HIGHLAND

On Sunday Miss Eva and Elsie Schram visited with Mrs. Hehn. Josephine Adams, who is working in Portland, took sick recently and Monday May, her sister, went to take her place.

We noticed Gene Luelling and wife driving through our neighborhood last Sunday.

On account of bad roads Schram's auto truck will not run into Highland until spring, but will continue running between Beaver Creek and Portland.

The plank road leading from the Clarkes road to Highland is in a very bad condition as the plank is worn out in places, which makes it so rough that one must drive very slowly over it.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornwill went to Oregon City and Portland one day last week, returning the following day.

Mr. Hanhart is expecting an old friend and neighbor of his from East Portland to visit with him along about Christmas time.

An old saying is "Go West young man, and grow up with the country," but now we say, "Go to Clark's New Years night and eat supper with your best girl; then dance with the other fellow's girl and enjoy yourself."

Elsie Schram drove to Beaver Creek to purchase Christmas presents we suppose.

George Clark is in bed with la grippe, and Jay, his brother, is doing his chores for him.

Mr. Hanhart is cutting brush along his fence, making a sort of breast works for protection in case any of the enemy of any other part of Oregon encroaches upon his domain.

Highland had its firsts now storm of the season Thursday.

T. G. Wirtz was a visitor at the county seat Saturday.

Miss Rachael Reed, the former teacher of the North Highland school, is visiting friends.

STONE

Grim monster, Death, has called again and taken one of our most noble young men, Ray Stewart. He grew up to manhood here in the neighborhood of Stone and was well liked by everyone.

He and his brothers went over to Washington a few years ago and rented a big wheat ranch of fifteen hundred acres, upon which he was living since then. Recently he went to the San Francisco Fair and was on his way back here to Stone to visit old friends when he was taken ill. He stopped off at Salem and went to the hospital, where he was taken with pneumonia, dying within a few days.

His body was brought here, and the funeral was held at the church here in Stone last Sunday, the service being conducted by Mr. Trullinger. The remains were laid to rest in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

He is the fourth young man that has died among our acquaintances in the last two months. What does this mean? The old must die, and the young may die, but it seems sad to see the young go in the bloom of youth.

Henry Babler has bought L. D. Mumpower's fine residence in Gladstone, and is going to take his bride and settle down there when Mr. Mumpower moves out, which will be pretty soon.

We surely will welcome the new year, when liquors will be abolished from our fair land. The time will come when people will be ashamed to say that the saloon was a good thing to have. It helped revenue so much that they didn't stop to think that it cost two or three dollars to get one dollar back, besides making sorrow and misery all over the land. We may look for happy homes and prosperity where poverty and wretchedness existed before. All hail that happy time!

STAFFORD

We are having another equinoctial storm, about the fourth we have had within the past two months.

A light form of la grippe, accompanied with chills and sneezing, has been very prevalent here the past month.

Mrs. Adolph Delkar is suffering with a lame wrist, something like a wen, but very painful at times, and Mrs. August Delkar is under the doctor's care.

Little David Hite, who fell and cracked a bone in his forearm is now in some danger of having a stiff arm. The physician in attendance recommends that he carry weights in that hand.

Reuben Hite, a boy of fifteen, is staying with Mrs. J. P. Gage, doing chores night and morning.

Mrs. O. Z. Hutton, Mrs. Egge's youngest daughter, started Sunday night to rejoin her husband at Minneapolis. She was accompanied by her two daughters. Mrs. Hutton has been with her mother for the past five months, the father having died two months ago, and the brother killed by the S. P. three months ago the 20th of December.

Henry Baker, who has been in the Oregon City hospital under treatment for an affection of the neck, necessitating two operations, returned to his home here last Thursday, but went down again Sunday, and again on Tuesday to have it dressed. Hopes are entertained now of his complete recovery, and his many friends rejoice with him and his family.

