THREE CONVENTIONS OF POSTOFFICE MEN

Approximately 350 visitors, including delegates and their families, attended the annual convention of state postoffice employees held in Oregon City on Saturday. The convention included the annual meeting of three state associations, the Letter Carriers, Rural Carriers and the Postal Clerks, and the day was a busy one for the delegates, numbering about 200.

The program of the day was auspiciously opened by Mayor E. C. Hackett, who delivered an address of welcome. Each of the three associations held a convention of its own, two sessions being held in the Commercial club rooms and one in Odd-fellows hall. An inspection of the woolen and paper mills, a street parade led by the Portland Letter Carriers' band and a big banquet at the armory were features of the program that especially interested observers. The delegates and their friends were also taken on an automobile trip to the concentration camp at Clackamas.

At the banquet held at the armory Gilbert L. Hedges acted as toastmaster and called upon a number of the prominent members of the three associations for brief talks. T. Leson Kirk of Bremerton, Wash., delivered the principal address of the evening and other speakers were Rev. James Elvin, Herman Wise, Carl Joehne, president of the postal clerk's association, John Edichson, president of the letter carriers, and Frank Whitman, president of the rural carriers. Each of the association officers are employees of the Oregon City office. Other features of the banquet were the music of the Canemah quartet and the popular repertoire presented by an orchestra. The banquet was concluded with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by those in attendance.

Albany will be the scene of the next annual meeting of the three associations and the meeting will be held on the last Saturday in June, 1917. A tribute to the service of two of the state presidents who are employed in the Oregon City office, came with the re-election of Carl Joehne as president of the Postal Clerks' association and the re-election of John Edichson as president of the Letter Carriers' association. Mr. Whitman, president of the Rural Carriers' association, was re-elected Saturday. Other officers of the Postal Clerks' association elected Saturday are: Vice-president, T. H. Harris of Portland; secretary-treasurer, J. H. Buttler of Portland; state organizer, S. B. Dodge of Newberg; sergeant-at-arms, E. R. Lemmon of The Dalles; member state executive board, W. H. Worrell of Albany, and Carl Joehne, Oregon City, was elected delegate to the national convention of postal clerks. Other officers of the Letter Carriers' association are: Vice-president, D. R. Grush, Astoria; secretary-treasurer, Fred P. Holm, Portland, re-elected. The rural carriers elected the following officers: President, L. H. Peak, Newberg; first vice-president, B. E. Sellek, Boyd; second vice-president, L. D. Howard, Portland; secretary-treasurer, M. E. Willis, Yamhill; member executive board, E. B. Cornett, Albany; delegate to national convention, R. W. Smith, Springfield.

The rural carriers voted for the purchase of a large American flag which will be prominently displayed at all future meetings of the association. The banner was purchased and presented by a former soldier, E. E. Chitman of Gresham, who delivered it to the president with a stirring patriotic address.

LOGUS PLAYS JOKE

Superior Enjoys Odor of His Favorite Fruit

When Major Eugene Moshberger, of the Second battalion of the Third infantry, left Portland he also left behind his greatest delicacy, limburger cheese. You can't buy it in Clackamas.

Major Moshberger grew downhearted and then morose as the result of the lack of the noisy fruit. First Lieutenant Logus, of company G, and other sympathetic friends secured a large block of limburger recently and placed it under the sleeping major's nose.

In the morning he awoke and later expressed himself as greatly refreshed. The scent of the cheese lingered in the major's tent.

Charges Non-Support

E. Vera Nelson not only wants to resume her maiden name, E. Vera Powell, but she wants it distinctly understood that Charles E. Nelson, whom she married at that matrimonial center of population, Vancouver, Wash., on November 7, 1914, has not contributed to her support since that fatal day. Mr. Nelson took his bride to the home of his parents in Yamhill county and she has resided there since. She comes to Oregon City only for legal assistance in expediting her divorce. There are no children or property rights. Non-support forms the burden of the theme of the complaint filed late last week.

SOLDIERS OFF TO MEXICAN BORDER

PARTING FAREWELL GIVEN BY GREAT CROWDS ON DEPOT PLATFORM

SIDELIGHTS ON CAMP LIFE

Ladies and Live Wires Pay Honor to Company G at Great Public Reception

They're off to the war! Oregon City's quota of citizen soldiers entrained last evening for the Mexican border and passed through their home station a few minutes later to be greeted by the shouts and the cheers, and a full share of tears from loving eyes that can picture no picnic for sons, brothers or sweethearts who bear the burdens of the nation.

