TWELVE SOLDIERS
HOME FROM CAMPCOMPANY G BOYS SAY COM-PLAINTS OF TREATMENT ARE FICTITIOUS

TROOPS AT CAMP PARADISE

Pay for Border Service Not Received,
Say Men Discharged from Local Company

Charges that the national guard of Oregon, doing duty on the Mexican border, was not getting a square deal from the government; that rations were scanty and poor and that trouble was experienced by discharged men in getting back home without being out-of-pocket themselves, are said to be the cheapest and meanest kind of fiction and are branded as absolute lies by twelve young men, members of Company G, of Oregon City, who returned to their home here on Monday morning.

The soldiers to return were of the thirteen members of Company G, ordered relieved from duty after submitting to rigid physical examinations recently. They were discharged from the service because of minor imperfection, such as defective vision or hearing, and were returned to their home stations at government expense.

The thirteenth young man who was ordered relieved after the physical examination was Samuel F. Simms. But Private Simms' lot wasn't so hard to bear as that of the other boys. He was detailed to the care of the officers' horses and will remain on duty at the border as long as the guard is there. All of the other twelve came home.

When asked about their rations and as to whether their food was what it should be the young men were in unison in promptly answering for its abundance and its quality.

"If the boys at Camp Paradise could get hold of some of the blackguards who are circulating malicious falsehoods about the camp life and especially about the food we got there, they would be taken for a little trip over the cactus trail," said one of the boys returned this week. The cactus trail is some mysterious yet terrible punishment that is inflicted upon malefactors by the guardsmen and according to the boys one speedily atones for wrongdoing when he is launched for a voyage on the desert's cactus trail.

"The food is far better than many of the boys get at home," one young man said. "There is an abundance of food and it is in great variety. We do not repeat menus any more often than we do in our own homes here and the cooks are excellent in most cases. The cooks with the Oregon National guard are old-experienced hands at the business and they make the best of everything that the commissary department issues to them. Fruit and good, fresh meats, breakfast foods, warm biscuits, good coffee and tea, potatoes fried, boiled and mashed and such things are only a few of the items on our menus that give the lie to talk of bacon, beans and boiled potatoes three times a day. We were well fed and honest men had no word of complaint."

As to any trouble in getting home the boys were equally expressive. There has been a rumor in Oregon City that those discharged after physical examination were turned out of camp to get home the best way they could. In spite of the fact that the rumor had on the face of it the earmarks of pure imagination it gained a wide circulation and in certain quarters denunciation of the war department was strongly expressed.

For instance: When the twelve local youths left camp they were given $45 each. With that sum of money they were privileged to purchase their own transportation or to spend it as they saw fit, according to their own statements. The money was provided for transportation, but if the boys elected to spend it for another purpose it was theirs to do as they liked; the government had done its duty. The call of old Oregon and home was strong enough, however, to bring the Oregon City boys back in a group.

Those who returned are: Charles Baker, Robert Fox, Hillary Goine, Charles E. Harris, Carl Martin, Minor O. Moore, John T. Pindexter, Herbert Raley, Earl A. Rothmundt, Willie Shockley, Charles E. Wells and Clyde L. Williamson.

Rothmundt is not a resident of Oregon City, but is one of several who patriotically heeded the call to arms more than a month ago and enlisted in Company G for frontier service.

The boys had not received pay for their first month of service before they left camp, but were told that the amount due them would be forwarded as soon as it was received. None of the troops had been paid. Funds for the purpose were expected to arrive at camp this week. However, the shortage caused no hardship except perhaps to the sweet

BOYSEN IS BANISHED
UNDER $200 BONDSNOTORIOUS TAVERN KEEPER
MUST NOT RETURN WITH-OUT PERMISSION

Fritz Boysen, exile and notorious law breaker, who formerly operated the infamous Hotel Belle at Milwaukie, got both feet into a puddle of trouble when he returned to Clackamas county recently after being banished by order of Judge Campbell. The judge found Boysen guilty and levied a fine and six-month jail sentence. The latter penalty was suspended and the prisoner paroled on condition that he would leave the county.

