THROUGH ALL THE LITERARY and social atmosphere of the college commencements and reunions, there runs the plea for more money. The college president of the past generation was a leader in the paths of quiet scholarship. The college president of today is a business manager, one of whose principal functions is to drum up trade in the form of endowments.

The way the thing sometimes works out is illustrated in a bit of personal experience. The woman who was telling the incident was graduated 25 years ago this month from a well known college. She had been planning with eager anticipation to attend the class's quarter century reunion.

But a few weeks ago she received from her class officers a letter stating that it was urgently asked that every class member attending should give at least $25.00 toward a certain equipment needed by the college. The woman had not been prosperous in a worldly way. She felt that all who attended the gathering would be giving their $25.00 and more, and she stayed at home unwilling to reveal her straitened circumstances.

At the reunion of another class at the same college, it was remarked "What prosperous looking people we all seem to be!" "Yes," was the reply, "but less than a half of our class has come back. The rest may not be so prosperous." These class reunions are a thrilling experience of memory and reminiscence, but they bear down pretty hard on the graduate to whom money has not come easily.

Aren't the colleges over anxious on the money question? Is a perfect equipment quite as vital as they seem to think? Education is not in laboratories and libraries and luxurious dormitories. It is the leadership of bright, thoughtful, alert minded instructors. With a faculty of resourceful teachers, a college will send its students all over the world. It can wait with assurance for the equipment to come in due time.

THE SPOKESMEN of the Democratic party fairly revel in inconsistency of statement. How President Wilson can expect good teamwork from such a hodgepodge of amateur economists is a mystery to the practical man.

Edward E. Pratt, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in a recent address to the Export Managers' association at Chicago, predicted that after the war, labor in Europe will be scarce and able to command better wages, while taxes will be very high, giving Americans a better opportunity for competition.

Here is an acknowledgement, unconscious to be sure, on the part of a prominent Democrat that the European wage scale is an important factor in the cost of production, a contention which the Republicans have always upheld, and which the Democrats have almost invariably denied.

Mr. Underwood, in presenting the tariff bill which will forever stigmatize his reputation as a statesman, said: "It is not the cost of labor that counts so much as it is the efficiency of labor." * * * the unit cost of production in America is cheaper than abroad." This statement was made in the face of thousands of pages of expert testimony to the contrary, and the Solons of the Democracy solemnly bowed their approval. As a canon of economics it is a gem.

Speaking before the Boston City club January 27, 1912, President (then Governor) Wilson sprung this remarkable dictum:

"Any intelligent labor can compete with any pauper labor, and the intellectual absurdity of 'protecting' intelligent men from unintelligent is too patent to need explanation. When I hear the reports that tell of protecting the American laborers that I know of against the pauper labor of Europe, I can only smile that my fellow voters are so gullible."

When it comes to the question of cost of production, however, the president, like other Democrats, wobbles all over the road. In his address to the Economic club, Hotel Astor, May 23, 1912, he said: "It is hard for any man who has ever studied economics at all to restrain a cynical smile when he is told that an intelligent body of his fellow citizens are looking for the 'cost of production' as a basis for tariff legislation. * * * It does not exist as a scientific demonstrable datum fact."

He gave this statement his "cooked-hat" treatment when he referred to the power of the federal trade commission in his Indianapolis speech, and the way in which he "put one over" on congress: "The commission is authorized and empowered to enquire into and report to congress not only upon all the conditions of trade in this country, but upon the conditions of trade, cost of manufacture, the cost of transportation—all things that enter into the question of the tariff—in foreign countries as well as in the United States." Of course if the cost of production "does not exist as a scientific demonstrable datum fact," this particular power is as useless as the federal trade commission is in general.

Coming back to Mr. Pratt's statement, the history of the periods of European national readjustments following on the heels of international wars, will not bear him out. Naturally impoverished nations and prostrated industries will reduce instead of raise the wage scale. Theodore H. Price, editor of Journal of Commerce and Finance, points out there are some people with ability to look ahead who foresee "the reaction that will follow the war when the millions of men fighting shall resume peaceful industry at low wages and flood America with the cheaply made goods that impoverished Europe can not buy." But they are not Democrats who foresee this, and it is only by ousting the Democrats from control that the American laboring men can hope to escape drowning in the huge backwater of European manufactures which will submerge the American market if they are retained in power.

