

A COMPARISON

You wouldn't drink from a rusty tin cup with a clean glass at hand! Well then, why pay as much, or nearly as much, for a pump with a metal valve seat

AS FOR A
Myers Pump with the PATENTED GLASS VALVE SEAT?

Metal Valve seats may corrode or rust. GLASS VALVE SEATS CANNOT. Metal Valve Seats harden the check leathers quickly. GLASS VALVE SEATS DO NOT. The patent Myers Glass Valve seat is well protected, and is as lasting as any metal seat and far superior.

The Shelburne Pattern

with its pleasing lines of colonial simplicity, is really an achievement in silver plate. It is plated from twenty to fifty per cent heavier than standard brands, and sells at a price within the reach of all.

Backed by the name Gorham, which is a synonym for all that is beautiful in the art of the silversmith, it has won a distinct prestige for wedding and anniversary gifts.

The Shelburne pattern is an exclusive jeweler's pattern and is handled by us exclusively in Oregon City.

Anti-POULTRY THIEF Assn. of Clackamas County

SEEN FROM THE OPTIMIST'S TOWER

The Oregon Journal says: "In the United States in 1913 fifteen persons out of every thousand committed suicide." We don't know what we'd be tempted to do if we were tied to the women some men have to put up with. Since the war has raised the price of clothing modern styles remind one of a commercial man's salad: "Some chicken—no dressin'." It is refreshing amidst ravings of a futurist painter to run across those sweet, modest little women who remind one of mother. The others are all right for a mild flirtation—if one has any stomach for such recreation, or if one is immune to painter's colic—but when it comes to selecting a chum for life the average man wants one who will use her own brains as well as her husband's pocket book.

The Albany Democrat says that the European war has so increased the value of nickel that our five cent piece now has in it six cents worth of metal. One of these days some Carnegie will be gathering them all in, melting them down, and selling them to the warring powers at a big margin.

The Gresham Outlook says that the name "Kelley" is derived from "Keel-ey," meaning "For war." We always thought Kelley was a sovereign specific for booze.

What a gay and festive thing the English tongue is anyway! A prim old-maid schoolteacher was hired as proof reader on a Boston daily. She was a great stickler for correct English, but one day the cub reporter got this through:

"Early this morning Willie Brown was burned in the West End by a live wire.

Next day the cub found a frigid note in the schoolman's precise hand on his desk. It read:

"Which is the west end of a boy?"

It took but one minute for him to dash off this reply:—

"The end the son sets on, of course!"

Mrs. Atkins was dissatisfied with the number of times a gentleman of the colored persuasion came to see her cook. Finally she decided to protest.

"Mirandy," she said, "when you came to me you said you had no man friends. Three times this week I have found the same man in the kitchen. How's that?"

"Bressa yo' heah, honey, dat fool niggah aint no frien' ob mine."

"No friend of yours! Who is he then?"

"Lan sakes, Miss Jane, he's jes' ma husband!"

A great deal of our theology comes from the fact that some old fellow doesn't read his Bible right, and we take his misinterpretation for Gospel-fact. A Sunday School teacher up in Eugene—or somewhere—did this. He told a class of little girls his version of the story of Elisha and the scolding children. He ended with the astounding information that two she-bears came out of the wood and ate forty-two of the offenders. Then he asked impressively:

"What lesson does this teach us, little children?"

A few moments of thoughtful silence was finally broken by one small girl, who responded:

"Please sir, it shows how many little children two she-bears can hold."

No one can deny the logic of the answer.

One of the most ancient books on earth has in it the injunction to "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Like the Sunday School teacher, too many of us read into religion—or our politics—our own preconceived ideas of what should be right, or the mistakes of some other duffer who knows no more of the matter in hand than we do ourself, instead of using the gray matter necessary to find out the actual truth. When a man's theology or his politics becomes a closed circle, he might as well die and go to heaven—or to Chicago. The world has no new thrills for him. He has reached the dead-line, and is ready for the chloroform and the bone-orchard. God's revelation is one that unfolds through the ages. It took sixteen hundred years for the Bible to be completed from the time its first chapter was written until the last was closed. Some of its songs were even older than that. The power of the Bible lies in the fact that men worked out God's ideas and God's will into living, then wrote the record of the resultant truth. And each century men get a new grasp of truth, and understand more fully the great universals of the revealed Word.