Last week, however, Boysen reappeared at his old place of business, donned his coat, rolled up his sleeves and made himself at home until Sheriff Wilson and Constable Frost swooped down upon him and carried him to the county jail.

Before Judge Campbell on Monday Boysen pleaded ignorance of the conditions of his parole, saying that he thought he was privileged to return to Milwaukie to transact business. He had been at Seaside during his absence.

The judge took stock in the plea and released Boysen upon prayer made by his counsel, Judge John H. Stevenson, of Portland. The judge exacted $200 in bail money. Judge Campbell, however, has amended his former court order in such a way that Boysen will remain outside the county permanently unless he is given special permission to re-enter by the authorities. Such permission will be granted only in case of urgent business.

The addition made to the order previously issued, and the provision that is to keep Boysen away from Clackamas county, reads:

"It is further ordered and adjudged that defendant be paroled on condition that he pay his fine herein imposed and the costs of this action to be taxed ($156.50) and that he violate none of the laws of the United States."

CORVALLIS IS SORE
OVER FEDERAL DEALCOLLEGE CITY RIDES HAWLEY
FOR FAILURE TO GET POST OFFICE MONEY

The good citizens of the pretty city of Corvallis wax wrathful because of the Postoffice department's decision that Oregon City is in more urgent need of a new federal building for post office quarters than is the college city, and that, therefore, this city will in all probability be first to receive the federal building appropriation.

A recent dispatch from Washington told the sad, sad story that has made Corvallis greatly indignant.

Certain of the civilly righteous plebeians and plutocrats up the river say that the dissemination of absolute falsehoods is responsible for the department's decision, and their indignation is expressed in scathing terms.

It seems that Congressman Hawley, in a speech at Corvallis, promised the citizens the early erection of a post-office building as a result of his untiring efforts for their worthy cause. The good congressman has forgotten his pledge, think the Corvallis people, and he comes in for a heaping measure of criticism therefor.

The federal department acknowledges the Corvallis need and admits that the present office is inadequate to handle the large amount of postal matter, principally franked documents from the college, and that Corvallis handles a larger amount of mail than does Oregon City.

The department and the people of Oregon City do not deny for a moment the worth of the claims from Corvallis. They are a bit doubtful, however, about the comparative worth. Corvallis has an antiquated structure, unfit for the business that is carried on. On the other hand the building in this city is inadequate to the needs of the service in every way. It is classified by the postal department as "notoriously unfit" and that has resulted in the decision favoring this city.

The building here is privately owned, having been erected by the Weinhard estate, and is under a five year lease to the government by that estate. It is as much out-of-the-way as is the office in Corvallis and if anything is more of a handicap to proper service than is the building at Corvallis.

The entire matter will undoubtedly be adjusted to the satisfaction of both cities, however, as the department has authorized the purchase of a site at Corvallis and the erection of a building thereon will be a matter of only a short time. It is entirely probable that Oregon City will not have a building before Corvallis is so favored.

Oregon City must have an adequate office and will be pleased to see Corvallis get one just as pretty and just as serviceable, and that as soon as possible.

MANY MEASURES

RURAL CREDITS FOR FARMER

Peoples' Land and Loan Law Said to be Favored by Single Tax
Advocates

Oregon voters are to have an excellent opportunity for the full and varied exercise of their suffrage franchise at the elections in November if the number of measures on the ballots being prepared by Secretary of State Ben W. Olcott serve as a reference.

According to a review of these amendments and measures sent out last week by the secretary of state, there are nine distinct amendments proposed to the state constitution and ten measures to be submitted to the voters for addition to the statutes or for rejection at the polls.

The ballot will not be more than the usual length, but will hold more than the usual weight of possibility. In addition to the names of the multitude of candidates the 19 measures and amendments will furnish the voters considerable food for serious thought. Voters are to have in their own hands the decision of many important questions, including the so-called Peoples' Land and Loan law, the prohibition amendments and several others that are of much consequence.

The measures and amendments on the ballot thus far are listed in their order in a pamphlet published by the secretary of state. They are as follows:

Single Item Veto amendment, submitted by the legislature, 300—yes, 300—no. An amendment to section 15 of article V of the Constitution of the State of Oregon authorizing the governor to veto single items in appropriation bills.

