FROM THIS IT WOULD SEEM MARRIAGE IS NOT A FAILURE

The defendant, Walter T. Leaming in the case of Zella Bell Leaming against him filed a motion in circuit court Thursday to alter the decree of divorce rendered on September 23 last in this case. Accompanying the motion the defendant filed an affidavit setting forth the following facts: He states that prior to his marriage, Mrs. Leaming was divorced, and was drawing $15 a month from her first husband for the support of a child by him.

He further states that when she divorced him he turned over to her his business which was netting her about $200 per month and paid her also $25 per month for the support of a child by him. He also states that since the decree in his case was given in September she has married a man who is earning $40 per week and that this man is now supporting her.

He prays in his motion that the decree be modified in that he shall henceforth be compelled to pay only $15 per month for the support of his child instead of $25 per month as the decree sets out.

Greenhouses Are Heavy Storm Losers

The recent zero weather and heavy fall of snow did much damage to the conservatories owned by the florists near this city. Among the heaviest losers were H. H. Hughes, of Gladstone; Carl Starker, near Jennings Lodge; Byron's greenhouse also near Jennings Lodge.

A portion of the Starker conservatory fell with the heavy weight of snow on the glass, and it was necessary to do away with the fire in the furnace, causing a heavy loss, amounting to about $3500 in all, including damage to the building. Neighbors did what they could to assist the florists in saving their plants.

These florists feel the effect of their loss, as it is nearing Christmas and many were planning on having big sales of their flowers and plants.

The Darling greenhouse and the H. J. Bigger greenhouse did not suffer as those mentioned above. Fires were made continually during the night and the glass kept free of snow as much as possible.

Recent Cold Freezes Leghorn Pullets

Judge Thomas F. Ryan, whose farm is located in Gladstone, lost about 50 of his White Leghorn pullets recently purchased in California. These birds climbed to the branches of the trees when the snow storm of last week commenced, and it was impossible for the owner to get all down from the tree tops.

He managed to save 100. Every effort was tried by Mr. Ryan to save the birds before they died in the cold and thinks he is lucky in saving the 100 that had also taken to the trees. In one section of the county, one lot of turkeys that were to be sold for the Christmas market flew to the trees, and refused to come down to the ground even for the food placed beneath the trees.

At the last report they were still on their high roosts. Perhaps realizing that Christmas was night, they decided that it was just as desirable to be frozen to death as to "get it in the neck" like their brothers and sisters on Thanksgiving, when a large number were sold from the farm, where they were raised.