Some Things You Save by Becoming a Depositor

Becoming a depositor in this institution opens to you its many privileges and leads to broader business relations. With an account here you are in a position to ask and receive advice and accommodation when you desire it. A bank account is worth a great to you in convenience, security and added business prestige. We are always ready to serve you, are you ready?

THE BANK OF OREGON CITY
34 YEARS IN BUSINESS

IN MY OPINION THE ADVERTISEMENTS are from from being the least valuable part of the paper. I look them over carefully, and save at least five times the cost of the paper through the business advantage I get from them."

The above remark is credited by a newspaper exchange to a citizen of its home town, and it applies equally well in Oregon City.

The merchants are the purchasing agents for the people of the town. They make their report in the columns of this newspaper as to what they have been able to do for their clients. Every week there are notices of special values, which for some good reason or other can be had in the store of this or that merchant.

There are special exigencies in the daily history of every store which the newspaper advertisement tells about. A merchant finds a special opportunity to buy a large lot of valuable goods at a low price. No other store has them. To make a profit on the transaction, however, he must turn the lot over at once. He can not wait for the goods to be picked up as customers drift in by chance. He must let the whole town know about it in a systematic way, or the goods will move too slowly, and the deal prove a failure. The newspaper advertisement furnishes the only means by which he can solicit the whole town.

Similarly some merchant is constantly finding that he is overstocked on certain lines, and must turn his goods quickly to avert a heavier loss. The newspaper gives the news of it.

Changes like these are coming up all the time. The people who do not follow them through the newspaper are adding to their cost of living. The time to buy is when some one wants to sell. And if a man has anything that he must sell promptly, and at a price advantageous to the customer, he will not keep still about it, nor wait for the public to happen into his store by chance.

MEN PRIDE THEMSELVES on being independent, self contained creatures, who less than women are governed by style. Still it is a fact that there is much more individuality among women than among men, who drill after one another in a general goose-step.

Significant of this is the fact reported from Harvard University that but one freshman of that institution wears a moustache. Among the older men the hairy upper lip is more common, but it appears to be a declining habit. Many men would like to get rid of it, were it not that their friends would not recognize them.

Beards have very varied significances. Whiskers have commonly been accepted as a sign of rusticity. When the cartoonist wishes to portray the country man, he invariably adds long, bushy, and curling whiskers. The practical minded farmer sees no particular use in scraping off his chin daily, merely to decorate himself in the eyes of the women folks and alien farm hands.

At the other end of the scale, a beard has often been accepted as a sign of conservatism and solidity. In days gone by anyway, bank presidents and corporation magnates were quite apt to cultivate beards. Unlike Uncle Reuben's, they were neatly trimmed, usually to a certain square form. They gave an impression of substantial dignity and reliable dependability.

Today the smooth face seems to be the prevailing form. Many men who don't follow it would like to, were they not cursed with a tender skin. The shaven features give an impression of youth and alertness. Perhaps this counts more in the business world of today than the solid conservatism of a former time.

People are more critical of personal appearance than they used to be. Many men once thought that if they shaved once a week, it met all requirements of polite society. Hence the long line that used to fill the barber shops up to midnight on Saturday. Better is the most Reubenese growth of whiskers than the ill shorn face.

THAT THE ONCE SOLID SOUTH is recognizing the soundness of the Republican policy of protection is asserted by Hon. Alvah H. Martin, a prominent business man of Norfolk, Va., and a life-long resident of the southern states. When in Washington yesterday, Mr. Martin said:

I made the remark when President Wilson was elected that he would do more than any president since the war to disrupt the democracy of the solid south, and events that have transpired have convinced me that the prediction was correct.

Having been born and reared in the south, surrounded by all the sentiment of that section, and sympathizing with its policies, I felt sure that when the failure of his administration was generally recognized, as fail it must, there would be a more general reaction in this section against Democratic policies than had ever previously been shown, because it necessarily meant that all must acknowledge that a fair trial has been accorded these doctrines from a distinctly southern standpoint, and there is no future to look forward to along these lines with any hope of success.

The new tariff law has proved a complete failure. Not only has it failed to produce sufficient revenue for the needs of the government, but it has distinctly injured business conditions, and today the general cry of "hard times" is heard in every direction, whereas the country was more prosperous than ever before during the last year of the preceding Republican administration.