Last Saturday, the 18th, just a month after Mr. Reckel committed suicide at his farm home near Pete's mountain, an auction was held and all personal property sold off.

Lytle Tiedeman held a shooting match last Saturday at the store of Mr. Van Norton, or near there, and it is reported that he made a good sale of his mother's geese. Coffee, cake and sandwiches were served to the crowd.

Letters from Mrs. Nemic, say her mother in Nebraska is very low, with her daughter, Mrs. Nemic, in close attendance.

The Circle met with Mrs. Jack Elfgren last Thursday, with a very good attendance.

CHERRYVILLE

Get in the millionaire class and you'll get lots of presents.

Everybody will get a square meal on Christmas day, but it is a long time to wait from one Christmas to another.

The papers are full of squibs about Ford and his peace ship. No nobler mission was ever undertaken since the days of Richard the Lion-Hearted in the Crusades. The truth of the matter is that the capitalists have it in for Ford because he pays his employees decent living wages.

The Governor and the Oregonian seem terribly ashamed of their stand on the land grant question and are keeping quiet these days. Public opinion is so wrought up over this land grant business that the politicians are getting frightened and some of them are pretending to be mighty zealous, who have been either opposed or lukewarm heretofore. The writer will watch the roll-call in the Congressional Record and keep tab on these fellows who are put down as present, but not voting.

Even Billy Sunday takes a fling at Ford, because he is engaged by the capitalists in getting the people excited about a home in the skies so they will be reconciled to having no home on earth, and in talking all the time about the necessity of being reconciled to that condition in life which God has seen fit to call them, when we know that their condition in life is largely due to the monstrous greed of the plutocrats. The little old Ford rambles right along, in spite of the rich malefactors and their hired prostitutes and by the same token so does the Ship of Peace.

The writer extends to all and sundry persons of whatsoever sort or condition in whatsoever land or country they abide, the compliments of the season and would to God that it might indeed be a Happy Christmas to all the Children of Men.

EAST CLACKAMAS

Well, Mr. Editor, we never quite caught the real meaning of web-foot until this fall, and I tell you they would come in very handy now. It rains one day, then the next day a little more, and then that rain is continued indefinitely.

The wind Sunday evening did some blowing, but did no damage in this vicinity.

Raymond Bennett is nursing the la grippe.

Clarence Inghouse, who had a spell of tonsillitis, has recovered enough to go to school again.

John Heinrich and A. Dane were Portland goers Tuesday, because it was a dry day, but they were not bothered in the least by dust.

Mrs. M. Heinrich and Mrs. Sena Heinrich were transacting business and shopping at Oregon City last Saturday.

In the evening of the same day the Sunday School will hold its Christmas festival. All are most cordially invited to attend.

EAGLE CREEK

Eagle Creek Grange held its regular meeting on Saturday, about 46 members being present. Two candidates were obligated in the third and fourth degrees. After partaking of a fine chicken dinner the election of officers took place. All the officers were re-elected with the exception of two, lecturer and gatekeeper. Eagle Creek Grange has grown considerably in membership during the past year, having 96 members at the present time. The members of the grange have passed some very pleasant and profitable hours together at their meeting during the year, and we hope that the next year will be even better than the year just past.

POULTRY and EGGS

FATTENING POULTRY.

Method of Feeding Prime Roasters For the Market.

What is a roaster? A roaster is any cockerel or pullet that weighs from three pounds up. It must be tender, writes D. E. Warner in the Country Gentleman. This grade of poultry is found on the markets in late summer, fall and winter and is the kind desired by the majority of consumers.

In order to have roasters in prime condition it is necessary to fatten them for the last two or three weeks before killing. Three methods of fattening are used—pen, crate and cramming. Crate fattening is becoming most commonly used. Ten days to two weeks will be found long enough for this method. The regulation crate is six feet long, sixteen inches wide and twenty inches high. This is divided into three compartments, each two feet long. Ends, top and back are covered with two inch mesh wire netting. The partitions are made of laths placed two inches apart. For the bottom of the crate a half by one inch slats or No. 16 galvanized iron wire having a two inch mesh may be used. The cost per pound of gain on roasters should not exceed 10 to 12 cents.