When the Optimist was a kid he solved the whole question of the atonement of Christ for man. There are eight great theories of the atonement, and a dozen or so minor views. But he had the only orthodox view. All the rest were tommyrot. Every man who differed from him was an ignorant and a heretic. He has a good many more gray hairs and whiskers than he had then, and his more mature judgment is that he knows just as much about how God does things as his other neighbors, no more, no less; and that is just—nothing. And he does not care so much HOW the Infinite deals with men in Christ. So long as he knows that God does save men through the work of the Saviour and their surrender to Him, he is willing to leave the method of operation to be solved in some future age when he shall know a little more. He is not afraid to say: "I don't know!" and to be willing to learn wherever truth can be found.

Ripon, a little college town in Wisconsin, was given an appropriation of $75,000 for a new federal building. They promptly declined the gift, saying that they could shuffle along somehow for a while yet in their old quarters, and that they wished the money to be applied for national defence instead. We may not agree with their ideas of preparedness, but we cannot help but admire their true American spirit.

No anonymous attacks have been made upon anyone lately, so Optimist can speak upon that theme without being considered personal.

The more we know of some people the more we respect the rattlesnake. Crotalus Horridus is a homely beggar with a temper that is a cross between a bumble bee and a buzz saw. But he has one redeeming feature, he always fights fair. Out in the Rockies the Optimist ran across a magnificent old fellow who whizzed like a threshing machine when he hove into his field of vision. He sat down on a rock and watched his snakeship. The reptile soon silenced his buzzer, but watched the human until it dawned upon him that he was a harmless sort of lunatic, when he slowly untangled himself and crept off about his business. Crotalus is a firm believer in the original Monroe doctrine. Sturdy, and bluff and above-board, he has not a single drop of coward blood in his veins. He never runs. And, without he feels that his life is in immediate danger, he always warns before he strikes.

I respect the rattlesnake a thousand times more than I do the coward who hides in the darkness and stabs with a poisoned pen at the reputation of some public man or woman. Serving the public weal is a thankless job at its best. It is strange that all the good deeds a man has ever done are forgotten the moment he makes a slip, no matter how small! The anonymous muckraker is a moral "Black-hand." I should have said—an immoral one. Sweet flowers blossom in the gardens of nearly every life, and we should look for their fragrance and beauty instead of burrowing in the sewers of human infirmity. The anonymous slanderer is not concerned with the true and beautiful. The craven is afraid to come into the light to back up his charges with his name and his manhood. Compared with him the rattlesnake is a polished gentleman. He may be correct in his conclusions, but the very fact that he is afraid to come into the open to state them leads all thinking men to suspend judgment.

Have you ever noticed that while the rattlesnake fights by day and in the clear, there is another animal that makes his attacks by night? You avoid Crotalus because you are amply aware of his intentions. But you are never able to tell of the other fellow's proximity until you pass on the leeward side of him in the dark. Crotalus, like a doughty knight, meets you face to face and strikes from a stalwart spine. Attempt to fight the other animal and all you meet is thin air and an excruciating smell. When you have mastered Crotalus you stalk home in all the pride of conscious victory and boast to your neighbors about it. After you have slain the other brute you sneak home across lots and through alleys, and bury yourself for a week before you venture to associate with refined society; and even then people of delicate sensibilities will look at you reproachfully and pass by on the windward side.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that you should emulate the rattlesnake—in his good qualities—and give the skunk a wide berth. A man should never scrap unless he has to. For the sake of humanity, right and justice sometimes a miniature Killenny fair is a necessity. Laugh at men's little follies all you will. The world and the victim will laugh with you, for they all know that we love them because of those very quirks of character. But when you must strike, be a clean fighter and a strong hitter. Stand in the open, leaving the underhanded and the treacherous to a certain feld carnivorous quadruped of the weasel family, whose name it is not necessary to mention.

—Optimist.

MISS CRITES WINS

Woolen Mills Company Settles for Injury by Payment of $2500

Miss Lela Crites and the Oregon City Woolen Mills have averted possible court action by the settlement of the claims of Miss Crites by the company out of court. Miss Crites, the daughter of James Crites of Gladstone, lost a hand as a result of an accident while employed at the mills here and she started action for damages. The hand was caught in a machine at the mills on June 9, 1916, and was so badly torn that it had to be taken off at the wrist.

