CANADA'S ENERGIES NOW TURNED FROM WAR TO BUILDING

The new Dominion Parliament Building at Ottawa

Form houses of this type are springing up like mushrooms in Western Canada

The healthy condition of Canada as a whole is shown conclusively in the increase in the number and value of building operations throughout the Dominion. There is a building expansion in progress, which is not only caused by the fact that new construction practically ceased during the war, but also by the natural growth in population and wealth of our neighbor to the North.

In Halifax it is estimated that the value of building under course of construction is fully $5,000,000. The value for the building permits issued in 1918 was $1,900,000. There is activity in the ancient city of Quebec, where it has recently been announced that the famous Chateau Frontenac, an immense modern hotel, will have additions to cost $2,000,000. In Montreal, in addition to general building, a new court house has been promised to the city by Premier Gouin of Quebec, as the old one is no longer adequate for the growing needs of the Canadian metropolis.

Ottawa is putting the finishing touches on the new Dominion Parliament Building, now completed except for the central tower, the cornerstone of which was laid by the Prince of Wales on his recent visit to the capital. In Western Canada there is an activity which forecasts a big era of building. At Calgary, the value of building permits issued during August was more than six times as great as during the corresponding month of 1918. In Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon, Vancouver, Victoria and other cities there is increased activity to a varying extent. During the first seven months of 1919 over a million dollars worth of permits were taken out in Winnipeg, this notwithstanding the labor troubles there, which suspended this industry for a time.

It is estimated that the building permits taken out through the whole of the Dominion this year will exceed those of 1918 by at least 30 per cent.