Many poultry keepers favor the open front poultry house, similar to that herewith illustrated. The large opening in the front is closed with poultry netting and provided with a curtain. On sunny days in winter the netting, which is attached to a swinging frame, may be opened and the fowl allowed out. On stormy days and cold nights the curtain is drawn down. Its open fabric allows sufficient air for ventilation.

There are several methods of killing roasters—skilting, discarding the neck and the farmer's method of applying the ax.

There are two methods of picking poultry—dry picking and scalding. Dry picking seems to be the better. In order to dry pick a bird successfully the picker should begin work immediately after the bird's brain has been pierced. A good picker should be able to pick a bird clean in two or three minutes.

Some men are able to do it in less time. After the roasters have been completely picked they should be cooled until all heat has left the bodies and then frozen.

The most common method of packing roasters is to line the box with parchment paper, wrap the heads, place bottom layer heads and feet up; place bottom paper between layers; top layer heads and feet down; both layers packed on sides and butts locked. Three birds are packed with breasts one way, three birds with breasts placed in opposite way.

The box commonly used is 19 by 16 by 8 inches inside.

-FOWLS IN WINTER.

An Occasional Warm Mash Helps Along Egg Production.

The fowls appreciate a warm feed occasionally during the winter months. Save the potato parings and table and vegetable scraps and prepare an occasional feast as follows: Get some meat trimmings, refuse meats, liver or lights, boil two or three hours, then add the vegetables and table scraps, boil thirty minutes longer, add three parts bran to one of cornmeal, enough to make a crumbly mass. Set away to cool, covering with a blanket to preserve the aroma, and when sufficiently cool feed in troughs all the hens will eat up clean.

A feed of this kind occasionally adds variety to the ration and is greatly relished by the fowls. You may say this is too much trouble. It may be for some people, but they are not the ones who are getting fresh eggs for breakfast on wintry mornings.—Kansas Farmer.

White Wyandottes Win.

The fourth international egg laying contest at Storrs' agricultural experiment station, Connecticut, which included 1,000 birds—100 pens of ten birds each—representing nineteen different breeds from fourteen states and Great Britain, has ended. A pen of English White Wyandottes were the victors, with a total of 2,672 eggs to their credit. Rhode Island Reds carried off second honors with a yield of 2,639 eggs, and another English contestant, a pen of White Leghorns, won third position with 2,601 eggs.

FATAL RIDICULE.

Youths of Ancient Alexandria Paid For Their Caustic Wit.

In ancient days the impudent wit of the young Greco-Egyptian dandy was proverbial, says Arthur E. P. Brome Walsell in "The Life and Times of Cleopatra." That was especially true in Alexandria, whose people were characterized by the Emperor Hadrian as "light, wavering, seditious, vain and spiteful, although as a body wealthy and prosperous."

No sooner did a statesman assume office or a king come to the throne than the wags of the city gave him some scurrilous nickname that stuck to him throughout the remainder of his life. Thus Ptolemy IX, was called "The Biond," Ptolemy X, "The Vetch" and Ptolemy XIII, "The Piper." Seleucus they named "Pickled Fish Peddler," and in later times Vespasian was named "Scullion."

When King Herod Agrippa passed through the city on his way to his insecure throne these young Alexandrians dressed up an unfortunate madman whom they had found in the streets, put a paper crown upon his head and a reed in his hand and led him through the town, hailing him as king of the Jews and that in spite of the fact that Agrippa was the close friend of Caligula, their emperor. Against Vespasian they told, with delight, the story of how he had pestered one of his friends for the payment of a trifling loan of 6 oboli, and some one made up a song in which that fact was recorded.