The only thing which sustains business at present is war orders for grain, food, ammunition and other supplies required for the European countries engaged in the world struggle, and this great contest causes a practical suspension of imports from the countries so affected, and gives a big balance of trade in our favor, while imports from the neutral countries are steadily increasing. Acting under the special recommendation of Mr. Wilson, congress imposed "war taxes" upon us, when the foreign war was actually helping business instead of injuring it. In addition to that the iniquitous and burdensome income tax has also been imposed for the first time, except as a war measure; and still the revenues of the government are steadily dropping behind, with the largest appropriations that have ever been made, notwithstanding the suspension of appropriations for rivers and harbors, public buildings and other expenditures which had been previously made with regularity.

At the last session of congress, Virginia was the only former Confederate state that had a Republican representative in the person of Mr. Slomp. In the present congress he has been again returned, while North Carolina gives us another, and the solid delegation heretofore coming from Louisiana has been broken. The recent utterances of the governors of Texas, South Carolina and other southern states, in regard to Mr. Wilson show decidedly that the trend of public sentiment is against him. The time is rapidly approaching when the south, probably more than any other section, will profit by Republican policies, and it will hail as a blessing, promptly and sincerely, a return to its former prosperity.

$8000 FOR MRS. HOGAN

BENEFIT GAME AT LOS ANGELES
DRAWS THOUSANDS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 25.—Eight thousand dollars was realized for Mrs. Wallace Hray, widow of the late "Happy" Hogan, in this afternoon's benefit baseball game at Washington park. The grandstand was filled and the bleachers partly crowded. Everybody paid.

Before the Venice Los Angeles baseball game moving picture comedians entertained the crowd. Howard Drew U. B. C. sprinter, circled the bases in 13.45 seconds, tying Hans Lobert's record. Hisherg of Venice won the 100 yard dash in 10.25 seconds. In a comic one inning ball game the Keystone Movie comedians played the Universals to a 19-19 tie. Many other sports were on the program.

Outfielder Maggett of the Angels, fell during the relay race and was so badly hurt he will be one the bench for two weeks.

RUGBY IS NOT FAVORED

COACH OF U. OF C. DECLARES INTRODUCTION WAS MISTAKE.

BERKELEY, Cal., June 26.—That the introduction of Rugby football to the University of California was a mistake in the first place and that its sponsors now see it, was the announcement made today by Jimmy Schaefer, coach of the college.

He announced his intention of starting east soon to take a "course on modern American football." He will conduct classes in American football as soon as the next semester opens, preliminary to the re-entry of California into the modern game.

"We never should have adopted Rugby and I think everybody knows it now," said Schaefer. "Not only that, but I predict that Stanford will abandon Rugby within the next year, if she doesn't do so this year."

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler has already absolutely approved the change back to the American game. When discussed with him before he started east he declared himself in favor of any change the student body endorsed.

"The persons who fathered Rugby at California originally soon saw their error, but they were afraid to go back to the old game and admit that their judgment had been at fault."

BEAVERS WIN AGAIN

STUMPF AND BATES BRING IN WINNING RUNS.

Pacific Coast League.
San Francisco $48
Salt Lake $12
Los Angeles $11
Portland $66
Oakland $72
Venice $53

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30.—Continuing their winning streak, the Portland Beavers today defeated the Oaks 3 to 1, in one of the most interesting contests of the last week.

The Oaks were the first to score in the second frame but in the third Ty Lober managed to make the circuit. Stumpf and Bates crossed the plate in the sixth, winning the game for the Portlanders. Lush and Prough were the opposing pitchers.

Jack Ness, first baseman for the Oaks, was not out in uniform on account of an abscess on his jaw. Gardner being put on first necessitated a change in the regular lineup. There will be three ladies' days this week as the result of Mayor Albee declaring Friday of the week of the Rose Festival a legal holiday. Today, tomorrow and Friday constitute the three days.

Today's batting order:
Oakland—Mundorff, rf; Marcan, 2b; Johnston, cf; Gardner, 1b; Elliott, cf; Litschi, 3b; Middleton, lf; Guest, ss; Prough, p.

Portland—Davis, ss; Derrick, 1b; Stumpf, 2b; Bates, 3b; Hilliard, cf; Spears, rf; Fisher, c; Lober, lf; Lush, p. Umpires—Williams and Finney.

GAME IS NOT POSSIBLE

MULTNOMAH AND U. OF C. WILL NOT MEET IN FALL.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 30.—Multnomah will have no chance to meet the University of California football team this year, at least. Positive information to this effect was received by Dow Walker, superintendent of the Multnomah club, yesterday, in the shape of a letter from John Stroud, Jr., graduate manager of the University of California.