The boys, together with all members of the second battalion and Battery A, bore up bravely as the order came to pack and depart for a service under arms that is a big question mark in the minds of all concerned. Hundreds of mothers and fathers and sisters and brothers, with the sweethearts standing shyly by, were at the station to greet the troop train carrying G company as it passed through Oregon City last evening. The gay, joyous throng, if there was such a quality in the face of the departure of loved ones, was so deeply submerged in sentiment that even to smile cheerfully as the boys in uniform waved their parting farewells was difficult and the platform reception was sombre, if not sad.

And as the train sped on toward its southern destination, with a right-of-way over any train on the track, there was a sigh from every breast on the platform and a tear in every heart. Most of the tears were not of the kind that are dabbed away by a square of linen; they were tears from the depths of loving hearts.

An enthusiastic and patriotic farewell reception was tendered to the members of Company G, O. N. G., at the court house on Tuesday evening with a great many townspeople and the entire strength of the guard organization in attendance. The reception was made one of the most successful events held in this city in years by the close cooperation of the ladies of Meade Relief Corps and the Live Wires of the Commercial club, and its most important feature from the viewpoint of the guardsmen was the bountiful spread that was provided for them upon long banquet tables.

Ladies of the relief corps were hostesses at the big banquet which was held at Willamette hall. The tables were spread with the most tempting array of edibles that the guardsmen are likely to see for many moons and in justice to their appetites it must be said that they took the greatest advantage of the sight. Immediately after the banquet the guardsmen and citizens went to the armory and the program of the reception was held. Capt. J. P. Apperson delivered a very interesting and a highly patriotic address, pointing to the pride of the city in the company it has sent to the service of the nation's flag. Circuit Judge J. U. Campbell extended his oratorical ability in greeting the guardsmen and in wishing them well on their journey to southern borders. The judge spoke with the heart of every one of his large audience. Captain Lowell E. Blanchard, commanding Company G, responded to the remarks of the speakers of the evening and told of the ambitions of the men of his company. He was brief and to the point in hinting at the valor of service and of the part his command hoped to take in possible border frays. Other officers of the company, Lieutenants W. R. Logus was called upon for a brief talk.

The Fallsarian quartet, comprising the Hollowell brothers, Thomas C. Burke and Victor Gault, sang a number of songs. Their repertoire was one of the features of the reception and included songs of patriotic tone. The men of G company were granted a leave of absence from the concentration camp at Clackamas that they might attend the reception and the last meeting of the Live Wires was postponed temporarily so that the members of that organization might take part in the reception to the soldier boys. Capt. H. E. Williams presided.

Fully fifteen hundred automobile parties visited Camp Withycombe at Clackamas on Sunday, and each car is estimated to have carried at least five persons, thus making the total number of people brought to Clackamas in motor cars about 7,500. In addition to these the trains from Portland and the south carried several times the usual number of cars and every train that stopped at Clackamas held great crowds. In every train throughout the day the standing-room-only sign was taken.

COUNTY IS PARADISE FOR THE SPORTSMAN

CLACKAMAS SCENIC ATTRACTIONS NOT EQUALED IN STATE OF OREGON

While the railroad companies and other counties are claiming all honors as the "mecca of sportsmen," "fisherman's paradise," and such other euphonious titles as would distinguish the one and only section of the state where sport abounds, Clackamas county rests easily on her laurels, occasionally pointing with boastful pride to her own attractions for the sportsman.

When it comes down to matter-of-fact argument Clackamas county has greater reason to boast of her charms as a sportsman's paradise than all other sections of the state combined. Where can be found the sundry collection of fishing streams of all sizes and styles that are within the borders of old Clackamas county? There's the Clackamas itself; why, the cream of the fish family lives in that stream. You might point out to the boastful from elsewhere the Molalla, it's north fork or the main stream; you might allude in passing to Johnson Creek, not so well known as Eagle Creek, the Sandy or Trout Creek, but literally alive with gamy fish.