Miss Crites, who is seventeen years old, agreed to a settlement with the mill company upon the payment to her of $2500, and her father has been appointed guardian by the county court. It is understood that Miss Crites will make use of her money in the purchase of a home at Gladstone.

Found guilty of that clause of the law which prohibits intoxicating beverages at public gatherings, Jack Travers, of Cascade Locks, tried at Hood River before Justice of the Peace A. C. Buck, was fined $100. Travers is the first man found guilty of a liquor charge in Wasco county since the prohibition law went into effect.

Obituaries

William Wagner

William Wagner passed away at his home at Rupert station late Wednesday evening and was buried at the Milwaukie cemetery on Saturday. He had been a resident of Rupert station for four years and is survived by his widow, an adopted daughter, five brothers and one sister.

Mr. Wagner was born at St. Johns, New Brunswick and at an early age moved to Nebraska with his parents, where he lived until he came to Oregon with his family four years ago.

Mrs. Anna E. Moshberger

Died, at the residence of her niece, Miss Martha Bohren, 66 E-22d street, Portland, Mrs. Anna E. Moshberger, of Molalla, on August 2, at the age of 74 years and 4 months.

She was born in Switzerland in 1842 and came to Oregon in 1889, was married to Fred Moshberger on Feb. 25, 1890, and lived happily with him to the time of her death. She was buried in Bear Creek cemetery on Friday, August 4, in the presence of many neighbors and friends from Portland.

FIREMEN TO FIGHT

Elimination Contest Staged by Men Who Would Attend Convention

Falls View and Green Point are to be represented in an aqueous combat by teams of firemen next week, implements of warfare being the fire hoses of the Green Point and Falls View companies and the motive being to pick a team to represent the local fire department at Corvallis next month on the occasion of the convention of the Willamette Valley Firemen's association.

Arrangements will be made by the department to raise approximately $150 to send 14 representatives to the meeting at Corvallis, and if possible the fire ladders will devise some means of getting such a fund without calling upon the business men who so well financed the convention when it was held in Oregon City last year.

ASKS $40,000 DAMAGES

Youth Injured at Molalla Recently, Sues Railroad Company

Through his guardian ad litem, Charles Palmer, Lionel C. Palmer, minor, has filed a suit against the Willamette Valley Southern company for the recovery of $40,000 damages for the loss of one leg.

The complaint in the circuit court alleges that the accident was caused by the negligence of the railroad company. The accident occurred near Molalla on June 11 of this year and as a result of it the boy lost the right leg and left foot through amputation. The complaint says that the lad attempted to board a train after railroad employees had told him the train would be held for him. The cars moved before the boy had boarded them and he fell beneath the wheels.

BUSCH ADDS TO STORE

Improvement Will Prove Attractive Feature to the Farmer

A basement bargain store is being added to the large establishment of Frank Busch and Sons on Main street, which will be used entirely as an exchange department for second hand goods.

A stairway 6 feet wide is being built into the basement from the ground floor. The basement exchange room will be 66 by 100 feet in dimension and will hold a complete line of second hand furniture for sale and exchange.

It is expected that the new feature will prove attractive to farmers and will be conducted in the same capable and courteous manner that has made other departments of the big Busch store so attractive to its many patrons.

Shower for Miss Henrici

A miscellaneous shower was given for Miss Myrtle Henrici at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Henrici, on Tuesday afternoon. Miss Henrici received many pretty and useful gifts.

The afternoon was spent in playing games and with music, after which refreshments were served to the following guests: Mrs. Henry Henrici, Mrs. Fred Henrici, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Fred Stiner, Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. Muir, Mrs. Charles Stiner, Mrs. Tremaine, Mrs. Heiling, Mrs. P. Stiner, Mrs. Blackburn, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. Londergan, Mrs. A. Staben, Mrs. Davies, Mrs. Mary Egginmann, Mrs. Richter, Misses Myrtle, Iren and Ethel Henrici, Martha Egginmann, Alena Hughes and Mina Blumh.

Miss Henrici and George Egginmann will be married in the near future.

Installation of new machinery at the plant of the Bend Water, Light & Power company, to care for the increasing demands of the town, is nearly finished and within 10 days the enlarged plant will be in operation. As soon as the new machinery is in operation the various wooden structures above the plant will be removed. This will enlarge the size of the pond. Water will be delivered to the turbines directly from the pond, and not by flumes as heretofore.
