DETERMINE BEEF COST

Extension Department Secures Interesting Data

Preliminary work of securing data on the exact cost of producing beef in Oregon has been begun by the animal husbandry department of the agricultural college in concurrence with the resolution adopted by the Oregon Cattle and Horse Growers association which met at Baker City, May 1.

This preliminary investigation was taken up by Professor E. L. Potter, head of the animal husbandry department, on a recent inspection visit to the eastern Oregon branch experiment station at Union. While investigations were of necessity very much limited, enough has already been done, according to Professor Potter, to indicate favorable outcome of the investigations, and he expects to be able to make a report of progress at the next meeting of the Oregon Stockmen's association which will be held in La Grande.

"The investigation will naturally proceed along two different though related lines," said Professor Potter.
"One of these will be the experimental feeding at the station, and the other the actual cost of breeding, feeding and managing cattle on the farm for the livestock market. Although methods and cost will vary greatly among different farmers, yet by taking a sufficiently large number of representative stockmen and averaging the results, it ought to be possible to arrive at a fair estimate of the actual cost of producing beef."

"An important factor in the cost of producing beef is the carrying capacity of the ranges. On this subject I have been able to get some very definite information." The figures are available to show beyond question that the carrying power of the ranges is vastly increased when properly controlled. Fencing is the most efficient means of control and even here the methods of fencing have a good deal to do with the efficiency of range management.

"Reports show that on one 10,000-acre range under fence eleven hundred head of cattle were kept. This is but little more than nine acres to the animal, probably about double the range capacity of the ranges in unfenced forest reserves, the next most efficient method of range management.
The figures are not at hand, however, to show just what the carrying capacity of the ranges are under forest reserve conditions, except in a few instances. It has been shown that on the Winona range, between Umatilla and Union counties, one animal to each sixteen acres has been maintained. This is the best showing so far reported."

"An investigation of the large fenced area showed that much of the land has been overgrazed while some of it had scarcely been touched. The tract was composed of foothills and low mountain ranges and was well set to bunch grass. On the lowlands near the farm buildings, from which the animals had been turned to the range, the grass was entirely eaten out and the ground well tramped. On some of the higher portions the grass had been almost undisturbed and was fast going to seed. This indicates that a fence should have been run between the over used and the unused portions of the range and a system of range rotation adopted."

SAYS TAXES TOO HIGH

Secretary Smith Visits County in Interest of League

"During the past 10 years taxes have increased 37 per cent per annum," says Robert E. Smith, secretary of the State Taxpayers' league, whose headquarters are at Roseburg. He is advocating an amendment limiting tax levies.

"I have been visiting all the towns between Roseburg and Portland," said Secretary Smith.

"Some of our members are doing well, but in other cases the matter has not been given sufficient attention.
Multnomah was among the counties delinquent in its quota. With reasonable response from Multnomah county we expect to have 17,000 signatures by the end of the week, and to be well over the number of 22,000 by July 1, at which time we hope to have enough names to file the petition."

"The tax limitation amendment," continued Secretary Smith, "has been carefully drawn up, and involves no technical language more than necessary in drafting a tax law. It provides that hereafter the tax levying bodies of the state shall have power to levy an increase of not more than 6 per cent over that of the preceding year. This will apply to the legislature, county commissioners, port districts, municipalities and other tax levying authorities. The people of the state or any of its subdivisions having the power to make tax levies can go to the people for authority to incur greater expenditures, or for the issuance of bonds."

Secretary Smith says he has found that the taxpayers of Linn, Marion and Yamhill counties are signing up the petitions rapidly.

Secretary Smith is anxious that all circulators turn in whatever signatures they have to his office in Roseburg not later than July 1.

A SHOT FROM THE RANKS

To the Editor:—

A rather attractive young woman, accompanied by a haughty mother whose loggnette gave her more trouble than the impending Mexican fracas, stepped pleasantly toward a group of guardsmen at Camp Withycombe the other day, and the gentlemen removed their hats as she spoke. She asked inconsequential questions and was answered by all but one member of the little group of soldiers.

He, a son of a worthy sire and himself a prominent young man in civil life, had a fleeting glimpse of a ballroom at the beach two years ago, when the troops were in camp. He stepped away from the little group as the picture came over his mind.
There he was again at Gearheart-by-the-sea! The music, the gaiety of the cool dance hall in the big hotel!
And he but a private in the ranks.
The call of the timed measure was too great, he brushed up his uniform, and prepared for the pleasure that awaited him.

A moment more and the young fellow stood in the dance hall door, watching the group of elect and of guard officers who gayly stepped about. One little lady in the hall knew our private well. Ah, yes! And in the heart of her was no thought of scorn. As our soldier lad stepped into the dance with her the society on all sides sneered behind daintily gloved hands, some of the brazen social beauties, who masquerade at such places, positively laughed aloud, although the young man's dancing would have made the pretty pieces of masculinity on the floor hide themselves in shame for their own attempts.

The sneers and the scornful glances were not because of our young man's dancing. Rather they were sneers at the uniform that covered him; scorn of the man who would wear the uniform of a soldier and a protector of his nation's flag and still think that he was as good as the "pretty" men and the "handsome" women who could spend their idle summers in the cool breezes from the great ocean. The soldier was beneath them, he was unfit to dance on the same floor with society's numskulls, and he was shown his place in no uncertain way.

As he found his uniform disgraced in the minds of his audience, dishonored by officers and those spindlegged chappies whose coats hung from shoulders that dared not carry a gun, the private sneaked sheepishly back to the camp ground and the dance went merrily on. The picture of the dance hall and its society faded from his mind as he turned to the young lady who questioned the little group of which he was a member at Camp Withycombe and he ascertained his recognition of one of the belles whose sneers had banished him from the dance floor years before.

