MACKSBURG NOT HURT BY EARLY FALL FROST

FARMERS ARE PLEASED WITH GOOD CROPS AND GENERAL HIGH PRICES.

MACKSBURG, Ore., Oct. 5.—(Special)—The second month of autumn was ushered in by frost. It was so slight, however, that no traces of its blight are so far visible. The winter vegetables, including potatoes have their foliage untouched by cold, while all the flowers here are as bright as if there had been no frost at all. The late potatoes and the beans are promising an exceptionally fine crop and both are bringing a higher price than they have done before for years.

Jess Hepler who has been working the place owned by Mrs. and Miss Glade for several years has taken the ranch formerly occupied by Pete Norse, and will move his family there in time for the next year's work.

Ray Yoder has had the misfortune to lose a valuable cow in a way which may serve as a warning to other cattle owners. The animal's death was caused by overfeeding in clover. This may serve as a warning to cattle owners to whom the clover field offers it self as a temptation by the quick returns it gives in both quantity and quality of milk and cream. Rarely a season passes without at least one fatal case from this excessive feeding. The clover seems to be most harmful in the early morning while still damp and cold from the dew and sometimes from frost of the previous night.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. August Rothman who has been quite seriously ill, is on the way to recovery now.

Miss Agnes Kister who graduated with honors at the Ely school last year is entered on the roll of pupils at the Jefferson high school in Portland.

CLACKAMAS HATCHERY TO BE ONE OF BEST IN COUNTRY

With extensive improvements to buildings and grounds now under way completed, the federal fish hatchery at Clackamas will be one of the best in the entire country.

The main building of the new plant, a structure 58 by 100 feet, to be used for the hatching of eggs, will be completed early next month. With its completion, the present open structure will be no longer used for hatching eggs. A reservoir, made of concrete and with a capacity of 250,000 gallons, will be used when completed to hold young fish when they have grown so large that the hatching trays are too small for them. The reservoir will be 57 by 77 feet and will be 11 feet deep.

Near the banks of the Clackamas river a pumping plant is being installed by W. H. Howell, formerly superintendent of the Oregon City water works. The system will contain two pumps installed, each having a capacity of 1000 gallons per minute. One will pump the water from the Clackamas river to the reservoir, and a similar pump to be installed at the spring, which now supplies the present building with water for hatching purposes. An electric light system is to be installed.

The grounds surrounding the hatchery buildings are to be beautified. Gardens are to be laid out, which will surround the concrete ponds containing the young fish. There are five acres in all, and one of the most desirable locations for a fish hatchery. It is through the efforts of Henry O'Malley, who was formerly connected with the hatchery at this point, and who is now chief of the division of fish culture at Washington, D. C., that the improvements to the Clackamas fish hatchery are being made. Mr. O'Malley was succeeded at this hatchery by