Stroud acknowledges receipt of the telegram asking that Multnomah be included on its schedule, the game to be played either at Portland or at San Francisco, but declines for financial reasons.

Naturally, the annual Stanford-California game was the big money-maker, and since the break between the institutions and the return to the American style of game, this will do away with the Stanford tussle, which brought in more coin than all of the other games put together. Stanford will continue to play Rugby.

Stroud goes on to explain that it is hard to tell how much interest will be aroused over the Washington-California game, and thinks he had better go slowly toward scheduling any other teams until he sees just how it is going to turn out, and the Berkeley squad is able to hold its own with teams such as Washington and Multnomah are certain to turn out.

PRINTER'S ERROR IS FOUND IN DRY LAW

EUGENE, Ore., June 25.—All the 1915 statute books in the state of Oregon must be corrected. A mistake was made in printing the prohibition law. Sheriff G. A. Elkins, who called it to the attention of County Attorney J. M. Deyers. He took the matter up in turn with Secretary of State Ben W. Olcott, from whom he received a letter stating that the law had been engraved correctly and that the error had been made by the printer. Printed slips were being prepared he stated and would be mailed to all purchasers of copies of the statutes and to officials in whose hands copies had been placed.

The word "less" was used instead of the word "more" and made the general penalty, clause provided a greater penalty for the first violation of the law, than of subsequent violations. It removed the maximum limitation upon the extent of a fine, which, it is stated, would probably have made that provision of the law, if it had been printed correctly, unconstitutional.

The section of the law which appears incorrectly is as follows:

"Any person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, except in cases wherein the punishment is herein otherwise specifically provided, shall be fined not less than $500, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. And for a second violation of any of the provisions of this act, not thus otherwise here specifically provided for, such person shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than $500 and by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year."

PLAY-WRITER IS AT WORK IN THIS CITY

BUSINESS EFFICIENCY AND MODERN MANAGEMENT IS THEME OF COMEDY.

A three-act comedy with efficiency, office system and modern management in business as its theme is being written here by W. A. Wilkins, for presentation in Portland the first part of September.

Mr. Wilkins' home is in Seattle where he is the owner and proprietor of the Pacific Book Bindery. When he completed negotiations with the Franklin club of Portland for the staging of the play in that city, he came to Oregon to revise his play and is now visiting with his friends, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Herry, of the Bolton district. Mr. Wilkins taught Mr. Herry his trade as bookbinder years ago in Seattle.

The play, "Tapping at the Door," has been presented three times, twice at Seattle and once at Victoria. Each time the comedy has been rewritten, the author benefiting by the criticism of the press. Mr. Wilkins has written his play for business men and manufacturers and preaches the gospel of business efficiency, system, salesmanship and modern business methods.

Following the presentation of the comedy at Portland sometime between the first and the 10th of September, Mr. Wilkins is planning a trip through eastern states, the tour to extend over a period of a year. He has made arrangements to present the comedy at leading eastern cities, including Chicago and St. Paul.

Mr. Wilkins will stay in Oregon City until about the first of August when he will go to Portland to being rehearsals. He is now picking out the cast from Portland business men and women. The play has 26 characters, of which all but four are men. He will probably not take a part in the show himself.

CONFESSES MANY MURDERS.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 25.—A note found in the cell of Syd Jones shortly after he had been hanged here today, contained confessions of the murder of three white men and 10 negroes. "I am sorry I missed Richard Moore, September 12, 1912," said the note, "as I wanted to make it an even number."

CROUP

Rendered Harmless by Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It Masters this Terror of Childhood.

Of course it sears you to hear that loud, hoarse, croupy cough. You know the little throat is all choked up and the gasping, straining fight for breath must be helped at once.

"Oh, but that Foley's Honey and Tar is a wonderful thing for croup. Thank Heaven I had it on hand."

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND spreads a healing, soothing coating as it glides down the throat. It cuts away and clears out the choking mucus and soothes the inflamed lining. No more hoarse metallic coughing, no gasping, straining fight for breath, but peaceful breathing and quiet rest.

MRS. J. N. HILL, Homer, Ga., writes: "I find FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR never fails to cure our coughs and colds, and prevents croup. I can not say too much for it."

A good drugist is glad to sell FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR Compound because it is the best medicine for coughs, colds, croup, throat and lung affections that money can buy, and contains no opiates. In 50c, $1.00, $1.50 sizes.  EVERY USER IS A FRIEND. Jones Drug Co.