We do not overlook the Willamette, which, at Oregon City, is famous throughout the nation for its salmon, but salmon fishing is out of season and there are too many other attractions for sportsmen to brag about anything out of season.

Perhaps your sportive friends would not care to accompany you to the rugged banks of any of the streams mentioned. There may be other spots in nature's garden where equal sport could be found if the old machine is oiled and ready. For instance, Beaver Creek, Mill Creek, Clear Creek, Bear Creek or the Salmon River, that beautiful stream that bubbles on to its end through the magnificent shade of the awe-inspiring Mt. Hood. Travel these streams; see the home charms before you listen to the pleas for recognition made by others.

Besides its rightful title to the greatest scenic section in the state of Oregon, if not in the northwest, and that is synonymous with the United States, Clackamas is entitled to record in the annals of famous lands as the "sportsman's paradise" and "the mecca of the sportsman." Surety, among those who have brushed their feathered hook over the waters of Clackamas county streams, none dare gainsay such evidence. Nor are they able to point out another county, another section of the state that could possibly deprive Clackamas of her rightful laurels.

HAWLEY MILLS CLOSE

Big Plant Stops Work to Greet Departing Soldiers

Another evidence of the true patriotism of W. P. Hawley, president of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company, came to light yesterday afternoon and evening when the great institution over which he presides was ordered closed down temporarily while the employees gathered at the Southern Pacific tracks to bid a last farewell to the troops of the Oregon National guard.

Mr. Hawley had his men keep the mill whistles going from the time the arrival of the troop train carrying Oregon City's soldiers was announced until it arrived, and as it pulled out again the blasts echoed a parting greeting. Practically the entire force of Hawley's employees gathered at the railroad to greet the men of Company G and other friends among the citizen forces.

FOURTH AT SCHOERR'S

Deutscher Verein to be Host at Patriotic Celebration at Park

Under the auspices of the Deutscher Verein of Oregon City a big, patriotic celebration is being planned for the Fourth of July at Schoerr's park and a detailed program has been outlined by those in charge. The program presages a large attendance from all parts of the county.

The day will be spent in a general good time and the musical features provided will be one of the attractions. The new pavilion at the park will be turned over to the dancers and the children will be given full sway in the play grounds, which are provided with much equipment. Luncheons and refreshments will be served. A nominal admission fee has been set.

Buys Auto Hearse

The hasty funeral has come to Clackamas county with the purchase of the first automobile hearse of which the county can boast, by R. L. Holman, the undertaker. The new vehicle is a tribute to the carriage maker's trade and the machine is one of the popular makes. Mr. Holman had the hearse made to suit his special needs and directed the planning of the beautiful body.

The voters of the Oswego school district on Monday night elected L. Hallinan as director on the school board. Unanimous vote elected John Bickner as clerk.

MARTIN NAMED TO LEAD VOLUNTEERS

GANTENBEIN'S SELECTION NOT HEARTILY WELCOMED BY LOCAL VETERANS

COMPANY IS TO ORGANIZE

Williams and Kelly Named Junior Officers Under Martin, Who Is of Portland

Until the troops of the Oregon National guard had recruited to full strength Captain H. E. Williams allowed the formation of a volunteer company of infantry in Oregon City to lag, but, since the troops have departed, there is nothing further to delay the enlistment of a company. Captain Williams has received the promise of a large number of men who could not join Company G, who will ally themselves with the new company when it is formed. It is probable that actual enlistment of the new organization will commence within the week.

Meanwhile, Colonel C. U. Gantenbein of Portland proceeds with plans for the organization of a regiment of Oregon volunteers with the candid opinion that such a force will be called to the front as soon as it is ready for service.

Colonel Gantenbein, assisted by his lieutenant, Colonel W. E. Finzer, former adjutant-general of the Oregon National guard, and Major Charles E. McConnell, has selected the commanding officers and lieutenants for the several companies that are proposed. Contrary to expectation, Oregon City volunteers, if they ally with Colonel Gantenbein's regiment, will be in command of G. W. Martin, former second lieutenant of Company I, second Oregon infantry. The first lieutenant, if Martin accepts the command, will be Harry E. Williams, whom it was thought, would command any company formed here. If Mr. Williams is willing to accept the lieutenantcy H. Leighton Kelly will be second lieutenant.