Ship Tax Exemption amendment, submitted by the legislature. An amendment to article IX of the constitution of the State of Oregon exempting from taxation until January 1, 1935, except taxes for state purposes only, all ships and vessels of fifty tons or more capacity, engaged in either passenger or freight coasting or foreign trade, whose home ports of registration are in the state of Oregon, for the purpose of encouraging registration of such vessels in Oregon, which would otherwise register in other states.

Negro and Mulatto Suffrage amendment, submitted by the legislature, an amendment to the constitution of the State of Oregon, removing the discrimination against negro and mulatto citizens by repealing section 6 of article II thereof, which section reads as follows: "No negro, Chinaman or mulatto shall have the right of suffrage."

Full Rental Value Land Tax and Homesteaders' Loan Fund amendment, submitted by Oregon State Federation of Labor and the Central Labor council of Portland and vicinity. Commonly known as the Peoples' Land and Loan Law. Purpose—A constitutional amendment declaring and defining (a) people's power and right; (b) citizen's right to use of land; (c) public ownership of land rent; (d) public policy of Oregon; defining (e) the word "land"; (f) method of appraising land rent; (g) land improvement; providing for (h) levy of permanent land rent tax; (i) publication of assessment; (j) delinquent tax sale; (k) maintenance of private property rights; (l) separate assessment of land rent; (m) standing timber; (n) assessment and collection of tax; (o) duty of government and state land board; (p) how personal property and land improvements may be taxed by vote of people only; (q) distribution of revenue from land rent tax; and (r) establishing homesteaders' loan fund. (This amendment is favored by W. S. U'Ren and is said to be an out and out single tax measure.)

For Pendleton Normal School and Ratifying Location Certain State Institutions, a constitutional amendment proposed by initiative petition of Commercial Association of Pendleton. Purpose—To provide for locating a state normal school at Pendleton, upon a site to be donated therefor, appropriating $125,000 for buildings and equipment and levying an annual tax of one twenty-fifth of a mill on all property in the state for its maintenance, and ratifying the location of certain state institutions heretofore located away from the state capital.

Permitting Manufacture and Regulated Sale of Four Per Cent Malt Liquors, an amendment proposed by initiative petition of Equal Rights for Home Industry committee, C. E. S. Wood, chairman. Purpose—To amend section 36, article I, Oregon constitution, which prohibits manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, by permitting the manufacture of fermented malt liquors containing four per cent

HUGHES MIGHT COME
HERE ON WEDNESDAYPRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE IS ASKED BY REPUBLICANS OF THE COUNTY

Charles Evans Hughes, standard bearer for the republicans and candidate for the presidency at the election this fall, is to visit Oregon City on Wednesday and address the citizens of Clackamas county from the platform of his special train if the visit can possibly be arranged by C. G. Huntley, member of the republican state committee and L. Adams, who are in communication today with those who have charge of the Hughes campaign in Oregon.

It is proposed to send the republican candidate through the Willamette valley on a special train leaving Portland early Wednesday morning and returning in time for the big meeting that is to be held in the metropolis.

When Mr. Huntley and Mr. Adams learned that A. N. Rodway, advance agent for the Hughes tour, was in Portland they immediately started planning for the visit of the candidate to Oregon City.

Up to one o'clock Thursday afternoon the definite promise that Mr. Hughes would be here could not be made, but his friends here still hold out hopes of seeing the former supreme court justice.

Plans will go forward here for his reception at the station and if he does come Mr. Hughes will be greeted by a large audience. Mr. Huntley and Mr. Adams will have definite information late this evening.

GHRIST OUT ON BAIL

Prisoner Held in Default of Peace
Bond Is at Liberty

J. M. Ghrist, who furnished newspaper readers with the story that connected Chris Larsen, insane, with the San Francisco bomb explosion while both men were inmates of the county jail here, has gained his freedom under bond.

Ghrist was jailed upon complaint of his wife by the justice of the peace of the Sandy district and asked to furnish $1000 bond to insure his keeping of the peace. It was alleged that Ghrist threatened the life of his wife and a supposed paramour. He could not furnish the bond so was held in jail.

