching for his being merely queer, persuaded the authorities to release him, agreeing to drive him home in her cart.

The governor was put in the cart by his captors, looking by this time positively dangerous. Not a word was spoken till the pony had pattered his little hoofs on the stones for half a mile.

"I presume," said the governor, "that you think you have done something very smart."

"I'm sorry. Forgive me."

There was no sorrow in her tone and no pleading in her request to be forgiven.

What was said during the rest of the drive home was never revealed. The governor left the next day for college with a dead in his ear. It breaks a man up to be beaten by a woman, and the governor at the Christmas holidays went home ready to bend the knee to the girl who, as he expressed it, had wiped the floor with him.

She sent him back much more of a lunatic than he had been when arrested, but after he got his profession relearned and married him. He now says that his wife, not he, is the governor, and whether or not she governs the state, she governs the governor.

SPORTSMEN TO MEET

Imperial Hotel, Portland, to be Headquarters Next Week

The third annual meeting of the Oregon Sportsmen's League will be held in Portland next Sunday and Monday, December 19th and 20th. On Sunday fly and bait casting events and pigeon shoots will be held. Many prizes have been offered for efficiency, by Portland merchants who are interested in game protection.

On Monday the annual business meeting of the League will be held, which will be concluded with the election of officers for 1916. In the evening a reindoor banquet will be given in the Commercial Club dining rooms. Delegates from all Rod and Gun Clubs and Game Protective Associations in the state will be in attendance. Many matters of interest to sportsmen will be taken up and discussed at the meeting of the League, which will be held in the Imperial Hotel.

To the Road Districts of Clackamas County:
Don't worry, for the County Court is made up of law-abiding citizens and so will be apt to distribute the road money as follows:

Seventy percent of the 8 mills will go to the road districts where the money was collected. Of course, under this plan, it will be impossible to conform with the budget vote on hard surface roads.

Strong and Well As Ever
Fred Smith, 325 Main St., Green Bay, Wis., says: "I suffered a long time with a very weak back. Foley Kidney Pills completely relieved me of all soreness and pain and I now am as strong and well as ever." Winter aggravates symptoms of kidney trouble; cold weather makes aching joints, sore muscles, and irregular bladder action more unbearable. Foley Kidney Pills help the kidneys eliminate pain-causing poisons.—Jones Drug Co.