The new regiment will be made up of companies from several sections of the state, including Oregon City, if the schedule outlined by the commanding officer is acceptable to the officers whom he has named here. Former guard officers in several cities have asked for permission to recruit a company and take its command. In Portland the proposed company is practically recruited, and little trouble is anticipated anywhere that an organization is authorized.

It is pointed out by Captain Williams that a volunteer company in Oregon would be composed of the best military talent in the state. There are any number of men who have served long terms in the guard, including former guard officers, who would be glad to see service with a corps of experienced volunteers, but who hesitated about enlisting with the young men of the regular guard companies. These volunteers, would be older in age and experience and at this time one of the most efficient regiments that has ever been recruited in the service in this state. Most of the officers would be men who have seen actual service; especially would this be true of company commanders and their superiors. Enlistment blanks will be prepared soon and in the meantime blanks are being circulated to get names of possible members for a company here.

GRAHAMONA ON BAR

Captain Steers Boat in Wrong Channel and Sticks on Sand

When Captain Bloom of the Grahamona, an Oregon City Transportation company's river steamer, attempted a little research work in connection with the channels in the Willamette near Salem, his boat came to grief upon a sand bar in the wrong channel on Sunday morning and was seriously damaged.

A hole stove under her firebox was perhaps the greatest damage done and soon after the accident the Grey Eagle of the Spaulding Lumber company went to her relief. Efforts to pull her off the bar at that time were futile, however, and the Grey Eagle took the cargo and returned to Salem. The steamer Pomona of the same line was sent up the river on Monday and worked for many hours to assist the damaged sister. A bulhead was built around the Grahamona to permit of repairs to her hull. The boat rested on an even keel but her injury was in a very inconvenient place under the firebox where just enough water got in to shut off the draft and make the work of the pumps impossible.

Church at Mt. View

The little white church at Mountain View is the scene of a series of meetings being conducted by the Rev. J. K. Hawkins of the M. E. church of this city. Mr. Hawkins has been holding meetings in the well known church throughout the past week and will continue with them for several days.

LOCAL COMPANY HAS CAPABLE COMMANDER

OFFICERS OF G COMPANY HAVE SEEN MUCH ACTIVE MILITARY SERVICE

When G company, Oregon City's quota of citizen soldiery, limbers up for any action that may be allotted to it upon the Mexican border, it will be safe in the command of three experienced and highly qualified officers, who, in addition to knowing the military business from A to Z have the respect and admiration of every man in their command.

Captain Lowell E. Blanchard has been commanding officer of the local guard company for the past five years, and is a charter member of the company. He and his brother, Eldon C. Blanchard, second lieutenant, joined the company when it was organized and have been through the military mill from the distinguished position as high private in the rear rank, to captain and second lieutenant, respectively. Captain Blanchard in civil life is chief of police of Oregon City. He leaves a wife and children to answer the call to arms.

First Lieutenant William R. Logus

is a Spanish war veteran, and saw the severe service of that series of campaigns as a non-commissioned officer in the old Second Oregon volunteer regiment. He is prominent in civil life and leaves a fine family in this city to go after the brigands of the sister republic. Lieutenant Logus is the ranking first lieutenant of the third infantry and is conceded to be one of the most capable officers in the regiment. He is a charter member of the company and has been its senior lieutenant since its organization nine years ago. Several times he has refused promotion to the rank of captain, and it is probable that when he is elevated in the commissioned corps he will get one of the highest honors that can be bestowed upon an officer. Lieutenant Logus is a strict disciplinarian, but his personality wins the admiration of his men, with whom he is an equal and with whom he will welcome any fray that may be incident to the protection of the national honor. Lieutenant Logus is vice-president of the Gladstone Lumber company of Park place.

Second Lieutenant Eldon C. Blanchard sacrificed a position with the American Express company as its Aberdeen, Wash., agent when he heard the call to arms. He and his wife had recently moved to the Washington city, but they hurried back to their home at Oak Grove when the call came. Lieutenant Blanchard, like his older brother, is a thorough military man and his size and bearing point him out as one of the figures of the third infantry. Lieutenant Blanchard has been a student of military affairs and is versed in the tactics of the battlefields through this study. He also is a charter member of G company.