They ridiculed Caracalla for dressing himself like Alexander the Great, although his stature was below the average, but in that case they had not reckoned with their man. His frightful revenge upon them was the almost total extermination of all the well to do young men in the city, whom he collected together under a false pretense and then butchered in cold blood.

SOUTH AMERICAN SAVAGES.

A Tribe That Represents the Lowest Type of Civilization.

In his book, "The Roosevelt-Rondon Scientific Expedition," Mr. L. E. Miller describes a primitive tribe known as the Nhamiquara, who probably represent the lowest type of civilization to be found anywhere on the South American continent.

"As we drew up on the river bank the natives gathered about and stared at us curiously, but betrayed no hostile feelings. Colonel Rondon had but recently succeeded in establishing amicable relations with them. On his first visits to the country numbers of his men had been slain by their poisoned arrows, and they had resented his every step into their stronghold; but, having been persistently treated with kindness, they have learned to look upon him as a friend and always glad to see him."

"In stature the Nhamiquara are short, but well built, and of a very dark brown color. Clothes are absolutely unknown to them, and virtually the only ornaments in their possession are strings of beads that they had received from Colonel Rondon."

"Their huts, or malocas, are rude structures of grass or leaves, and they cultivate small areas of manioc, but wild fruits, game and wild honey form the principal articles of their diet. Both in hunting and in warfare they use bows six feet tall, made of palm wood, and long bamboo arrows. Frequently hunting parties will go on long ramps through the jungle, subsisting entirely on the fruits of their prowess. At night they build a rude lean-to of branches, eat the game, which they roast in a roaring fire, and then stretch themselves on the bare ground to sleep."

The Frenchwoman and Hats.
It is said to take much less money to start a millinery shop in France than in England, because it is not necessary to the French milliner to carry a stock of trimmed hats. The Englishwoman, it seems, cannot buy a hat or anything else without seeing it completely finished. The Frenchwoman has imagination enough to picture the completed article to herself and knows just how she will look in it.—New York Tribune.

Fortunate.
"I wish to thank you for your great forbearance," said the departing guest.

"Oh—er—don't mention it," answered the proprietor, with a slightly puzzled look. "I'm glad you're pleased."

"Yes," continued the d. g., "considering the rapacity of the attendants in this hotel, I deem myself fortunate in not being locked in my room and held for ransom."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Blood Stains on Silk.

To remove a blood stain made by a pricked finger on any silk material place about four inches of white sewing silk in the month and moisten. Then roll into a ball and rub the spot gently, and the stain will disappear as if by magic. Just try it and see.—Woman's Home Companion.

Tough Luck.

"What kind of a husband did your sister get?"

"Aw, she got a lemon. He makes her economize on clothes to pay for the candy and flowers he sent her before they were married."—Kansas City Journal.

Why She Goes.

"If you don't like her, why do you always accept her dinner invitations?"

"I like to go and find fault with everything she does."—Detroit Free Press.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for full particulars. Address: J. C. HENRY & CO., Toledo, O. When an American steamship, with an American crew, clearing from an American port, is "disabled" in a suspicious manner, it is high time to quit talking about neutrality and slam somebody in jail.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Correspondent Expresses His Views Upon Patriotism

Editor, Courier:—I hope Santa Claus will bring the Oregon City post office a new American ensign for Christmas.

I noted in the paper recently that some band of patriotic citizens had presented the circuit court with a new flag, for new citizens to venerate when they take their oath of allegiance, it is also suitable that we have a new flag on our own Federal building.

Also, it occurs to me, that when the United States is concerned, the ensign is usually treated with some respect and care. At military and naval posts, and on some of the larger Federal buildings, the flag is hoisted every morning and taken down every evening. Judging by the appearance of the flag on the Oregon City post office, however, the ensign has remained there in steady service since it was first hoisted. The result is that it is tattered and torn—and while this makes it none the less dear to us; I hope the new flag will be better treated, if Santa Claus brings one.