It was to Ghrist that Larsen is alleged to have confessed the planting of a bomb at San Francisco more than two weeks ago, and a story that caused careful investigation of the tale by Clackamas county officers.

CHRIS LARSEN, BOMB
SUSPECT, COMMITTEDIMAGINATIVE DANE REPUDIATES STORY OF OUTRAGE AND GOES TO ASYLUM

One part possibility and nine parts imagination is the approximate formula of the stories that connected Chris Larsen, insane Dane, with the San Francisco bomb outrage of a few weeks ago.

Larsen was arrested when he appealed to Marshal Riley at Milwaukie for protection from the hirelings of a Seattle dentist who were making his life miserable in their attempts to get his savings. He was lodged in the county jail, and there is alleged to have told of his connection with the bomb explosion to John Ghrist, a fellow prisoner. Authorities intimate that Ghrist furnished most of the nine parts of imagination that went into the composition of the story.

The tale was enough, however, to induce local officials to make a thorough investigation of the possibility and to call detectives to question the prisoner. Larsen repeated his confession to a Burns agent and later repudiated every word he had said. He attempted to establish an entirely different yarn than that upon which his confession hinged.

At last the man was examined as to his sanity and the first time commitment papers were not made out pending a further investigation of the possibility of his connection with the bomb plot. Larsen said that he had placed the bomb on a San Francisco street corner, and that the same instrument was that which cost the lives of nine people and the more or less serious injury of a score of others.

However, the meat of the confession torn from what little bone Larsen's story had, the officers were positive that he had no connection with the crime and he was examined again. This resulted in his commitment to the insane asylum on an order issued in County Judge Anderson's court on Friday. Henry Harkson, Danish vice-consul for this district was one of those to recommend the action taken.

Larsen imagined that dentists were after his money and once when Sheriff Wilson called him from the jail for an interview Larsen refused to be seen, telling the sheriff that the official had brought men to shoot him.

COUNCIL MAY NOT BUILD CITY HALLMAYOR BELIEVES REPAIR OF OLD STRUCTURE WOULD BE TO CITY'S ADVANTAGE

NEED BETTER FIRE EQUIPMENT

"City Has Sacrificed Valuable Property," Says Mayor Hackett.
Wants Water Front

The proposition presented to the city by its need of new quarters for the offices of city employees and for a council chamber that is adequate to needs of the government is taking a prominent place in the minds of Mayor Hackett and the councilmen and the mayor is about to call a meeting for the consideration of this and other matters important to the city's interests today and in the future.

In preliminary discussion the idea of remodeling the present city hall structure seems to meet with more favor than any plan to dispose of the property and erect an entirely new building, probably on the hill.

If the present building is to be remodeled, a point to be determined at an early council meeting, it will, in all probability, be brought on a line with the other buildings on the east side of Main street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. The lower floor would be turned into a large store room and the upper floor occupied now by the council chamber and the quartermaster's office, would be turned into one large hall for the use of the council and such other uses as the council desired to put it to. Such a hall would command a rental for special affairs and the lower store room would bring a revenue variously estimated at from $50 to $75 a month.

Two applications have already been filed with Mayor Hackett for the rental of the store room that would result from remodeling the building. One of these comes from a local merchant who has seen the advantage of the location for a business place.

Mayor Hackett overcomes the objection expressed to the removal of the fire company, an objection presented this week by certain members of the company, by saying that the city is now in need of increased fire fighting facilities and that it is only a matter of a short time until the city will be compelled to provide motor driven fire apparatus and employ three or four men as a paid fire fighting force and as a nucleus for the volunteer forces.

"The volunteer apparatus on hand is antiquated to a great extent," says Mayor Hackett, "and is entirely unfit for the present needs of Oregon City. Loss by fire on the hill is inevitable under the handicap of the department suffers through having to take all or part of its equipment from down town. The hook and ladder company, stationed in the city hall building, cannot hope to aid in fighting fires on the hill after pulling its apparatus up the incline."