WEST LINN BUYS

Willamette Water System to be Connected with West Linn Mains

On Wednesday the details of the transfer of the Willamette water system and plant from James Downey to the city of West Linn were completed and as soon as the task can be started the pipes will be connected with the West Linn mains and water will be served through them to the patrons in the Willamette district. Willamette was recently annexed by West Linn, and by the incorporation can get water from the south fork. Heretofore it has had service from a privately owned system.

After considerable dickering West Linn was able to take over the water system after guaranteeing the consideration of $3,250.

Drop Charge Against Youth

Clair Harpole of Oak Grove was released from charges of evading the prohibition statute by District Attorney Gilbert L. Hedges and Sheriff Wilson because he joined a Portland company of the national guard and went to the concentration camp at Clackamas.

Harpole was arrested for breaking into an Oak Grove residence, stealing a bottle of wine and playing the good fellow's part with his friends. Local officials placed a charge of violating the prohibition law against the young man rather than charge him with burglary.

CHAUTAUQUA HAS A FINE PROGRAM

GREATER INTEREST IS SHOWN THAN IN ANY OF TWENTY-THREE YEARS

ASSEMBLY STARTS ON FRIDAY

Campers From All Parts of County Reserve Tents for Annual Gladstone Season

With a wealth of attractions, including 26 big programs of lectures, music and refined entertainment, the Willamette Valley Chautauqua will convene at Gladstone Park Friday, July 7, for a 13-day session.

Never before in the long history of Gladstone Chautauqua—23 years, to be exact—has there been so great a preliminary interest in the assembly, and the directors frankly state that the reason is simple indeed, for never before has there been a program which will in any way approach that of the 1916 chautauqua from the standpoint of merit.

Chautauqua headquarters is a very busy place. Secretary Cross this week finished the task of distributing some 15,000 official chautauqua booklets. Every family in Clackamas county has received one of these interesting folders; that is, an attempt has been made to send one to every family in the county and if any have been missed it is not the fault of the chautauqua management. Wednesday there were but a few hundred of these booklets left, so those who may have been missed had better drop a line to Secretary Cross at once.

Clackamas county will turn out at chautauqua this year as never before. In fact the 1916 chautauqua is to be a big "get-together-party," for Clackamas county folks primarily. Each day's mail brings to Secretary Cross word that "book parties" are being organized in almost every section of the county; that is, that ten ticket purchasers are sending in their names and $20.00 to the Bank of Oregon City, and are thus saving 50 cents on each ticket bought. The run on book tickets has already begun, though the opening date is over a week away, and this is another omen which causes the directors to smile and plan on the biggest year of all.

In former years it has been necessary for the chautauqua people to boost along their programs; this year, however, it is the unanimous opinion that the chautauqua program speaks for itself. The outstanding feature of the 1916 program is its general excellence, and at the same time the diversity of entertainment provided. There are to be 26 big auditorium attractions, four or five summer school classes each day of the session, daily baseball games by five fast Clackamas county teams, and interesting Forum hours each day at 11 o'clock, in which the "big" men and women of the state participate, and talk on the big problems of the day.

But, back to baseball for the moment. The competing teams this year will be the Oregon City Redmen, Clear Creek, Estacada, Wilsonville and Canby. The teams are all on a par, and some of the best amateur baseball ever seen at chautauqua will be in order. The games are played at 3:30 each afternoon, Sundays excepted.

The campers, too, are coming in droves to chautauqua, this year. Reservations for tents were made by a crowd of enthusiastic chautauquans from Estacada country Tuesday, and Canby people have already reserved more than a half dozen tents for the assembly. From Troutdale will come some 25 members of the community club at that place and the "white city" will be even more attractive than ever. Several hundred dollars have been expended in furnishing additional conveniences for the tent city inhabitants this year and those who take their outing at chautauqua will find every comfort which they might enjoy at home.

The program itself contains the names of some of the country's most brilliant scholars and most talented orators. Lou Beauchamp, a "repeater" at chautauqua some half dozen times, and yet always a favorite, will again be on hand. Others are the Hon. Victor Murdock, Sylvester A. Long, Judge R. M. Wanamaker, Dr. Ernest J. Sins, Wood Briggs, Dr. Eliot A. Boyd, S. Platt Jones, Frederick Vining Fisher, Charles Zuehl, Francis Labadie, Robert Parker Miles, Dr. Sutcliffe, Harriet Gunn Roberson and Eleanor Sanford Large.

