CHINESE WOMEN HAVE FINANCIAL ABILITY.

They Carried Y. W. C. A. Campaign "Over the Top."

Much has been said about the honesty and skill of the Chinese business man. The world has neglected to mention the financial ability of Chinese women. They proved this ability in the last financial campaign of the Y. W. C. A. in Tientsin.

Ordinarily three weeks are allowed in which to raise the budget by subscription after the finance committee has decided upon the sum necessary to carry on the work of the coming year. The Tientsin campaign was carried on entirely by Chinese women and broke all records by going over the top in ten days with a large surplus over the budget.

ONE-FOURTH WORLD'S WOMEN IN CHINA

Seventy Per Cent. Employees in Shanghai Cotton Mills Women and Children Working Twelve Hour Shifts.

One-fourth of the women in the world, are Chinese—200,000,000 of them. They are going into industry in large numbers to work long hours and for little money.

In Shanghai, for instance, seventy per cent. of the employees in the cotton mills are women and children. Working hours for spinners are from six in the morning until six at night and from six at night until six in the morning. Weavers work from 5:30 in the morning until seven at night and the wages are from ten to twenty cents a day. Hundreds of women are employed in silk flature mills, standing hour after hour washing cocoons in basins of boiling water in the excessively hot rooms necessary for apartments where fine silk is spun. In Canton alone, there are 150,000 women in factories at a maximum wage of forty cents a day for women and of fifteen cents a day for girls.

As part of its program of world service for women the National Young Women's Christian Association is expecting to put on its staff of secretaries in China an expert on industrial conditions who will develop social work in factories and work to improve conditions for women employees. This work will include the introduction of recreation and social life among the workers and of health lectures and educational classes.

Y. W. C. A. STUDENTS TEACHING IN CHINA

Physical Training School Maintained in Shanghai.

The vast majority of Chinese men remember their mothers as cripples. Many a girl wanders into a mission school who has not had her own feet bound, but has never seen a woman of her own class who could walk, and, therefore, she walks in a most ungainly fashion—scarcely conscious of her

The Chinese Medical Association—an Association composed only of Chinese physicians mostly graduates from American and English institutions—have asked the entire educated community of the country to co-operate in better health for the children of China. All the Mission Boards operating in China felt that one of the greatest contributions the Young Women's Christian Association could offer to the health of China would be to establish a normal school for the training of physical directors.

Accordingly, in Shanghai, which is the greatest port in China, the national committee established such a school in 1914. The school has won favor with all educationists, both missionary and government. There have already been nine graduates from this school. Miss Ying Mei Chun, a graduate of the Wellesley School of Physical Education, has been dean of the school. Graduates of the school are scattered from Canton to Peking, teaching with conspicuous success in twelve mission and government schools.

The woodsman who asked a lady barber for a general cleanup and got one at cost of $375 for clothes, Christmas presents and such, really was treated with much consideration. ROCKEFELLER GIVES MILLIONS ON CHRISTMAS

New York, Dec. 25.—John D. Rockefeller's 1919 Christmas gift to the welfare and education of mankind—the largest single benefaction ever recorded—was $100,000,000.

The donation, $50,000,000 of which went to the Rockefeller Foundation, and $50,000,000 to the general education board, were announced here last night by Ivy L. Lee, Rockefeller's publicity agent. The gifts bring the total philanthropic benefactions of the multi-millionaire to approximately $450,000,000.

By the 50-year-old philanthropist's own memorandum the entire gift is to be available at once for the increasing salaries of the teaching profession, and for the "promotion and well being of mankind throughout the world."

The nearest approach to Rockefeller's benefactions was made by the late Andrew Carnegie, who gave away an estimated sum of $350,000,000, dying a "poor man" with $30,000,000 left. The recent public bequest of the late Henry C. Frick at first estimated at $117,000,000, finally was reduced to about $50,000,000 when federal and state income and inheritance taxes were deducted.

Modern Church + Physician to Body as well as Soul

Not Altogether Unhappy, But Not At All Healthy Children of the Types That Church Nutrition Clinic Makes Well.

RECIPE: To make sound adults, keep children well during their years of development.
"This formula is certain to be a success," declares Dr. Helen Wallbridge of New York City, who has made child health her life work. Dr. Wallbridge is now supervising the work of making 200 children sound of limb and body.

These children are members of the nutrition clinic established by St. George's Episcopal Church last February, for the purpose of demonstrating the efficacy of Dr. Wallbridge's recipe.

"There is nothing new in my methods," says Dr. Wallbridge. "The new thing is putting them into practice."

"The big question that is occupying the attention of the whole world to-day, is how are we to keep people well? The great war, with its terrible waste of life and health, has made us all realize, as never before, the value of life—and the great drawback of poor health. Well-established physical defects certainly cannot be cured by medicines or treatment in adult life and the number of such defects is appalling. The obvious remedy, of course, is to prevent adult disabilities by keeping the children well during their years of development."

Under the impetus of the Nation-Wide Campaign of the Episcopal Church, a special inquiry is now being made into child welfare—another evidence of the tendency of the modern church to minister to the body as well as to the soul.

The nutrition clinic at St. George's is one of two or three that are conducted under direct Church supervision. Two big sunny rooms on the ground floor of the Deaconess House are given up to the class, which started with two professional workers, a doctor and a nurse. A force of volunteers soon enlisted.

A most delicate problem was to get the children to attend, or having come once, to return. It was solved when the nurse established contact with the mothers and impressed upon them the value of having their children examined; urging that only a very few favored ones were to be invited. "Human nature," says Dr. Wallbridge, "did the rest. After that, the invitations to attend the class were awaited with eagerness, and many children having heard of the new 'play rooms' came uninvited."

"The greatest satisfaction comes from the fact that the children really like to come. Part of it may be novelty, but there is something more than that. For one thing, they are really interested in their own weights and in their progress."