"Motor driven apparatus is already a necessity and will soon be an urgent demand. The boys, no matter how good their physical condition, cannot conserve energy for the fight after making speed to a fire with their heavy loads. Automobile equipment is provided nowadays at a very low cost and this city must have it."

Motor driven apparatus would necessitate other quarters than those occupied by the Main street company at present and the mayor believes that suitable quarters for the company will be provided.

The mayor does not favor the idea of building a new city hall, expressing the opinion that the cost of such an undertaking would be too much of a burden at this time. He offsets the talk of selling the present site and building with the money thus acquired at another location by saying that the city has already disposed of too much of its valuable property. He points to the disposition of the water power rights and other instances of sacrificing property that should be bringing returns to the city.

"This property is as valuable to the city as it is to a private investor or to an individual," said Mayor Hackett. "The city can collect rent as well as anyone and it needs the profit it can get from value as a revenue producer and along the same line I strongly favor the purchase of water front properties that the city may be in a position to offer reasonable facilities to transportation on the river."

"We have undoubtedly lost much money through the sacrifice of municipal interests and it is about time to conserve what is left."

A committee consisting of Councilmen Metzner, Cox and Van Auken was appointed at the last meeting by the mayor to investigate the possibility of purchasing water front property or acquiring perpetual title thereto and when the preliminaries are disposed of it is likely that some plan of improvement, at least on certain parts of the property, will be proposed.

NEW PAVED ROAD IS READY AT LOW COSTMILWAUKIE-SELLWOOD UNIT
COMPLETE. WORK STARTS ON GRAYS' CROSSING

The opening to traffic of the Milwaukie-Sellwood road on Saturday marked the completion of the second unit of county paving under the plan started by the county this spring of supervising its own road surfacing without letting contracts for any part of the road.

The plant installed near Milwaukie will remain where it is for the present season and already work has been started by the crews under Roadmaster T. A. Roots on the Gray's Crossing or East 82nd street road. According to Judge Anderson the surfacing work for the season will be suspended upon the completion of the Gray's Crossing project, which will be ready for travel in about six weeks. An outline of work to be done beginning early next spring will be made by the court before other work is started.

The cost of the second unit of county surfacing will be far less than the first which totaled 98½ cents a square yard, including the cost of bringing the road to grade before the surface was applied. The installation of the plant is an important item of expense and where this is charged to a single undertaking of no greater extent than the recently completed Milwaukie-Sellwood road will be great. However, this expense will be cut in half in the present instance because it will not be necessary to move the plant in order to surface the Gray's Crossing road. In the future it may be possible to complete several projects without the removal of the plant.

In connection with the cost of the last unit completed Judge Anderson said on Tuesday:

"It is impossible to determine the cost of the Milwaukie-Sellwood project at this time because of the fact that half the cost of plant installation is to be charged to the Gray's Crossing road. It will surprise me greatly, however, if the cost exceeds 50 cents a square yard. I believe it will be less than that when the new work is completed and costs are apportioned."

Harry Worswick, superintendent of paving operations for the county, who recently went to the front with the state troops will resume supervision of the surfacing early next week. He has been granted a leave of absence from his command and will remain here for about a month, perhaps longer.

The Milwaukie-Sellwood road just finished is 4,655 feet in length and is covered with 10,645 square yards of paving material, applied to a thickness of four inches. The approximate cost of the application, estimating that it cost $1,000 to install the plant and deducting half that amount, is $4440. From these approximate figures it is evident that the cost of the road will be less than 50 cents a square yard, which is considered a remarkably low figure by paving experts.

The Gray's Crossing road on which work has been started is a little more than two miles in length. The surface to be applied thereon will be 16 feet wide and 6 inches thick, bringing the cost slightly above that of the other undertakings.

DEMOCRAT ENDORSED

Temperance Union Ladies Pick Weth-erford to Carry Standard

At a meeting held at the Methodist church on Monday, the Clackamas county W. C. T. U. endorsed the congressional candidacy of Mark Wetherford, democrat, and pledged themselves to support him that the standard of their own cause might be advanced.