In the amusement end of the program will be the New York City Marine band, Witpeksie's Hungarian Orchestra, Kekuku's Hawaiians, the Comus assembly, the International Operatic Company, Skibinsky-Welch Co., the Sequoia Male Quartet, the Riner Sisters and Elizabeth DeBarrie Gill, famous harpist.

All in all, it will be the biggest chautauqua ever. The gates swing open a week from tomorrow, Friday, July 7.

FIND COUNTY ROADS IN POOR CONDITION

MOTORIST BERATES MAIN ROUTES BETWEEN PORTLAND AND OREGON CITY

With Clackamas county road makers doing all in their power to correct the poor condition of the highways in the northern part of the county, an enterprising Portland motorist has taken upon himself to discover which road is best fitted for travel to the Clackamas county seat from the metropolis.

"Three main roads reach Portland from Oregon City and are used by hundreds of machines daily, still, neither of the two on the east side nor the one on the west side are in good condition," says H. C. Hayes, who made three successive trips to Oregon City in conducting his research tours.

"A run over each shows practically no choice, though in a showdown the route via East Eighty-second street and thence south might be slightly the best of the three.

"The commerce between these two cities carried on through the medium of the modern motor truck is immense.

"Almost every mile, as the car bumped over the road, it met some heavily laden motor vehicle, with its tonnage of foods and products bound for the city, while others returned with the supplies that must come to the smaller city from the larger.

"All along are pretty homesites and suburban places. They are pretty, but after a stranger has bumped the miles between them and the city, he can't help thinking how much more attractive that or this particular spot would be if only the road to it could be considered fair.

"The country deserves better treatment at the hands of those who pay for roads in Clackamas county.

"The road through Milwaukie, leaving Portland by way of East Eleventh street, is rough almost from the time that pavement is left in Portland until Oregon City is reached. Even Multnomah county's short portion of this road can stand attention.

"The west side road is fair as far as Riveria, but from there to Oregon City, which is more than half the distance, the road has nothing on the patented bump producers which are a part of every amusement park."

Mr. Hayes also toured the road up the south bank of the Clackamas. This was in fair shape, with the gravel well rolled in and even. This drive along the river is one of the prettiest and one of special interest at this time. The Clackamas is now a great river, swollen by the water of the melting snow in the mountains.

CARTLIDGE SUIT IS FILED BY MR. TOOZE

DEFENDANTS ASK SEPARATE STATEMENT OF CAUSES FOR ACTION

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cartlidge, the latter until recently head of the English department of the Oregon City high school, are defendants in an action for damages filed by City School Superintendent F. J. Tooze on Friday. Mr. Tooze alleges slander and asks that $20,000 be contributed from the Cartlidge coffers because of their statements against him.

The plaintiff recently filed an action against C. G. Miner, former principal of the high school, asking the same amount for the same reason. In the suit against Mr. and Mrs. Cartlidge he alleges that they are the authors of Bulletin No. 1, the much discussed publication distributed under the signature of "The Third Element," and asking for an investigation of the charges against Mr. Tooze. Mr. Cartlidge has admitted the authorship of the bulletin.

Mr. Tooze also alleges in his complaint Mr. and Mrs. Cartlidge caused delivery of certain parts of this bulletin to The Courier for publication, disregarding the fact that The Courier is believed to pay certain persons a regular salary for the purpose of gathering just such news items for publication in its columns.

On the ground that Bulletin No. 1, and that part of it published in The Courier were slanderous and untruthfully so, Mr. Tooze asks for damages to the extent of $20,000 in addition to the costs and disbursements incident to the suit. C. D. and E. C. Latourette and C. Schuebel represent Mr. Tooze.

On Wednesday attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Cartlidge filed a motion for dismissal of the pending action. The motion contains the allegation that the complaint filed by Mr. Tooze includes more than one cause for action, and that they are not pleaded separately. The motion is based upon a legal technicality and will be heard by Judge Campbell in the near future. Attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Cartlidge are Judge G. B. and W. A. Dimick and Will L. Mulvey.

The motion filed at the behest of the Cartlidges is not an attempt to evade the suit pending against them and is simply a request to have the