The irony of fate has sent our private into the actual service for which he had been preparing himself while his scorned danced. He was ready for the fight for country and ready to protect those who had laughed him from their midst. Honor had come to his element through approaching danger. Society praised him and his fellows for their valor. Scorn was forgotten in the face of Mexican border trials.

But, can you criticize him for neglecting to remove his hat when he joined the questioned group again?
Can he be held culpable for forgetting to respect the young woman whose element had scorned him so recently for the very thing for which she was honoring him now? Can he be blamed for the thought that pointed him and his comrades out as immensely more valuable to the nation that harbors him than the social beauty who scorned and then attempted to honor him with her presence and her questions? Really, could he be guilty if he had stooped to tell her just what he thought of her kind? He was a gentleman, though, and, joined by his friends, he departed leaving a wondering beauty to reflect upon his own seeming snobbishness.

LAND MAY BE DRAWN

Tallmen Says Opening of Grant Will Be Hastened

"No time will be lost, so far as this department is concerned, in preliminary work necessary to be done before the agricultural lands of the Oregon & California grant are opened to settlement," says Clay Tallmen, commissioner of the general land office.

"It is impossible to give an approximate date when the first lands can be opened to settlement," he continued.
"We first have to determine exactly what lands are the lands in which title is reposed in the government.
While descriptions of the lands are given in the bill of complaint and the deed of the district court, and these are no doubt correct as to the great body of the lands, we will have to have accurate maps prepared, showing exactly all the lands unsold, patented and unpatented, to which the government resumes title."

"It is our purpose to have a preliminary map prepared from the information now available, under which the work of classification can proceed while the final descriptions are being worked out. The classification will be started as soon as possible, soon after the first of July, we hope. Plans under consideration call for this work being done by our local forces in Oregon, expanded to meet the requirements."

SAM WHITE ELECTED

Democratic State Committee Hears
Keynote Speech

Samuel White of Portland was elected chairman of the Democratic State Central committee by acclamation at the meeting held in Portland Saturday afternoon. In his speech of acceptance, he struck the keynote of the coming presidential campaign when he said the battle between Justice Hughes and President Wilson is to be decided in November upon the broad lines of true Americanism and not upon the narrow and circumscribed lines of partisan politics.

"The issues that confront our nation in this time of crisis are not the issues of narrow partisanship or petty prejudice, but are the broad, high questions of true Americanism," Judge White said. "I believe we can depend upon the true Americans of this state and of the nation to uphold the hands of the president in this time of crisis which now confronts us."

The newly elected chairman was empowered by the committee to appoint an executive committee of five and to appoint a secretary for the state central committee, acting with the advice of the executive committee.

Dr. C. J. Smith of Portland was unanimously elected treasurer of the state committee.

A vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered Bert E. Haney, the retiring chairman, for his faithful service as head of the state organization.

After organization had been perfected short addresses were made by E. H. Richard of Josephine, Dr. R. M.
Erwin of Washington, J. R. Coleman of Marion, Wayne Henry of Polk, R.
J. Moore of Yamhill, Sam L. Garland of Linn, George F. Johnson of Clackamas and others.

How to Get Rid of a Cold

Summer colds are serious. Read how C. E. Summers, Holdrege, Neb., got rid of his: "I contracted a severe cough and cold and could hardly sleep. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and the very first dose relieved me. I took a second dose before going to bed and can truthfully say I did not cough all night. By using as directed the next two days my cough was entirely cured and I give Foley's Honey and Tar full credit for my speedy recovery." Foley's always soothes and heals. Children love it.

SCOUTS IN CAMP

Cherryville District Presents Military Appearance

Clackamas has nothing on Cherryville. Cherryville has been imbued with the "war" spirit and has a real military camp where a large party of boy scouts from Portland are enjoying a summer outing and getting first hand training in scoutcraft by actual contact with the things and conditions they are taught to handle and to master.

The scouts are a part of troops 16, 19 and 20, in charge of the Rev. Mr.
Randall of Portland, and Scoutmaster McKenzie. Their camp is a military institution with a tent for headquarters, a mess tent, cook tent and 20 tents for sleeping quarters. The boys detained at Bull Run and "hiked" from that station to Cherryville, where they established their camp.
When they came within sight of their camp location the scout bugles blew melodiously "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," but after the youthful cooks had prepared a warm meal the tune changed to "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Scoutmaster McKenzie will keep the boys out for several days more and will initiate them into the mysteries of the forest primeval, and will instruct them in the lore of the woods and its animal inhabitants. The methods employed in the day of the Indian will be taught to the youngsters that they may be better fitted to cope with the conditions presented by nature if they come in contact with them in the performance of the humane duties for which the scout organization was started.

The scout camp is conducted with military precision and each night a detail is made to mount guard, in real soldier fashion, and the boys take long hikes through the woods as a part of their instruction. Between working spells the lads, however, are finding the keenest pleasure in their outing and are adept fishermen, as a result of their attempts to supply the cook with provender for a score of hungry humans.

Pioneer Who Lived Here

J. F. Miller, 78 years of age, who was one of the Indian war veterans who met in Portland last Wednesday, crossed the plains from Missouri in 1851 by ox-team. His father, Charles Miller, settled in Clackamas county on Molalla prairie. There the family lived several years. The first store in Silverton was owned by the elder Mr.
Miller.

The son learned the mercantile business under his father and worked for Jack Houston and Hamilton and Montgomery in their stores at Scio prior to 1876, when he removed to Grant county and went into the sheep business.

He ran a store in Prineville in the early nineties, and remained there until about eight years ago.

Mr. Miller served under Captain Bennett in Company F, First Oregon, in the war against the Indians in the fifties and now draws $20 a month pension.

He makes his home in Portland at present.