Mr. Wetherford, an Albany resident, is seeking office from this congressional district and is the only republican candidate in the field. He has always been an ardent worker for the right he construes to include temperance. Mr. Wetherford was in the city on Tuesday afternoon and met several of the ladies of the W. C. T. U.

J. W. Price, of Parkplace, was a speaker at the meeting on Monday advocating the direction of the energies combined in the W. C. T. U. along three important lines. These he classified as the defeat of the so-called Brewer's amendment, the passage of the absolute prohibition amendment and the election of officials pledged to work in the interest of temperance and prohibition.

Molalla Man Injured

James Marts of Molalla was painfully and seriously injured on Saturday when he was thrown from a buggy when a team he was driving ran away. Mr. Marts, who was well along in years, was thrown from the vehicle in such a way that he struck on his shoulder, breaking the shoulder blade and bruising and cutting him about the face and arms. One of the horses of the team became frightened at a passing vehicle and started the run which ended so disastrously.

Tooze Asks Encouragement for Night
School Idea in Connection With High School

Urging consideration of a plan to hold school classes throughout the year, making the work lighter than ordinary in the summer months and optional with the pupils during those months, F. J. Tooze, superintendent of Oregon City schools, late last week distributed the annual report on the schools of the city. The report is dated July 3, although it was not published in pamphlet form in time to distribute it by that date, and the school board has already taken steps to carry out a number of the recommendations of the superintendent.

In connection with the full year school idea the report says:

"There are many children idle during the summer months who could be thus employed advantageously to health, moral, physical and mental growth and to many children, backward in their studies, it would mean a saving of valuable time and a better training along vocational lines than possible under present arrangements. While I do not recommend such plan for immediate action, I do urge its consideration for the future."

As incidental to the full year of school work Mr. Tooze advocates the payment of teachers on a twelve month basis rather than for nine months of work as at present. He points out, in the same connection, that teachers in the Oregon City schools are underpaid, as compared with teachers in other cities. The board has already met this difficulty in part by increasing the salaries throughout the system.

"In my judgment," says Mr. Tooze, "teachers should be paid by the month for twelve months even though the total salary schedule remains the same as now and paid in nine months. This plan will encourage teachers to better prepare themselves during the summer months by additional study at normal school or university and will stimulate in them a higher regard for the profession in which they are engaged and will redound to the benefit of the community they serve."

Showing the economical administration of the schools Mr. Tooze publishes a table of comparative tax levies for school purposes and Oregon City's 6 mill levy is lower than either Marshfield, Medford, Ashland, McMinnville, Astoria, Hood River, Salem, Eugene, Cottage Grove, Grants Pass, Lebanon, Pendleton, Forest Grove, Newberg, La Grande or Gladstone.

The total amount of tuition from transient students for the year amounted to $7095, of which $6964.44 was collected from high school pupils. "True to the promises made to taxpayers of Oregon City relative to the construction of the second unit of the high school building this high school tuition alone will pay the bonds issued for this purpose ($20,000) in four years with a surplus, interest included, of $4,000," says the report.

Other statements and recommendations made by the superintendent are as follows:

"Manual training work should be extended and I therefore recommend the installation of a turning lathe and a band saw with the accessories for next year. A few additional tools are also needed." This recommendation has been acted upon by the board.

"The library is in need of a small appropriation for the purchase of a few volumes not scheduled for purchase from the state fund and for the completion of a few sets. The total number of books in the library at the high and grade schools is: High school 894, Eastham, 1325, Barclay, 1180."

"There is a demand prevalent throughout the state and nation for the stimulation and development of interest in agriculture through instruction in the actual tilling of the soil using for this purpose the school garden, usually attached to, or forming, a part of the school property. The cost of such work here would be small and I believe more than justified by the results."

"The schools should be leaders in the social and civic progress of the community and to this end I recommend: (a) That the high school campus be graded and the landscape and playground features be completed at once. The city has a beautiful park adjoining the high school and the two blocks when completed, from an architectural and civic standpoint, will be difficult to surpass in any other community anywhere. For this purpose money is now appropriated."

"I believe the youths who have left school to work and who still earnestly desire a more adequate education, should have the advantage of a regularly planned and conducted night
